Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the reviews his Department initiated in the years (a) 1974–75, (b) 1979–80 and (c) 1992–93. [48513]

Mr. Fatchett [holding answer 6 July 1998]: According to the Official Report, the FCO initiated one review in financial year 1992–93. The subject of this review was how best to conduct relations between Whitehall and the Caribbean Dependent Territories, Official Report, column 311. For financial years 1974–75 and 1979–80 the Official Report is not held in a form that can be searched electronically. The cost of obtaining the information requested for those periods would therefore be disproportionate.

Asbestos

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what guidance his Department issues to those constructing buildings for which it is responsible on the use of materials containing asbestos. [52315]

Mr. Fatchett: For any construction projects in the UK we employ professional project managers who in turn would appoint planning supervisors under the CDM regulations. Their duty is to ensure that all guidance and legislation related to asbestos is brought to the attention of those working on the project and ensure compliance with all Health and Safety requirements.

For overseas building projects the FCO use contracts which specify performance standards which at a minimum must comply with British or EC building regulations (or local regulations where in those cases higher standards may apply).

Turkey

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the meeting of the Council of Ministers in May, what further developments were reported in respect of the release from prison of four Turkish parliamentarians. [52781]

Ms Quin: I will write to my hon. Friend shortly. We have repeatedly made it clear to the Turkish authorities that the conviction of elected politicians for the non-violent expression of their opinions can only damage Turkey's international standing.

Information Technology

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much his Department spent on IT, itemising (a) personal computers, (b) main-frame, (c) mini-computers and (d) file servers in the last year for which figure are available. [52877]

Mr. Fatchett: In 1997–98 this Department spent £21.1 million capital on IT equipment, including the first phase of a programme to supply industry-standard common software and hardware to all Posts overseas. Of this, £5.3 million was for purchase of personal computers; the balance was spent on set-up costs—including minor building works at Posts—software, cabling, peripheral equipment, and communications equipment. None was for purchase of main-frame, mini-computers or file servers.

Immigration

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many applications have been made at the British High Commission Visa Section in Dhaka for entry clearance by over-aged children who had previously been refused on the grounds of not being related as claimed but whose relationship has now been established by DNA testing since June 1989. [52715]

Mr. Fatchett: Figures for applications made by over-aged children under the 1989 concession at Dhaka are not readily available, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. No fresh applications have been made in recent years under the concession at any overseas Post.

India and Pakistan

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's relations with India and Pakistan since the nuclear tests conducted by both countries. [52730]

Mr. Fatchett [holding answer 28 July 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary gave to the hon. Member for Rochford and Southend, East (Sir T. Taylor) on 14 July 1998, Official Report, column 175. I subsequently met with Jaswant Singh on 28 July in the margins of the ASEAN post-ministerial conference in Manila.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Most missions meet their obligations. However, at 31 March 1998 the following owed over £10,000.00 for National Non-domestic Rates:

Weapons of Mass Destruction

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the extent to which the end-use control, relating to goods which may be used in connection with the development of weapons of mass destruction, applies to the supply of goods to destinations subject to binding UN arms embargoes. [54871]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Council Regulation (EC) No. 3381/94 and the Dual-Use and Related Goods (Export Control) Regulations 1996 prohibit the export from the UK to any destination of dual-use or other goods which the exporter has been informed by a competent authority are or may be intended, wholly or in part, or which the exporter knows are intended, wholly or in part, to be used in connection with the development, production, handling, operation, maintenance, storage, detection, identification or dissemination of chemical, biological or nuclear weapons or the development, production, maintenance or storage of missiles capable of delivering such weapons, and also where the exporter has grounds for suspecting that the goods might so be used. These provisions are known as the end-use control.

Under UK law, all binding UN embargoes are implemented by prohibiting the export of goods and technology on the Military List which forms part III of Schedule 1 to the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994, as amended.

In addition, the Orders in Council implementing in UK law the binding UN embargoes against Liberia, Somalia, Libya, Angola and Rwanda also prohibit the supply of persons in the UK or by UK nationals or companies overseas of goods which are or may be intended to be used in connection with the development, production, handling, operation, maintenance, storage, detection, identification or dissemination of chemical, biological or nuclear weapons or the development, production, maintenance or storage of missiles capable of delivering such weapons.

This statement supplements the information given in another place on the scope of arms embargoes observed by the UK by the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Baroness Chalker of Wallasey, on 20 March 1997, Official Report, House of Lords, columns 75–77; and by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Baroness Symons, on 28 January 1998, Official Report, House of Lords, columns 36–39. An updated version of the list of the Government's commitments regarding the application of strategic export controls, covering this point and other recent changes, has been laid in the Library.

Nuclear Disarmament

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his Department's policy towards the Irish Government's recent initiative on global nuclear disarmament known as The New Agenda Coalition; and if he will make a statement. [51680]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The "New Agenda" statement calls for a clear commitment from the Nuclear Weapon States to the speedy, final and total elimination of nuclear weapons. We have made clear our commitment to the global elimination of nuclear weapons. We have taken some important steps towards this goal in the Strategic Defence Review and elsewhere.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his policy on the South African Conference on Disarmament's proposal to establish an ad-hoc committee on nuclear disarmament; and if he will make a statement. [51681]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We are actively considering how best to follow up internationally the initiatives on nuclear disarmament set out in the Strategic Defence Review.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to report to the participatory nation states of the Conference on Disarmament on the conclusions of the Strategic Defence Review; and if he will make a statement. [51682]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The United Kingdom's Permanent Representative has today made a statement to the Conference on Disarmament's Plenary Session, the first such session since the announcement of the Strategic Defence Review.

Employees Over 60

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many (a) men and (b) women employed by (1) his Department and (2) his Department's agencies have contracts of employment which permit them to retire after their 60th birthday. [53054]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Letters of appointment for staff in the FCO state that 60 is the official retirement age.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many (a) men and (b) women aged over 60 years were employed by (i) his Department and (ii) his Department's agencies on 1 January. [53059]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: On 1 January 1998 the Foreign and Commonwealth Office employed 34 men and 16 women aged over 60.

The Wilton Park agency employed no staff over 60 years.

European Commission Documents

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received on the European Commission document "What exactly is Europe? A Classroom Guide to the European Union", published in November 1997. [53732]

Ms Quin: We have no record of any official representations on the European Commission document referred to by the hon. Member.

Legg Report

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what funds have been allocated to implement the recommendations in the Legg report. [53870]

Mr. Robin Cook: The outcome of the Comprehensive Spending Review will allow us to devote resources to implementing management and other changes within the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. This will include changes resulting from the recommendations of the Legg report, which are in line with our intentions to modernise the FCO.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the Legg report, if he will list the new instructions that will be given to those compiling and approving press lines. [53874]

Mr. Robin Cook: The News Department of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, which is responsible, in co-ordination with the specialist department concerned, for drawing up press lines, has taken full note of the lessons highlighted by the Legg report.

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to paragraph 3.20 of the Legg report, what action he proposes to take in respect of the oral statement made by the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the hon. Member for Manchester, Central (Mr. Lloyd), on 12 March 1998, Official Report, column 841. [53884]

Mr. Robin Cook: None.

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to paragraph 9.55 of the Legg report, what action he proposes to take in respect of his oral statement of 12 May 1998, Official Report, column 160, that the papers seen by the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the hon. Member for Manchester, Central (Mr. Lloyd), in mid-April gave rise to no grounds for apprehension or concern on the part of the Minister of State. [53880]

Mr. Robin Cook: Paragraph 9.55 of the Legg report states that the documents that went to the Minister of State were "misleading" and "substantially incomplete".

Paragraph 10.48 of the report states that the information that the Minister of State was given in mid-April

"indicated that this was being dealt with by officials. It told him that the FCO was not aware of a shipment of arms. He saw no need to take action."

I support his judgment at that time, based on the information that was available to him, and stand by my remarks to the House on 12 May.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) how many times his Ministers met Sir Thomas Legg whilst he was conducting his inquiry; and what was discussed on each occasion; [53789]

(2) how many times he met Sir Thomas Legg whilst he was conducting his inquiry; and what was discussed on each occasion. [53788]

Mr. Robin Cook: I met Sir Thomas Legg and Sir Robin Ibbs shortly after their appointment, on 26 May, to discuss the terms of reference of their investigation. They subsequently held one interview each with me and my hon. Friends the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the Member for Manchester, Central (Mr. Lloyd), and the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, to ask us questions about our involvement in the events they were investigating. These interviews took place on 1 July, 18 June and 29 June respectively.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list all those (a) who saw and (b) who were given a copy of the Legg report prior to its publication. [53793]

Mr. Robin Cook: No officials or Ministers were given a copy of the Legg report before it was presented to me on Friday 24 July, although those mentioned to any significant extent in the report were sent draft extracts referring to them, to allow them to comment.

After the report had been presented to me, and prior to my statement in the House on 27 July 1998, Official Report, columns 19–34, it was given a very limited distribution, on a confidential basis, to Ministers and senior officials, and I also allowed the two Opposition Foreign Affairs spokesmen and the Chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee to read it in the Foreign Office.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if copies of the Legg report were issued to journalists under an embargo prior to its official publication. [53794]

Mr. Robin Cook: No.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he first received the Legg report. [53787]

Mr. Robin Cook: The secretary to the Legg investigation presented the report to my office at 16.20 on Friday 24 July, and I saw it later that day.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the United Kingdom's financial contribution will be to the running costs of the International Criminal Court. [53888]

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs who will appoint (a) the prosecutor and (b) the judges of the International Criminal Court. [53889]

International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda

Arms Sales

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what mechanisms Her Majesty's Government uses to police the sale of arms by UK-based companies under circumstances where those arms do not touch United Kingdom soil. [53808]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The Import, Export and Customs Powers (Defence) Act 1939 gives the Government power to control only exports from and imports to the UK. As such, it does not allow the Government to impose controls on the involvement of persons in the UK or UK persons abroad in trafficking in goods between overseas countries or in brokering such deals. However, the Government do have the power to control trafficking and brokering under the United Nations Act 1946 where this is necessary to implement a binding UN decision, such as a binding UN arms embargo. The DTI White Paper on Strategic Export Controls (Cm 3989) contains a proposal to introduce a power so that the Government can also control the involvement of persons in the UK or UK persons abroad in trafficking and brokering in controlled goods to countries which are the subject of other types of embargo, such as those resulting from decisions of the EU, OSCE or the Government; in certain types of equipment, the export of which has been banned from the UK because of evidence that goods of the same type have been used in torture; and in missiles capable of a range of at least 300 km. The White Paper's proposals relating to weapons of mass destruction also cover trafficking and brokering.

The investigation and prosecution of any alleged breaches of UK legislation implementing UN embargoes or sanctions is a matter for the Commissioners of Customs and Excise.

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if it is his policy to enforce the Foreign Enlistment Act 1870. [53799]

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the combined capital value of the United Kingdom's diplomatic posts. [53290]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We take every appropriate opportunity to encourage States to sign and ratify the six core human rights texts of the United Nations including through bilateral contacts and in multilateral forums.

I regret that we would not be able to provide a more detailed response to the right hon. Member's questions without incurring disproportionate costs. I will however write to the right hon. Member inviting him to put any specific questions of concern.

Israel

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Israeli policy of house demolition in Jerusalem, the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. [53455]

Mr. Fatchett: House demolitions are a serious abuse of human rights wherever they occur. We and the EU carefully monitor Israeli demolitions of Palestinian homes and report these in a quarterly EU "Jerusalem Watch".

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many Palestinian houses in the occupied Palestinian territories have been demolished since the Oslo Accords of 1993. [53456]

Mr. Fatchett: Estimates vary between 671 (discounting demolitions of temporary dwellings; figures from a local NGO) and 2,004 (including temporary dwellings; figures from the Palestinian Ministry of Local Government). These figures include demolitions in East Jerusalem.

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations Her Majesty's Government have made to the Government of Israel on the demolition of Palestinian homes in the West Bank and Jerusalem. [53457]

Mr. Fatchett: We have made it clear to the Israeli Government on many occasions that we condemn any attempt to change the demographic balance of Jerusalem in advance of final status talks.

Security Surveillance Warrants

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what legal advice he receives before signing warrants authorising security surveillance; and from whom. [53825]

Mr. Robin Cook: The procedures involved in submitting warrants for approval were set out in paragraph 5 of the Interception of Communications Act Commissioner's report for 1996. This makes it clear that the Secretary of State considers applications, after scrutiny by senior officials, together with supporting documentation and the comments of advisers. This process incorporates in every case, advice from legal advisers of the appropriate agency.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many warrants authorising security surveillance he has signed since 1 May 1997. [53827]

Mr. Robin Cook: It has been the practice of successive Interception of Communications Act Commissioners not to publish the numbers of interception warrants issued by the Foreign Secretary, as they have taken the view that it would be against the public interest to do so. Similarly the Intelligence Services Act Commissioner has stated that he does not consider it in the public interest to disclose the numbers of warrants issued under Section 5 of the Interception of Communications Act 1994. The Government endorse the Commissioners' views.

Embassy Buildings

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will make it his policy not to dispose of (a) the whole and (b) part of the Paris (i) Embassy and (ii) Residence buildings; [53344]

(2) if he will make it his policy not to dispose of (a) the whole and (b) part of the Tokyo (i) Embassy and (ii) Residence buildings; [53347]

(3) if he will make it his policy not to dispose of (a) the whole and (b) part of the Bangkok (i) Embassy and (ii) Residence buildings; [53345]

(4) if he will make it his policy not to dispose of (a) the whole and (b) part of the Vienna (i) Embassy and (ii) Residence buildings. [53348]

Mr. Fatchett: Our policy is to ensure that all elements of the FCO estate provide value for money. For those which do not, disposal is one option; we shall also be considering how to make better, and more intensive, use of those properties we retain.

Diplomatic Exchanges (Publication)

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish the summaries of the telegrams provided to members of the Foreign Affairs Committee. [53795]

Mr. Robin Cook: I have no plans to publish the summaries. I believe that publication of diplomatic exchanges will do cumulative damage to the frankness of the reports our High Commissioners and Ambassadors send, and the willingness of other governments to talk to them on a confidential basis.

Desk Officers

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the desk officers in his Department, indicating the countries for which they are responsible. [53792]

Mr. Fatchett: For security reasons, it is not possible to provide the information requested. General information on members of the Diplomatic Service at Posts overseas and in London is contained in Her Majesty's Diplomatic Service List, a copy of which is in the Library.

Sierra Leone

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the (a) costs and (b) nature of assistance currently being given by the Government to Sierra Leone. [53872]

Mr. Foulkes: I have been asked to reply.

Assistance currently being provided to Sierra Leone by the United Kingdom Government comprises:

Contribution to the UN Trust Fund for Peace Enforcement in Sierra Leone: £2,000,000 from the FCO

Emergency Demobilisation Project providing humanitarian assistance to ex-combatants: £2,000,000 from Department for International Development

Contribution to the work of the Commonwealth Police Development Team: £800,000 from DFID

Three senior advisers to Government of Sierra Leone: £250,000 from DFID

Support to the establishment of an independent radio station: £120,000 from DFID

Civil Service Support Project: Campaign for Good Governance: £101,000 from DFID

Contribution to Government of Sierra Leone's two year National Programme for Disarmament, Demobilisation and Reintegration: £6,500,000 from DFID.

Land Mines

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the Government's policy on classifying the use of land mines as a war crime. [49673]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 9 July 1998]: I have been asked to reply.

Until such time as the use of Anti-Personnel mines become subject to a comprehensive prohibition under international law, it cannot be classified as a war crime. This is not a matter of policy but what is currently possible under international law.

The abhorrence with which the Government view the use of Anti-Personnel land mines should be in no doubt to anyone. This is reflected by the Government's introduction of domestic legislation to fulfill our obligations under the Ottawa Convention. We shall continue to encourage as many countries as possible to sign and ratify the Ottawa Convention.

Regulation Reform

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the section "Reforming Regulation" in his Department's document "UK Presidency of the EU Half Way Mark", if he will place in the Library the progress report; and if he will make a statement on the proposals agreed at Cardiff. [53781]

Dr. John Cunningham: I have been asked to reply as Cabinet Minister with responsibility for better EU regulation.

The European Commission's report "Legislate less to act better: the facts" (COM(98)345) was presented to the European Council at Cardiff on 15 June 1998.

The report and an accompanying Explanatory Memorandum (9319/98) were submitted to Parliament by the Cabinet Office on Friday, 26 June 1998.

I am delighted that better regulation featured prominently in the Cardiff European Council's conclusions. This shows the degree to which the UK has successfully taken the debate forward during its Presidency. Specifically, the European Council:

highlighted the importance of better regulation and subsidiarity, calling on the EU institutions and the Member States to work together to observe these principles;

asked the Commission to co-ordinate the sharing of best regulatory practice between Member States; invited the Commission to press ahead with its Simpler Legislation for the Internal Market (SLIM) initiative to simplify and improve Single Market rules; welcomed the Commission's establishment of a pilot test panel of businesses to improve consultation on new regulatory proposals; encouraged the Commission to develop its business impact assessment system (fiche d'impact); and invited the Commission to draw up a timetable for action, in the light of the recommendations in the report of the Business Environment Simplification Task Force (BEST)—also presented to the Cardiff European Council—to assess the extent to which current EU and Member States' policies encourage entrepreneurship.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many advisers are currently employed by each local education authority in Wales. [53196]

Mr. Hain: Information on the numbers of advisers currently employed by local education authorities in Wales is not held centrally.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total cost for each local education authority of employing advisers in the last year for which figures are available. [53193]

Mr. Hain: The cost of employing advisers for each local education authority is not collected separately. The information collected from local education authorities on costs attributed to inspection and advice is given in the following table.

Departmental Research

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the cost of all research undertaken by his Department since May 1997, excluding the cost of green papers and other public consultation documents drafted by his officials; and if he will list in each case the organisations which undertook that research. [52710]

Mr. Ron Davies [holding answer 29 July 1998]: The term research covers a wide range of activities from scientific and engineering research through to consultancies and public opinion surveys. The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Welsh Development Agency

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to make changes to the membership of the Welsh Development Agency prior to the establishment of the National Assembly. [53370]

Mr. Hain: Advertisements for the Board of the new Welsh Development Agency (WDA) have been placed and the process of selection is ongoing in line with the guidance from the Commissioner of Public Appointments. The appointments will take effect from the date of the merger of the WDA with the Development Board for Rural Wales (DBRW) and the Land Authority for Wales (LAW) this autumn.

Persistent Inquirers

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which of his Department's agencies have procedures to identify persistent inquirers for information. [53946]

Mr. Ron Davies: Cadw: Welsh Historic Monuments is the only solely owned executive agency of the Welsh Office. It has no procedures to identify persistent inquiries for information.

Welsh Assembly

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what arrangements he is making to appoint the Standing Orders Commission for the National Assembly; and if he will make a statement. [54930]

Mr. Ron Davies: The Commissioners will be appointed under the provisions of the Government of Wales Bill. I hope to be able to announce the names of the Commissioners shortly.

The Commissioners' role is to prepare the draft of the first standing orders of the Assembly, which will then be made, with or without modification, by the Secretary of State.

The recruitment of the Commissioners has been by open competition, in accordance with the current principles of public appointments. The Bill provides that there will be between 5 and 9 Commissioners. We expect that members will work 4 days a month and be paid £167.32 a day. The chairman will be paid £227.54 a day.

The Bill empowers the Secretary of State to issue guidance to the Commissioners on the content and form of the standing orders. The core of the guidance I intend to give will be based on the report of the National Assembly Advisory Group, which I expect to be published during August. The Advisory Group includes members nominated by all the main political parties, as well as members representative of a wide range of interests. It has already made considerable progress, through its discussions and public consultations, in building political consensus about the way the Assembly should operate—a task which the White Paper "A Voice for Wales" envisaged would fall to the Commissioners. This will enable the Commissioners to be rather more expert and technical than was originally envisaged. I shall want a balance of talents among the Commissioners, but it will not contain members nominated by the political parties.

There will be a continuing need to seek political consensus about issues other than the standing orders which will affect the way the Assembly will operate. These could include matters such as the opening ceremony and information support for Members. For this task I intend to establish an Assembly Preparations Group. This Group will include some members nominated by the political parties, as well as some former members of the National Assembly Advisory Group. I am consulting the leaders of the main political parties in Wales about the membership of this group, and about other matters relevant to the Assembly, in order to ensure that we continue to develop the arrangements for the Assembly in an inclusive spirit, seeking consensus where we can.

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what advice he proposes to submit to Her Majesty in Council on the use to be made of the order-making power in clause 12(1)(b) of the Government of Wales Bill. [54931]

Mr. Ron Davies: Clause 12(1)(b) enables Her Majesty in Council to designated public offices the holding of which would disqualify individuals from membership of the National Assembly for Wales. A draft of an Order in Council made under clause 12(1)(b) requires approval by each House of Parliament before it can be made. I shall shortly be publishing a consultation document inviting views about the advice I should submit to Her Majesty on the content of an Order in Council under clause 12; the paper will make detailed proposals about disqualification of members and staff of a range of executive non-departmental and health bodies, the holders of certain offices, and those who hold politically restricted posts in local government. I will place a copy of the consultation paper in the Library. Responses to the consultation paper will be requested by 2 October 1998.

Mr. Rhodri Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the appointments procedure for senior posts in the National Assembly; if he will list the membership of the appointing panels, indicating external assessors and grades of civil servants; and if he will make a statement. [53607]

Mr. Ron Davies: The Government of Wales Bill provides that staff of the National Assembly for Wales will be members of the Home Civil Service. The appointments procedures for senior posts in the National Assembly will, therefore, generally mirror those for the rest of the unified Civil Service. The precise way in which they will apply is being considered.

Mr. Ron Davies: The information requested is as follows:

(a) Agricultural Advisory Panel for Wales; Staff Commission for Wales; and the Welsh Council for Post Graduate Medical and Dental Education;

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if paragraph 69 of Fair Funding: Improving Delegation to Schools gives local education authorities the power to compel schools with surpluses to participate in loan schemes. [53893]

Mr. Hain: No. The terms of any loans scheme operated for schools will depend on the financial controls in the schemes that LEAs are required to prepare under section 48 of the School Standards and Framework Act 1998. These schemes are subject to the Secretary of State's approval.

Local Government Boundary Commission

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on how many occasions since 1968 the Secretary of State for Wales has used his powers to delay the implementation of the proposals of the Local Government Boundaries Commission. [53892]

Mr. Ron Davies: I do not have any powers to delay the implementation of the proposals of the Local Government Boundary Commission.

Section 58(2) of the Local Government Act 1972 enables the Secretary of State, if he thinks fit, to give effect to the Commission's proposals following the review of an area, either as submitted or in a modified form.

Mr. Ron Davies: Brewers have won six planning appeals in Wales since April 1996.

The Vale of Glamorgan Council lost an appeal by Bass Taverns Ltd. (trading as Harvesters Restaurants) on 15 January 1997 for the display of an internally lit double-sided freestanding pole sign and the Schooner Inn, Penarth.

Overseas Visits

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list those who have accompanied (i) him and (ii) his departmental Ministers on overseas visits since 1 January indicating (a) the venue of the visit, (b) the purpose of the visit, (c) the names of those involved, (d) the job of those involved, (e) the reasons why they were included in the visit and (f) the cost to public funds. [53847]

Mr. Ron Davies: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and place a copy of my reply in the Library of the house.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Carpet Manufacturing Industry

Mr. Alexander: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations she has received on the export prospects in the United Kingdom carpet manufacturing industry. [48491]

Mr. Battle: No representations have been received about export prospects for the United Kingdom carpet manufacturing industry. DTI officials are in close contact with the British Carpet Manufacturers Association and individual companies about the development of initiatives to improve the competitiveness of the UK carpet industry.

Dounreay

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action she will take to ensure that all missing highly enriched uranium on the Dounreay site is identified and retrieved or made safe; and if she will make a statement. [48930]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 6 July 1998]: The UKAEA's document 'The Dounreay Shaft Inventory' identified an amount of 170kg of uranium as "material unaccounted for" (MUF). As explained on 27 July 1998, Official Report, columns 46–47, it is wrong to suggest that this figure must correspond to an amount of material that is physically missing. We have asked the DTI's Safeguards Office to study the nuclear material accountancy issues raised by the UKAEA document. We shall make public the conclusions of that study.

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade on what date she was first notified of the application to dispose of radioactive material from the Brent Spar at Dounreay. [50877]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 20 July 1998]: I do not receive applications for disposal of radioactive material. This is a matter for the independent regulator, the Scottish Environment Protection Agency (SEPA).

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list all applications or agreements made since May 1997 for (a) disposal and (b) storage of radioactive material at Dounreay; and if she will indicate (i) the source and (ii) the amount of waste in each case. [50876]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 20 July 1998]: I do not receive applications for disposal and storage of radioactive material. These are matters, initially, for the independent regulators, the Scottish Environment Protection Agency, and the Nuclear Installations Inspectorate of the Health & Safety Executive.

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the facilities which are available at Dounreay for the storage of treated radioactive material from the Brent Spar; and if additional storage pits will be required for the treated material. [50879]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 20 July 1998]: This is an operational matter for UKAEA. I have therefore written to the Chairman of the UKAEA requesting him to prepare this information, and his reply will be placed in the Library of the House.

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps she has taken to satisfy herself that Dounreay is a suitable site for the disposal and storage of radioactive materials from the Brent Spar. [50878]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 20 July 1998]: Storage and disposal of radioactive material at Dounreay is subject to independent regulation by the Nuclear Installations Inspectorate (NII) and the Scottish Environment Protection Agency (SEPA).

Eritrea (Exports)

Ann Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many applications for licences for the export of (a) paramilitary, (b) security and (c) police equipment to Eritrea have been (i) granted, (ii) refused and (iii) revoked, (1) between February 1995 and May 1997 inclusive and (2) since May 1997; and what was the export licence category in each case. [50583]

Mrs. Roche: The Export Control Organisation's computer databases have been interrogated and the following results were obtained. Between 1 February 1995 and 1 May 1997, three Standard Individual Export Licences (SIELs) were issued covering the export to consignees or endusers in Eritrea of goods subject to export control by being listed in Part III of Schedule 1 to the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994, the so-called Military List. Between 2 May 1997 and 19 June 1998, six Standard Individual Export Licences were issued covering such exports. No Open Individual Export Licences were issued in either period covering such exports; and no SIELs or OIELs covering such exports were revoked and no applications for SIELs or OIELs covering such exports were refused.

The entry in the relevant legislation under which the export of goods is controlled is known as their rating. Individual licences may cover a range of goods with various ratings. Where this is so, the licence is included in the Table in the total for all of the relevant ratings.

Standard Individual Export Licences issued between 1 February 1995 and 1 May 1997 covering the export to Eritrea of goods on the Military List

	Rating
	ML3	ML10	ML22
Number issued between 1 February 1995 and 1 May 1997 covering goods with this rating	1	2	0
Number issued between 2 May 1997 and 19 June 1998 covering goods with this rating	0	4	2

This information does not cover any Media OIELs that may have been issued during this period. Media OIELs authorise the export to all destinations of protective clothing, mainly for the protection of aid agency workers and journalists, when working in areas of conflict.

This information should be considered in light of my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Don Valley (Caroline Flint) on 30 October 1997, Official Report, columns 870–71.

In addition, goods on the Military List may have been exported to Eritrea under certain Open General Export Licences; copies of all Open General Export Licences valid at any time during the period are in the Library of the House.

It is not possible to break down these data in the manner requested as the equipment covered by many entries in the Military List could be used by military, paramilitary or police end-users.

Motor Dealers

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what action she has undertaken since 1 May 1997 to improve consumer protection in respect of the sale of used cars; [51204]

(2) what plans she has to extend the powers of trading standards officers to enable them to carry out forecourt inspections of motor dealers. [51205]

Dr. Howells: In response to the Director General of Fair Trading's report on selling second-hand cars, I shall shortly issue guidance to clarify the powers which we believe Trading Standards officers already have under the General Product Safety Regulations 1994 to enable them to carry out garage forecourt inspections of motor vehicles offered for sale.

In addition, the Department is commissioning research on the current law on the use of mileage information disclaimers and how it is being interpreted, prior to consideration of further action. It has also indicated its support for consideration to be given by the Director General of Fair Trading of the extent to which indiscriminate use of mileage information disclaimers could be cited as an unfair business practice in the context of licensing action under the Consumer Credit Act 1974.

The Advertising Standards Authority has been contacted to establish whether it could act under its own powers against advertisements offering mileage correction/ alteration services. The Department is also in consultation with the Department of the Environment, Transport, and the Regions regarding those recommendations in the Director General's report which come within its responsibilities.

The Office of Fair Trading recently published a booklet on how to get the best deal when buying a used car. This includes information for consumers about what to do if things go wrong. The Department has also recently published a more general consumer information leaflet on unsatisfactory goods and consumer rights which covers issues such as sale-of-goods rights, manufacturers' guarantees and extended warranties.

Designer Goods

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will initiate an investigation of selective distribution in the designer goods sector. [51216]

Dr. Howells: As announced to Parliament during the passage of the Competition Bill, the Department will consult on the approach to dealing with vertical agreements, which include selective distribution, in preparation for the commencement of the new legislation.

Any specific complaints about a supplier refusing to supply a retailer because of that retailer's pricing practices, should be directed to the Director General of Fair Trading, who will investigate.

Mr. Chope: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action she is taking to prevent foreign manufacturers from setting the prices that British consumers have to pay for designer goods. [51664]

Mr. Ian McCartney [holding answer 21 July 1998]: The prices paid by consumers for designer goods are set by the manufacturer, distributor, or retailer. The judgment in Silhouette concerns the extent to which, under the terms of a European Community Directive approximating the laws of Member States relating to trade marks, the holder of a registered trade mark may prevent the import into the Community of goods bearing that trade mark where the goods have already been marketed with the consent of the holder of the mark in the Community. The judgment in Silhouette confirms that the holder of a mark has no powers to prevent the import into, for example, the United Kingdom, of goods bearing the trade mark where those goods come from another Member State in the Community. The European Commission has commissioned a study into whether this principle should be extended to cover goods that have been put on the market anywhere in the world and, once the results of the study are available, the Government will consider with other Community Member States what action should be taken, including the possibility of a change in the law. In the meantime, manufacturers remain subject to European and domestic laws governing competition and the supply of goods.

Mr. Chope: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations she made to the European Court and to the European Commission on behalf of British consumers prior to the ECJ ruling in the Silhouette case. [51666]

Mr. Ian McCartney [holding answer 21 July 1998]: The previous government submitted written observations to the European Court of Justice in February 1997. These observations confirmed that, as a matter of law, the 1989 European Community Directive on trade marks gave brand owners no power to prevent the import of trade-marked goods once they had been put on the market with their consent anywhere in the Community, but did give them power to prevent the import of goods put on the market with their consent elsewhere in the world.

Mr. Chope: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action she is going to take in response to the ruling of the European Court of Justice in the Silhouette case on the pricing and distribution of designer goods; and if she will make a statement. [51663]

Mr. Ian McCartney [holding answer 21 July 1998]: The Government will consider with other Member States of the European Community, in the light of this ruling and of a study being mounted by the European Commission, what changes in the law are desirable in the interests of British consumers and manufacturers.

Mr. Chope: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the options available to British retailers and consumers in response to the rules of the ECJ in the Silhouette case. [51665]

Mr. Ian McCartney [holding answer 21 July 1998]: The ruling of the European Court of Justice on the Silhouette case confirms the view of the Government's own legal advisers on the interpretation of the European Community Directive on trade marks which was implemented by the Trade Marks Act 1994, both of which were adopted and enacted by the previous government. The Government will consider with other Member States of the European Community in the light of this ruling, and of a study being mounted by the European Commission, what changes in the law are desirable having regard to the interests of British consumers and manufacturers.

In the meantime, British retailers should abide by the law as it stands at present.

Mr. Chope: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she was informed that the European Court of Justice was to make the ruling which it has made in the Silhouette case. [51662]

Mr. Ian McCartney [holding answer 21 July 1998]: The ruling of the European Court of Justice on the Silhouette case was delivered on 16 July 1998. The Government were aware from 24 June 1998 that the judgment would be delivered on that date.

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the top 10 companies in receipt of export credit guarantees for the financial years 1995–96 and 1996–97 indicating the amount of cover given to each company for each year. [51414]

Mrs. Roche: ECGD have identified the following firms as the top ten main contractors under export credit guarantees which it issued in these years:

1 British Aerospace	1 British Aerospace

For reasons of commercial confidentiality ECGD is unable to provide details of the amount of cover given to each company.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list for each NFFO round the types of generation which were awarded contracts and the number of plants (a) awarded contracts and (b) currently generating in each band. [51769]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 21 July 1998]: The following schedule lists the numbers of contracted projects, and of these the number of operating projects, by technology band for NFFOs 1–4, as at 31 March 1998.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which projects which have secured NFFO contracts are currently receiving EU THERMIE support; and in each case for what amounts. [51770]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 21 July 1998]: The following THERMIE projects are also contracted to generate electricity under the NFFO:

Milk Marketing

Mr. Paice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she expects to receive the Monopolies and Mergers Commssion's report on milk marketing. [52453]

Dr. Howells: The Monopolies and Mergers Commission is due to deliver its report, on the supply of raw milk in Great Britain, to the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry by 26 October 1998.

Optical Fibre Communications

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps she is taking to introduce and improve accessibility within the United Kingdom to modern broad band optical fibre communications; and if she will make a statement. [52326]

Mrs. Roche: The Government set out their strategy in this area in the policy statements 'Our Information Age' and 'Broadband Britain' which were published in April. The latter dealt specifically with the issue of lifting the broadcast restrictions from BT and other Public Telecommunications Operators. On this issue and in our Information Age strategy, more generally, we are committed to encouraging investment in both advanced communications infrastructure and new services, and ensuring widespread access to services at affordable prices. To ensure that we keep pace with these issues, we have also launched a Green Paper reviewing the regulatory framework for telecommunications and broadcasting in response to digital convergence. I also expect, later this year, to launch a consultation on the use of significant additional radio spectrum for the delivery of broadband services, which will help address those areas of the country currently with limited competitive provision. Uptake and use are just as important as provision of broadband. We promote this through our Information Society Initiative programme for Business, which now has sixty regional and local Support Centres. I have also relaunched the IT for All programme with £2.75 million of additional money, and there are now 2,700 access sites across the country.

Exporters

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps she has taken to assist United Kingdom exporters in respect of problems faced as a result of current levels of sterling. [52634]

Mrs. Roche: Our overseas trade services are geared towards helping firms export, independent of the strength of sterling.

Following the Export Forum's report last November, these services are being improved and extended. A National Exporters Database was launched on 1 July and a new Export Sales Leads Service will be introduced on 1 September. A new, simpler, system of Support for Exhibitions and Seminars abroad will apply to events opening after 1 April 1999. New programmes of activity in some of the target markets identified by the Export Forum have already been announced, including the Export Explorer for Western Europe. New programmes in the remaining target markets will be announced throughout the year.

Household Furniture

Mr. Fearn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to review the regulations covering the fire-resistance of materials used in the manufacture of household furniture. [52377]

Dr. Howells: My Department is currently considering representations in favour of some minor modifications to the Furniture & Furnishings (Fire) (Safety) Regulations 1988, but there are at present no plans for a major revision of these Regulations.

Information Technology

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much her Department spent on IT, itemising (a) personal computers, (b) main-frame, (c) mini-computers and (d) file servers in the last year for which figures are available. [52881]

Dr. Howells: The last year for which figures are available is the 1997/98 financial year. The figures are inclusive of purchases that have been made on behalf of the Government Offices, the Insolvency Service, and the Employment Tribunal Service. However, no account is taken of purchases by other Executive Agencies, which manage their own budgets and for which no central record of purchasing is maintained.

In 1997/98 the Department spent £8,318,000 on IT Technology. Of this, £5,037,000 was spent on PCs and £414,000 was spent on file servers. There were no purchases of mainframes or mini-computers. All figures are exclusive of VAT.

Package Holidays

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will assess the implications for a competitive market of recent mergers among package holiday providers. [52873]

Dr. Howells: The Director General of Fair Trading advises on mergers which qualify for investigation under the Fair Trading Act 1973. Where a merger raises concerns in respect of a particular market, it can be referred to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission (MMC) for investigation.

Stagecoach

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to the answer of 25 June 1998, Official Report, column 563, from the Under-Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, the hon. Member for Hampstead and Highgate (Ms Jackson), if she will make a statement on the acquisition by Stagecoach of a shareholding in Virgin Rail. [52874]

Dr. Howells: The proposed acquisition by Stagecoach of 49 per cent. of Virgin Rail Group qualifies for consideration under the Fair Trading Act 1973. In the first instance, therefore, it is for the Director General of Fair Trading (DGFT) to consider the proposed acquisition.

My right hon. Friend,the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry will decide in the light of the DGFT's advice whether or not to refer the proposed acquisition to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission for investigation and report.

Grey Cloth

Mr. Dawson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action she is taking to oppose measures taken by the European Commission to impose duties on grey cloth imported from countries outside the European Union. [52477]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 27 July 1998]: The provisional anti-dumping duties imposed by the European Commission on greycloth imported from six third countries will remain in force for six months from 10 April. We continue to be firmly opposed to these duties, which are damaging to the UK and EU textile industries and to UK and EU consumers.

We will do all we can to ensure that the Council of Ministers does not adopt any proposal by the Commission for a Council Regulation to impose definitive measures, which would last for five years.

Indonesia

Ann Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many export licences have been issued in each year since 1996 for exports to Indonesia by Alvis plc, indicating in each case the ML or PL list number of the equipment covered. [52754]

Mrs. Roche: I will write to my hon. Friend as soon as possible and place a copy of that letter in the Library of the House.

Foresight Programme

Mr. Cotter: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the current participation level of small medium-sized enterprises in the Foresight Programme. [52910]

Mrs. Roche: People with a small business background sit on a number of Foresight panels. SMEs are also active participants in projects giving effect to Foresight priorities, eg SMEs account for over half the companies participating in the nineteen new LINK programmes launched since 1995 in response to Foresight.

There is a need, however, to make outputs from Foresight more accessible to SMEs. A number of initiatives have been taken for this purpose, most recently the development and publication earlier this month of Future Markets—Future Business, a guide for business intermediaries designed to enable SMEs to benefit from Foresight, which has been widely piloted among SMEs. A number of Foresight panels are also working closely with trade associations in tailoring the results of Foresight to SMEs.

Exchange Rates

Mr. Cotter: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations her Department has received from small and medium sized businesses on the current level of the pound. [52902]

Mrs. Roche: I appreciate the very real concern that small and medium sized manufacturers and exporters have expressed about the level of the pound. The most important thing that Government can do to help small and medium sized firms to thrive is to deliver a stable economic environment—with sustained growth, low inflation and sound public finances. This is the best path to achieving the Government's aim of a stable and competitive pound over the medium term.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Cotter: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what extra provision of funds will be allocated to her Department following the Comprehensive Spending Review to address the millennium computer compliance problem. [52905]

Mr. Battle: An extra £17 million of funding for Action 2000 was announced on 30 March 1998, Official Report, column 384. The Comprehensive Spending Review, which set the Department's overall budgets for the years 1999–2002, did not provide any additional funding earmarked specifically to address particular programmes: this is one of the many issues which the Department will need to bear in mind in allocating its overall budget for work, including any on millennium compliance, for these future years.

Mr. Cotter: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to her answer of 24 June 1997, Official Report, columns 448–49, how many information packs on the Year 2000 problem have been circulated to small businesses to date. [53086]

Mrs. Roche: More than 70,000 copies of Action 2000's information pack were distributed up to the time of the launch on 15 July of its current media campaign. Since that date, demand for the updated information pack has been at the rate of 300 per day which is expected to increase following the national press advertising campaign by Action 2000 which started on 26 July. To date some 4,000 copies of the new information pack have been issued.

Mr. Cotter: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what research her Department has evaluated on the number of computer programmers available to combat the millennium compliance problem. [52906]

Mrs. Roche: Regular monitoring of the labour market for IT specialists is carried out by the Department for Education and Employment. However, it is not possible to say how many are available to work on millennium compliance at any one time because of competing demands for their services.

Mr. Cotter: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what role Business Links will play in respect of combating the millennium compliance problem. [52908]

Mrs. Roche: Business Links are working with Action 2000 to ensure that, nationally, messages are co-ordinated and that they have the appropriate tools and materials to help their local small and medium sized businesses.

Business Links are already working with these businesses to raise awareness and improve understanding of the Year 2000 problem. They offer advice and signposting to a range of locally or regionally co-ordinated programmes. These programmes help businesses to identify where they may have problems, what actions they need to take to address them, and how to prioritise these actions.

Single Currency

Mr. Cotter: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps her Department are taking to help small and medium-sized enterprises prepare for the introduction of the single currency. [53092]

Mrs. Roche: DTI Ministers have taken part in a range of events to help business prepare for the single currency.

The Euro Preparations Unit (EPU) has been set up in Her Majesty's Treasury to raise awareness of the implication of EMU for UK businesses, and to help them prepare for the strategic and practical changes that will come with the introduction of the single currency on 1 January 1999. The Unit contains secondees from the DTI and from the private sector, in addition to Treasury staff. The Unit published its first full report on preparation in the UK 'Getting Ready for the Euro' earlier this month.

DTI officials will continue to work closely with the EPU to ensure that the many business contacts that the Department has are used to best effect. For instance, twelve new regional forums, led by local business representatives with the involvement (in England) of the Government Offices for the Regions, have been set up specifically to help small and medium-sized businesses prepare for the Euro.

Business Links

Mr. Cotter: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps her Department is taking to help Business Links provide the comprehensive business information relating to trading conditions and economic circumstances required for exporting to EU countries. [52909]

Mrs. Roche: The Department's Business in Europe desk provides information for Business Links and companies about EU and EFTA markets, and the new Export Explorer scheme helps Business Links to introduce local firms to business opportunities in European markets.

Rigs (Decommissioning)

Mr. Boswell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimate she has made of the number of rigs and other major installations currently operating in the United Kingdom Continental Shelf which are likely to be retired within the next five years; what is the cost of the decommissioning; what extra cost will be entailed by a requirement that their top sides be dismantled onshore; and if she will make a statement on the United Kingdom's policy on these matters following the OSPAR meeting. [52344]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 27 July 1998]: The likely date for decommissioning each offshore installations on the UK Continental Shelf (UKCS) will depend on a number of considerations. However, current estimates indicate that up to fourteen fixed steel installations located on the UKCS could reach the end of their useful lives within the next five years. The cost of decommissioning these installations is likely to be up to £1 billion.

The future regime to be applied to the disposal of offshore installations at sea was agreed at the Oslo and Paris Commission (OSPAR) ministerial meeting on 23 July. Ministers agreed a ban on dumping installations at sea. The Government's part in this agreement demonstrates that we hold the environment at the core of our decision making. All the small steel structures, all topsides, and the great majority of each and every large steel installation will be brought ashore.

Derogations from the ban are possible for the leaving in place of footings of installations which weigh more than 10,000 tonnes. Decisions about the footings of such installations will be made on a case-by-case basis following the internationally agreed rules for assessment and consultation. The presumption will be for removal wherever this is safe and practicable. Heavy concrete structures may also be left in place, if after assessment and consultation, it is agreed that land disposal is neither safe nor practicable.

For some time there has been a presumption that the topsides of all UKCS offshore installations would be removed. They will be re-used, dismantled for recycling or disposed of onshore.

Motor Industry

Mr. Prior: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the impact of the Transport White Paper on employment in the motor industry. [53186]

Mr. Battle: The Transport White Paper sets out a framework for transport policy for the future. The aim of the White Paper is not to restrict ownership of vehicles, but to create policies which give people more choice to create better alternatives bearing in mind the social and environmental impact.

If, as a result of the White Paper, specific policies are introduced either at national or local level, we will as a matter of course consult with industry to determine the likely impact of such policies.

Mr. Prior: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many jobs in Britain are accounted for by the distribution of cars. [53183]

Mr. Battle: The Office for National Statistics estimates that in March 1998 there were 312,300 employee jobs in Great Britain accounted for by units whose principal activity was the sale of motor vehicles, motorcycles, and parts. More detail is available from the 1996 annual Employment Survey; of the corresponding September 1996 figure of 323,000, sales of motor vehicles alone accounted for 215,600 employee jobs. Figures for distribution of cars alone are not available.

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 29 July 1998]: The Government will be consulting representatives of business and trades' unions, as well as a number of non-governmental organisations that have expressed an interest in the review. We anticipate that a first discussion of the substantive issues will take place in November, and we will be inviting comments to meet this timetable.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what powers his Department has to act against British multinational enterprises in violation of the OECD guidelines for multinational enterprises. [53024]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 29 July 1998]: The Guidelines are a voluntary set of principles for multinational enterprise behaviour. The National Contact Point on the Guidelines, which resides in this Department, has the role of handling enquiries and carrying out discussions on all matters related to the Guidelines. Where there is concern about the application of the Guidelines by an enterprise, the National Contact Point, following an approach from an interested party, will contact the enterprise to try to resolve the issue. This provides the opportunity for the National Contact Point to draw the attention of the enterprise to the Guidelines and make clear the importance that the Government attach to them.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what make of computer has been provided by his Department to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, South (Mr. Griffiths); and how much it cost. [52861]

Mrs. Roche: The work of the Government in informing and educating businesses about the introduction of the euro is being led by the Euro Preparations Unit (EPU) in HM Treasury. To meet this objective, the EPU has received Summer Supplementary Estimate provision of £7.5 million to help raise awareness during 1998–99. No expenditure has been authorised beyond this.

The Department of Trade and Industry supports the work of the EPU by promoting greater awareness of the introduction of the euro, particularly among small and medium-sized enterprises, through its many contacts with business. A small unit has been established to co-ordinate this work.

Diesel

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the effect on imports of diesel fuel of the introduction of regulations on ultra-low sulphur diesel. [53562]

Mr. Battle: Some increases in the imports of ultra-low sulphur diesel fuel are expected in the short-term while UK producers are modifying plant to increase indigenous production of this fuel.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when regulations governing the introduction of ultra-low sulphur diesel fuel will come into operation. [53560]

Mr. Battle: All diesel fuel has to meet the specifications set out in the Motor Fuels (Composition and Content) Regulations 1994. Ultra-low sulphur diesel fuel has, in addition, to meet the requirements specified in the March 1998 Budget which are included in the current Finance Bill. There are no plans to introduce further regulations.

Assisted Areas

Mr. Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if the Government will carry out a review of the assisted areas of Great Britain. [54880]

Mrs. Roche: Following the publication of new European Commission rules on regional aid earlier this year all Member States of the EU are required to revise their Assisted Areas maps by 1 January 2000. The guidelines will mean a reduction in the areas eligible for regional industrial assistance.

The Government intend, therefore, to carry out a review of the Assisted Areas map.

We are committed to listening to local views and careful consideration will be given to all areas in the review. We will be assessing the relative needs of different areas across the whole of Great Britain in consultation with all those who have an interest.

I am launching today a three month period of public consultation on the criteria and geographical units which should be used in drawing up the new map. I have placed copies of the consultation document for the review in the Library of the House and the Vote Office and copies are also available from my Department, the Government Offices in England, and the Scottish and Welsh Offices.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the nuclear facilities within his Department's responsibility which are currently (a) under international safeguards and (b) not subject to international safeguards. [51678]

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Official Entertainment

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what sums (a) he and (b) the Lord Chancellor have spent on official entertaining since 1 May 1997. [49877]

Mr. Hoon: Since 1 May 1997 I have spent £814.33 on official entertainment. The Lord Chancellor has spent £20,964. This sum includes £10,638.94 for the Lord Chancellor's Breakfast, an annual event hosted by the Lord Chancellor as head of the judiciary and attended last year by 830 people, as well as a number of other events including a dinner for foreign judges to mark the Opening of the Legal Year; and a dinner in honour of the Chief Justice of Hong Kong.

Power of Attorney

Mr. Todd: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment he has made of the obligations to maintain accounts and other disclosures required of attorneys who have been granted enduring power of attorney. [53900]

Mr. Hoon: The Public Trust office acts as registration authority for Enduring Powers of Attorney (EPAs) under the Enduring Powers of Attorney Act 1985.

Arrangements for keeping accounts of an Attorney's dealings under an unregistered EPA would be for the Donor and the Attorney to decide, since an Attorney can act under an unregistered EPA only while the Donor maintains his mental capacity, and wishes the Attorney to act for him. When the Attorney believes that the Donor is or is becoming mentally incapable, he has a duty to apply to the Court of Protection to register the EPA. It is presumed therefore that this question refers to registered EPAs.

The Attorney has a duty under common law to keep accounts of his transactions involving the Donor's money. However, the Act does not require any routine checks on an Attorney's dealings with a Donor's estate. Nor does the Attorney have to prepare accounts in a special form.

The Law Commission, who first proposed the legislation in their Report of 1983 (Law Com No. 122, The Incapacitated Principal), recognised that to impose requirements to keep accounts would be not only a burden on the Attorney but also an expensive charge on the Donor's estate. The matter is thus left to the Court's discretion.

Under section 8(2) of the Act the Court may call for accounts to be submitted regularly at the time of registration, if the circumstances of the individual case require it. It may also call for accounts to be submitted after registration, if it has reason to inquire into an Attorney's dealings.

The Attorney has a duty of confidentiality to the Donor and there are no "other disclosures" required of him.

In 1995 the Law Commission produced a report called Mental Incapacity (Law Com No. 231) as part of their programme of law reform. The Report covers a wide field, including EPAs. It recommends that a new form of Power of Attorney, to be called a "Continuing Power of Attorney", should be introduced, which would enable an Attorney to deal with the Donor's personal and health care matters as well as his financial affairs. A Green Paper, "Who Decides", was issued in December 1997; the consultation period closed at the end of March 1998.

Departmental Publications

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many of his Department's publications have been made available in (a) Braille, (b) audio tape and (c) large print in 1997–98; and what percentage of the total number of publications this represents. [54275]

Mr. Hoon: No external publications are published by the Lord Chancellor's Department in these formats. However, a number of in-house publications such as LCD News, Talkback, Direct Brief and the staff magazine, Hearsay, are regularly produced in Braille or large print for visually impaired staff in LCD HQ and the Court Service who require it.

Within the Court Service, The Charter for Court Users has been available in Braille and audio cassette since its publication in 1995. An audio cassette which describes the work of the Court Service is due for publication later in 1998. This represents a small part of the total number of publications, an accurate figure for which is not available.

Immigration

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department on what date the IAA received from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office the papers relating to immigration appeal No. GV100/46408/AP; and if he will make a statement. [54280]

Mr. Hoon: The IAA received the papers on 14 April 1998 and are currently awaiting instruction from the appellant's solicitors on whether an oral hearing is required.

Mr. Hoon: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to his answer of 27 March 1998, Official Report, column 297, on departmental transport arrangements, what further changes he has made. [54015]

Mr. Hoon: My Department is working towards the target announced in the White Paper "A New Deal for Transport", that all headquarters and main buildings occupied by Executive Agencies should have green transport plans by March 1999 and all other key buildings by March 2000.

Since my previous reply, new arrangements for our Departmental car fleet have been finalised: the cars will be diesel powered, and the use of low sulphur diesel is being promoted to users.

Mr. Hoon: All new appointees to the judiciary, including the magistracy, are now asked, as a condition of appointment, to state, for the purpose of a public register, whether or not they are Freemasons and, if not, to give notice if they subsequently join. Serving members of the judiciary were recently invited, by means of a copy of a letter from the Lord Chancellor to the Lord Chief Justice, to declare their Masonic status voluntarily for the purposes of the public register. Some subordinate legislation will be necessary to complete the implementation process and to permit effect to be given to the Agreement between the British and Irish Governments. This will include orders to implement any proposals for changes in the structure of the Northern Ireland Departments that may be agreed, and orders to provide the necessary statutory underpinning for the initial implementation bodies envisaged in the Strand Two section of the Belfast Agreement.

Mr. Paul Murphy [holding answer 28 July 1998]: In the Northern Ireland Office and the Northern Ireland Departments it is estimated that between 1–2 per cent. of employees cycle to work. Measures to increase the proportion of employees cycling to work are being considered as part of the development of green transport plans for buildings occupied by the Department and its Agencies. The Northern Ireland Office also has provision for an interest free loan for any employee to purchase a bicycle for travel to work purposes.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what parking facilities for cycles exist at each office or site for which her Department is responsible and for each agency for which he is responsible. [52664]

The Northern Ireland Housing Executive issued Scheme Approval for 26 schemes in the 12 month period July 1997 to July 1998.

The Northern Ireland Housing Executive received 25 applications from Housing Associations for Scheme Approval in the same period.

WALES

Arms Park Millennium Stadium

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he has taken to ensure that delays in the completion of the new Arms Park Millennium Stadium do not result in the loss of the rugby world cup final to Cardiff; what are the links between his Department and the committee overseeing this project; and if he will make a statement. [53578]

Mr. Ron Davies: I will write to the right hon. Member as soon as possible and place a copy of my reply in the Library of the House.

Mr. Ron Davies: I have today placed in the Library of the House copies of a White Paper entitled "Local Voices: Modernising Local Government in Wales". The Paper sets out an agenda for bringing Welsh local government back to the people. It places the policy in the context of Wales and the potential for a strong partnership between local government and the National Assembly.

Departmental Vehicles

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much his Department expects to spend in each year from 1998–99 to 2000–01 on vehicle replacements. [54995]

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 28 July 1998, Official Report, columns 180–81, concerning vehicle replacement, what guidance he has issued concerning the replacement policy for vehicle fleets. [54479]

Mr. Ron Davies: My Department currently operates a policy of replacing diesel driven vehicles with those which run on unleaded petrol and which are fitted with 'three way' catalytic converters. This policy is reviewed annually as part of the Department's Green Housekeeping Action Plan which takes account of developments in alternative fuels, having regard also to economic, financial and environmental factors.

Where practicable, these factors will also be applied to the replacement of the specialist diesel powered highway vehicles.

Schools (Rate Relief)

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement about discretionary rate relief granted by local authorities to their own schools. [55190]

Mr. Ron Davies: My Department has advised local authorities that rate relief cannot be granted to Local Education Authority (County) schools under section 47 of the Local Government Finance Act 1988. In this respect, local authority schools are treated in the same manner as other types of local authority property. The Government's funding of local authority expenditure has always taken account of the fact that full rates are payable on local authority property.

Like all other rate income, the rates paid by local authorities are pooled and redistributed. Those authorities who do not pay their full rates bills do so to the disadvantage of others. My Department intends to ensure that the outstanding rates are paid into the national pool for redistribution to all authorities.

Sea Empress

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to respond to the report on the Sea Empress Environmental Evaluation Committee. [55191]

Mr. Ron Davies: I have carefully considered the findings of the report and intend publishing the Government's response shortly. I will arrange for copies to be placed in the Library.

Mr. Ron Davies [holding answer 6 July 1998]: Present Ministers are not responsible to Parliament for events which took place under a previous Administration and do not normally have access to relevant papers. Information on those reviews which have been published is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Green Transport

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 27 March 1998, Official Report, column 354, on departmental transport arrangements, what further changes he has made. [54005]

Mr. Ron Davies: The White Paper, "A New Deal for Transport: Better for Everyone" (Cm 3950), was published on 20 July. The Welsh Transport Policy Statement, "Transporting Wales into the Future", was published on 24 July.

My Department has given an undertaking that a Green Transport Plan, covering commuting and travel in the course of work at the Department's main offices will be in place by March 1999.

Departmental Publications

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many of his Department's publications have been made available in (a) Braille, (b) audio tape and (c) large print in 1997–98; and what percentage of the total number of publications this represents. [54264]

Mr. Hain My right hon. Friend and I have received a number of representations from Caerphilly County Borough Council concerning this scheme.

NHS Dental Services

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures are in hand to improve access to NHS dental services in Wales. [54614]

Mr. Ron Davies: The Welsh Office £3m dental initiative, first launched in September 1995, enabled Welsh Health Authorities to offer unprecedented levels of grant (up to £50,000 in certain areas) to dentists for new or expanding practices, and to NHS Trusts to expand the Community Dental Service. An additional £0.25m for the continuation of the dental initiative was announced on 17 July 1997 as part of the comprehensive primary care initiative "Delivering Care: Meeting Need".

Sixty-one grants have already been paid but there are still some areas where certain categories of patients may find it difficult to register with an NHS dentist close to home. This can be a particular problem in the more rural parts of Wales.

Stage 2 of the initiative, launched on 10 July this year, introduces more flexibility into the grant scheme, both in terms of the extent and length of commitment required. It also offers more help to dentists who want to open new part-time or branch practices in certain areas, where this would be the best way of meeting local needs.

The Government are committed to ensuring that a comprehensive, good quality, NHS dental service is available to all who wish to use it no matter where they live, and the continuation of this Welsh Office initiative demonstrates our determination to tackle any remaining inequity of access to health care.

Sterile Service Units

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he made of the impact on sterile service units within other trusts in Wales of the contract between UHW NHS Trust and SSI. [54957]

Mr. Ron Davies: The Private Finance Initiative contract between UHW NHS Trust and SSI is justified on the basis of present activity levels. I do not anticipate any impact on sterile services units in other NHS Trusts.

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with Ynys Môn Council on the financial arrangements relating to the resignation of the Chief Executive. [54179]

Data for 1996 onwards are for the new occupation groups and are from NHS personnel systems. Data prior to 1996 are based on numbers from the NHS payroll system; the allocation of these to the new occupation groups have been estimated. As the data shown for administration and clerical are a sub set of the full group, "Administration and estates staff", a reliable figure cannot be given for 1995

Mr. Hain: The North Wales section of the Sustrans national cycle network runs from Bangor to Cheshire and comprises 69 miles, of which nine miles are open and available for cycling on. The remaining 60 miles will be open and available for cycling by the year 2000.

Farmers' Markets

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he has taken to introduce farmers' markets in Wales. [53920]

Mr. Ron Davies: Farmers' markets are a useful feature of the agricultural economy, particularly in rural areas. However, decisions about the provision of such markets are a matter for the industry.

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many jobs have been (a) created and (b) sustained in (i) the Vale of Clwyd constituency and (ii) Denbighshire by (1) foreign inward investment and (2) domestic inward investment in each of the last five years. [53919]

Mr. Hain: Inward investment information for the areas of the Vale of Clwyd constituency and Denbighshire Unitary Authority, much of which is non-assisted, is available for the last two financial years only. There were no inward investment projects recorded by the Welsh Development Agency for the Vale of Clwyd in those years. Information on Denbighshire is set out below. For the previous three years, it has only been possible to assemble meaningful information for the former Rhuddlan, Glyndwr and part of Colwyn.

Target Investment Zone

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if North Denbighshire is included in the target investment zone in Wales. [53918]

Mr. Hain: North Denbighshire is included in the North West Wales Prototype Employment Zone.

Kwik Save, Prestatyn

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action his Department has taken following the redundances at Kwik Save Prestatyn. [53926]

Mr. Hain: The Welsh Office and its agencies continue to offer every assistance. I understand that the majority of the 100 or so employees who have already left the company have found new jobs.

EU Structural Funds

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will estimate the total funding available through gaining Objective 1 status for Wales; and how that money will be apportioned to the counties within the Objective 1 Area. [53924]

Mr. Hain: We cannot at present predict with any certainty what might be the implications of Structural Fund reform for individual regions within the UK, and in particular the future financial arrangements. All these issues depend on the resolution of the final Regulations for which the Cardiff European Council set a target date of March 1999. My hon. Friend can be assured, however, that I am keeping in very close touch with this issue.

ENT Treatment

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the size of current waiting lists for ENT treatment in each health authority in Wales. [53923]

Mr. Ron Davies: The table shows the position on ear, nose and throat (ENT) waiting lists at 31 May 1998.

Ear, Nose and Throat (ENT) waiting lists, by Health Authority, at 31 May 1998

Health Authority	Residents waiting for ENT outpatient appointments	Residents waiting for ENT inpatient or daycase treatment
Gwent Health Authority	2,678	1,182
Bro Taf Health Authority	3,644	2,021
Dyfed Powys Health Authority	2,186	1,397
North Wales Health Authority	2,931	2,386
Morgannwg Health Authority	2,812	1,217
All Welsh Health Authorities	14,251	8,203

IVF Treatment

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are the current average waiting times for IVF treatment in each health authority in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [53922]

Mr. Ron Davies: Information on waiting times for the specialised IVF treatment is not collected centrally.

PRIME MINISTER

Dounreay

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Prime Minister on what date the Nuclear Installations Inspectorate memorandum, "A Summary of the Dounreay FCA Inspection Findings", was brought to his attention; what assurances he (a) sought and (b) received from the HSE that Dounreay was a suitable destination for the waste from Georgia; what action he took in response to the document; and if he will make a statement. [46785]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 23 June 1998]: This was brought to my attention in the usual way at the time of publication.

I also refer the hon. Member to the answer given to her by my hon. Friend the Minister for Science, Energy and Industry on 23 July 1998, Official Report, columns 641–42.

Lobbyists

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the business relationships notified to him by Mr. Roger Liddle. [49655]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 9 July 1998]: In accordance with the Civil Service Management Code, on appointment as a Special Adviser to the No. 10 Policy Unit, Mr. Liddle notified the Cabinet Office that he was Managing Director of Prima Europe Ltd. and that he was a shareholder in the company.

Mr. Liddle has consented to the release of this information.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister what guidance he gives to (a) Cabinet Ministers and (b) other Ministers concerning participation at events organised or facilitated by lobbying companies; and what account this guidance takes of Chatham House rules. [50466]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 14 July 1998]: Ministers participating in any outside event—whether under the Chatham House rule or not—must conduct themselves in accordance with the principles set out in the Ministerial Code.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister in respect of section 9, "Guidance For Civil Servants: Contacts with Lobbyists", whether media contacts are deemed to be lobbyists for the purpose of the guidance. [54481]

The Prime Minister: Civil servants are under a duty, set out in the Civil Service Code, not to misuse their official position or information acquired in the course of their official duties to further their private interests or those of others. The practical examples outlined in Section 9 of the guidance focus on dealings with lobbyists but these principles apply to all contacts between civil servants and people outside Government.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister if the guidance issued to civil servants concerning dealings with lobbyists will extend to civil servants working to the Scottish Parliament and Welsh Assembly. [54437]

The Prime Minister: The Guidance is a clarification of the existing rules set out in the Civil Service Code. Its purpose is to set out some practical guidelines to staff who come into contact with groups and people outside Government. The Guidance applies to all civil servants. Its principles will therefore apply to members of the Home Civil Service working in the Scottish Executive and to the Welsh Assembly.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister in drawing up the guidance to civil servants on dealings with lobbyists, to what extent he drew on practice in other member states of the European Union. [54438]

The Prime Minister: The Guidance is essentially a clarification of existing rules and principles which have long applied to civil servants in the United Kingdom. However, in drafting the Guidance which sets out practical guidelines for staff who may come into contact with groups and people outside Government, experience and practice overseas was, of course, considered.

No. 10 Policy Unit

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Prime Minister what is his policy regarding the provision of political information or advice by the No. 10 Policy Unit to people outside Parliament who have been invited to appear on television or radio programmes. [50069]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 31 July 1998]: Schedule 1, Part 1 of the Model Contract for Special Advisers sets out the duties and responsibilities of Special Advisers including their briefing role. In doing so, they are required not to misuse their official position or information required in the course of their duties or do anything which might breach Parliamentary privilege or offend against the conventions of Parliament.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Prime Minister how many meetings members of his policy unit have had with (i) Tesco plc, (ii) Marks and Spencer plc and (iii) Manpower since 1 February; and on what matters. [54494]

The Prime Minister: Ministers, their Special Advisers and other civil servants meet many people in the course of their work. This properly includes meetings with interest groups outside Government. This liaison is intended to help Ministers draw upon outside contributions—from academics, think-tanks, trade and industry associations, private sector organisations, trade unions and others, as well as relevant experience from other countries—during the process of policy analysis and development. But they must observe the requirements of propriety: for instance they must not provide confidential information without authorisation, or allow improper influence on policy. It is not our policy to make information on meetings or their content public.

Information Technology

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Prime Minister how much his office spent on IT, itemising (a) personal computers, (b) mainframe, (c) mini-computers and (d) file servers in the last year for which figures are available. [52899]

The Prime Minister: The information requested is being collated and I will write to my right hon. Friend in due course.

Genetically Modified Foods

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister what (i) discussions he has had with and (ii) representations he has received from the President of the United States in respect of genetically modified foods or crops; when, and what issues were discussed; and if he will make a statement. [52854]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 28 July 1998]: Officials are in regular contact with their United States counterparts and this issue was discussed during the recent European Union-United States summit.

Cycling

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Prime Minister what proportion of the employees of his Department and of the employees of each agency for which he is responsible cycle to work; and what measures he plans to increase that proportion. [52806]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 28 July 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office on 28 July 1998, Official Report, column 221.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Prime Minister what parking facilities for cycles exist at each office or site for which his Department is responsible; and for each agency for which he has responsibility. [52805]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 28 July 1998]: For these purposes my Office is part of the Cabinet Office.

I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office on 28 July, Official Report, column 221.

Departmental Research

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the cost of all research undertaken by his Department since May 1997, excluding the cost of green papers and other public consultation documents drafted by his officials; and if he will list in each case the organisations which undertook that research. [52711]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 29 July 1998]: For these purposes my Office is part of the Cabinet Office. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on 30 July, Official Report, column 502.

Lord-Lieutenants

Mr. Love: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the Lord-Lieutenants and their deputies for Greater London indicating the dates when they were appointed, the term each will serve before re-appointment and the dates when each post will next be due for appointment or reappointment. [53682]

The Prime Minister: This week I have announced the appointment of Sir Peter Imbert QPM as the new Lord Lieutenant of London to succeed Lord Bramall later in the year.

As the appointment of Deputy Lord-Lieutenants is made by Lord Lieutenants, I have asked the Clerk to the Lieutenancy to write to my hon. Friend with the information he has requested.

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Prime Minister if he will assess the factors which led to an increase in the cost of lord-lieutenants in England over the past 10 years. [53278]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 29 July 1998]: The majority of Lord-Lieutenants receive assistance from their local authority by the voluntary provision of accommodation and staff; and some meet all or most of their day-to-day running costs from their own resources. But contributions from these two sources have fallen over the last 10 years and the proportion of total expenditure on Lord-Lieutenants which is met from central Government funds has risen accordingly.

Life Peerages

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 23 July 1998, Official Report, column 626, if he will invite the Speaker to nominate persons for life peerages. [53203]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 29 July 1998]: There is no obstacle to the Speaker proposing a candidate for a life peerage.

Civil Servants

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Prime Minister if he will issue guidance to Ministers about making public criticisms of their departments' civil servants. [52868]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 29 July 1998]: Paragraphs 56–61 of the Ministerial Code provide guidance in relation to civil servants.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement about the public criticisms made by the hon. Member for Edinburgh, South (Mr. Griffiths) of civil servants in the Department of Trade and Industry. [52866]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 29 July 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the then President of the Council on 23 July 1998, Official Report, column 1258.

Social Exclusion Unit

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Prime Minister what topics the Social Exclusion Unit will focus on in its next phase. [55137]

The Prime Minister: In its next phase, the Unit will follow up its reports on Truancy and School Exclusion, and Rough Sleeping, and conduct further work arising from its "worst estates" project: the framework for this will be set out in the Unit's first report on the subject, which will be published in September.

In addition, I have asked the Unit to take on two new topics:

teenage parents. The Unit should work with other departments, building particularly on the work already undertaken by the Department of Health to develop an integrated strategy to cut rates of teenage parenthood, particularly under-age parenthood, towards the European average, and propose better solutions to combat the risk of social exclusion for vulnerable teenage parents and their children. This work should report to Ministers by December.

16 to 18 year olds. The Unit should work with other departments to assess how many 16 to 18 year olds are not in education, work or training, analyse the reasons why, and produce proposals to reduce the numbers significantly. This work should report to Ministers by Easter.

Open Government

Ms Corston: To ask the Prime Minister what progress has been made in fulfilling the Government's commitment to more open government; and if he will make a statement. [55221]

The Prime Minister: Citizens have the right to more information on what their Government are doing and this is why we have published our proposals for a Freedom of Information Act. A draft Bill is being prepared for public consultation and submission to the Public Services Select Committee for pre-legislative scrutiny. In order to co-ordinate the detailed preparation and implementation of Freedom of Information alongside related legislation on data protection and human rights, the Home Office will take on the responsibility for this Bill. These arrangements will deliver our commitment to end unnecessary secrecy in government as part of our programme to modernise the constitution.

Genetic Engineering

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Crewe and Nantwich (Mrs Dunwoody), of 28 July 1998, Official Report, columns 132–34, if the Performance and Innovation Unit within the Cabinet Office will consider the delivery of policies in respect of (a) genetic engineering and (b) animal welfare; and if he will make a statement. [54483]

The Prime Minister: The first group of projects to be carried out by the Performance and Innovation Unit will be announced in the Autumn.

Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister for what reasons the previous Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster was required to relinquish his Cabinet position; and if he will make a statement. [54572]

The Prime Minister: With regard to the composition of my Government, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave in the House to my hon. Friend the Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) on 29 July 1998, Official Report, column 367.

Media Contacts

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister what is his policy in respect of contacts between Ministers and the representatives of the media, where such contacts concern other Ministers. [54482]

The Prime Minister: Ministers are expected to operate at all times in accordance with the Ministerial Code.

Ministers (VIP Lounges)

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Prime Minister if he will estimate for each Department and for each Minister (a) the number of occasions on which they used VIP airport lounges and at what cost in the past year and (b) the miles travelled and at what cost in (i) official cars and (ii) trains in the past year. [54127]

The Prime Minister: It is not possible to provide such an estimate. Information in the form requested is not held centrally or by Departments.

Mr. Peter Penfold

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what factors led him to say on 11 May that Mr. Peter Penfold had done a superb job in working closely with President Kabbah. [54261]

The Prime Minister: Like my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary, I have consistently recognised the contribution made by Mr. Penfold to relations between Britain and Sierra Leone, and to Britain's standing with the people of Sierra Leone. His close relationship with President Kabbah has been an important part of that contribution.

Cabinet Meetings

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister on what occasions the Cabinet has met since May 1997; and what was the duration of each meeting. [54904]

The Prime Minister: Since May 1997 Cabinet has usually met once a week when Parliament is in session; no record is routinely kept of the duration of each Cabinet meeting.

Government Publications

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Prime Minister what factors underlay the retail cost of (a) the "Government Annual Report" CM 3969 and (b) "In Touch with the People" CM 4014 ; and if he will make a statement on the reasons for the difference. [55138]

The Prime Minister: In line with established practice, the price of the Government's Annual Report 97/98 CM 3969 and the Local Government White Paper "In Touch with the People" CM 4014 were determined by The Stationery Office after discussion with the relevant Government departments and in line with the HMSO guidelines for Command Papers. The price of documents produced by The Stationery Office varies according to a range of factors including production costs, estimated sales and print run.

Sierra Leone

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Prime Minister on what date he was first consulted concerning the planned involvement of UK Government personnel and military assets in support of Sandline International's involvement in restoring the Government of Sierra Leone. [41832]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 14 May 1998]: The Legg Report makes clear Ministerial knowledge of Sandline's activities.

Reviews and Task Forces

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the reviews and task forces announced by the Government since 1 May 1997 and in each case the date they reported or the date they are expected to report. [55136]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: I have been asked to reply.

A fully updated list of reviews and task forces notified to this Parliament since 1 May 1997 has been made available in the Library, with details of their report dates. To ensure comprehensive coverage, a trawl has been undertaken across all Departments and the list therefore includes for the first time a number of reviews already announced to the House in the usual way since 1 May 1997.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Road Noise

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the proposals for noise mitigation measures on existing trunk roads in rural areas in the White Paper, A New Deal for Transport. [52251]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The White Paper states that we are examining the scope for noise mitigation measures on trunk roads built before the current standards of road construction were created. The report on the review of trunk roads in Wales expands on this, explaining that a separate announcement will be made on revised criteria for dealing with requests for noise mitigation in such cases. The White Paper also announces a new policy of considering the use of quieter road surfaces whenever a road needs to be resurfaced.

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what resources are being made available to the Highways Agency for new measures to reduce motorway noise. [54679]

Ms Glenda Jackson: As indicated in the report A New Deal for Trunk Roads, a separate announcement will be made in due course about the budget to be made available for the Highways Agency to deal with the most serious and pressing cases and the new criteria to be used.

AWE Aldermaston

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if he will make a statement on the plutonium contamination incident at AWE Aldermaston on 15 December 1997; and if he will place copies of the HSE reports on this incident in the Library; [52173]

(2) if he will place in the Library copies of all HSE reports on incidents and accidents which have occurred at AWE Aldermaston in the last 30 years. [52174]

Mr. Meacher: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Technetium-99

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to Paragraph 7 of the United Kingdom submission to the OSPAR Convention ministerial meeting in Sintra, on 20 to 24 July, if he has asked British Nuclear Fuels plc for an explanation for the measurement of technetium-99 discovered in lobsters reported to the Government by BNFL in May 1997; [52777]

Mr. Meacher: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Compliance Cost Assessments

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what cumulative net increase in compliance costs has been estimated in compliance cost assessments published by his Department since 1 May 1997. [52937]

Mr. Meale [holding answer 28 July 1998]: Compliance cost assessments are not directly comparable, and do not include savings, so it is not possible to provide a simple figure for the cumulative net increase in compliance costs over the period in question. I have placed in the Library summary information of costs from the compliance cost assessments carried out since July 1997. Information before that date is not held centrally, but I will arrange for it to be placed in the Library as soon as possible.

Trunk Road Accidents

Ms Ryan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what assessment he has made of recent trends in (a) injuries to residents and (b) damage to their property in respect of residences alongside (i) trunk roads and (ii) the A10 (London); [53250]

(2) what assessment he has made of recent trends in (a) accidents, (b) injuries and (c) deaths on the A10 due to (i) car and (ii) motorcycle accidents. [53248]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency, Mr. Lawrie Haynes, to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Laurence Haynes to Ms Joan Ryan, dated 31 July 1998:

The Transport Minister, Glenda Jackson has asked me to reply to your recent questions about the Assessment of accident trends on the A10.

The Highways Agency obtains accident records on a regular basis from the London Accident Analysis Unit which is part of the London Research Centre. The Unit performs regular statistical analysis such as ranking of sites and breakdown of accident figures by type of vehicle, severity, road and weather conditions. The Unit also carries out a rolling programme of route studies that make specific recommendations for safety improvements based on the accident record of a route.

The Agency's network managers are also able to commission specific safety studies on an ad hoc basis if accident figures of our normal oversight of the network show that there might be a safety problem at a specific location. One such study was recently commissioned on the A10 in north London. The study will include work on traffic signal installations and an examination of road geometry, speeding and environmental issues. The results of the study will be available in about three months' time.

We monitor continuously trends in complaints or claims for damage or injury to persons or properties along side trunk roads, including the A10 in London. We have not detected any significant changes in the numbers of complaints or claims for damage or injuries either nationally or on the A10 in London.

Ms Ryan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to improve the protection for residents living alongside trunk roads. [53249]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I refer my hon. Friend to the statement made by my hon. right Friend the Minister of Transport setting out our policy on trunk roads, today Official Report, columns 653–560.

Ministerial Meetings

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions on what occasions Ministers in his Department have had meetings with (a) Friends of the Earth and (b) CPRE in the last six months. [53695]

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) how many meetings Ministers in his Department have had with Marks and Spencer plc since 1 February; and on what matters; [54396]

(2) how many meetings ministers have had with Tesco plc since 1 February; and on what matters; [54429]

(3) how many meetings ministers have had with BAA since 1 February; and on what matters. [54430]

Mr. Meale: Ministers, their Special Advisers and other civil servants meet many people in the course of their work. This properly includes meetings with interest groups outside Government. This liaison is intended to help Ministers draw upon outside contributions—from academics, think-tanks, trade and industry associations, private sector organisations, trade unions and others, as well as relevant experience from other countries—during the process of policy analysis and development. But they must observe the requirements of propriety: for instance they must not provide confidential information without authorisation, or allow improper influence on policy. It is not our policy to make information on meetings or their content public.

Housing Co-operatives

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proportion of the housing corporation grant has been allocated to the housing cooperatives in each of the last five years; what plans he has to increase expenditure on housing cooperatives; and if he will make a statement. [53336]

Mr. Raynsford: The proportion of Housing Corporation grant allocated to housing co-operatives in the last five years is set out in the table.

The Housing Corporation is currently reviewing its housing co-operative policy with the intention of producing a consultation document later in the year.

Funding of co-operatives in England in the last five years

Year	Proportion of HC rented programme for co-operatives (%)
1993–94	2.6
1994–95	1.1
1995–96	0.7
1996–97	0.7
1997–98	0.1

Local Authority Rents

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the projected level of average local authority rents in (a) England and Wales and (b) Greater London arising from the proposed increases of (i) one per cent. next year and (ii) two per cent. in the following two years; and what estimate he has made of the level of average local authority rents (1) as a proportion of registered social landlord rents and (2) as a proportion of average eligible rents in the private sector. [53574]

Mr. Raynsford: The provision for Housing Revenue Account Subsidy announced by the Chancellor of the Exchequer on 14 July 1998, Official Report, columns 187–94, allows for a real increase in local authority rents in England of one per cent. in 1999–2000 and of two per cent. in each of the following two years. Actual rent increases may differ from these guideline rent increases used in the calculation of Housing Revenue Account Subsidy.

We will be consulting individual local authorities on their guideline rent increases for 1999–2000 in the autumn. Local authorities will not have all the information they need to set their rents for 1999–2000 until the beginning of 1999.

Data on average weekly rents for local authority, registered social landlord and private sector tenants for 1996–97 are set out in the table. The figures are not directly comparable as they take no account of differences in size and quality of accommodation.

	England	London
Local authority	40.17	53.11
Registered social landlord[1]	46.74	53.12
Privately rented	77	[2]—

[1] Rents at 31 March 1997

[2] The Survey of English Housing sample size is not large enough to produce estimates for London for individual financial years. Combined data for 1995–96 and 1996–97 give an average private sector rent of £111 for London (£73 for England as a whole).

Regeneration

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if he will list the annual expenditure of the current programme of pathway networks in local authorities in Greater London; what are the objectives of the programme; and if he will make a statement; [53568]

(2) if he will list the criteria for qualification as a locally-driven initiative in future regeneration activity; and if he will make a statement on the role of pathway networks in developing comprehensive local strategies for regeneration and on the relationship between those local partnerships and the RDAs. [53905]

Mr. Caborn: The information is as follows:

New Deal for Regeneration

Under the new deal for regeneration, locally driven initiatives will be developed by inclusive local partnerships and will:

enhance the employment prospects, education and skills of local people address social exclusion and enhance opportunities for the disadvantaged through community development promote sustainable regeneration, improving and protecting the environment and infrastructure improve the quality of life of local people and their capacity to participate in regeneration activities encourage more effective integration of programmes through partnerships and the involvement of local communities and voluntary groups support and promote growth in local economies and businesses

Further details of the arrangements for local partnership led initiatives will be included in the Bidding Guidance for the re-shaped Single Regeneration Budget due to be published in the near future.

Bids will have to show how they fit with other new area-based initiatives and strategies Regeneration partnerships will have to make clear the linkages between housing, regeneration and other initiatives and demonstrate that their local strategies complement the regional strategies that the Regional Development Agencies will develop.

Pathway Partnerships

The East London and Lea Valley Objective 2 Programme Monitoring Committee agreed that the programme should be implemented through a range of existing local and regional partnerships. As part of this process Strategic and Pathway Partnerships evolved to implement parts of the programme. There are no formal qualification criteria other than that they should be representative, accessible and that their procedures in relation to the identification of potential projects should be fully transparent. A number of area based and thematic strategic partnerships have been formed as a result of this process, including 14 community led Pathway Partnerships. The Objective 2 Monitoring Committee has recognised the value of these partnerships and has resolved to strengthen their role in future bidding rounds. However, at this stage there have been no discussions concerning the future of these partnerships in relation to the activity of the RDA.

Pathway Partnerships are based in areas of acute urban deprivation within the East London and Lea Valley Objective 2 area. £952,000 has been made available from ERDF funds and matched by local authorities; a total of £1.7 million of support has been provided to date. The Pathway Partnerships are made up of representatives from the local community, voluntary, public and the private sector. Each Pathway has drawn up a regeneration strategy for the local area and is in the process of identifying projects for support from Priority 4 of the Objective 2 fund which targets 'community economic development.

The table shows the name of the Pathway Partnerships, the Borough they are situated in and the amount of grant agreed to date.

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will commission research into the use of equity release mechanisms to assist home owners to fund essential repairs and improvements to their dwellings; and if he will make a statement. [53907]

Mr. Raynsford: The Department currently has no plans to commission research into the use of equity release schemes. However, we have been informing ourselves about the schemes that are currently available. There is interdepartmental interest in the potential of such schemes.

Waste Incineration Plants

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the criteria used by the Environment Agency when considering an application for an environmental licence to (a) build and (b) extend a waste to energy incineration plant; and if he will make a statement on the role of public consultation in determining such applications. [53908]

Mr. Meacher: In considering an application under Integrated Pollution Control to (a) build or (b) extend a waste to energy incineration plant, the Environment Agency are under a duty to assess the best practicable environmental option and ensure that the best available techniques not entailing excessive cost are used to prevent or minimise and render harmless potentially harmful emissions. In particular the Agency will assess the suitability of the design of the plant to meet stringent emission limits, the impact of emissions on the local environment and the ability of the company to operate the plant satisfactorily.

The IPC system was designed to encourage public involvement in the decision making process. The public are given the opportunity to comment in respect of an authorisation and variation of authorisations involving a substantial change. The Environment Agency must consider any representation it receives when determining the application.

The Agency has recognised that it should carry out more detailed consultation with respect to certain high profile licence application and is currently piloting an extended consultation process for these cases.

Owner-occupied Housing

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will publish the current (a) number and (b) estimated value of owner-occupied properties and the total value of mortgages outstanding on those properties. [53909]

Mr. Raynsford: The latest available figures on a consistent timing basis for the UK relate to the end of March 1998, and are as follows:

Number of owner occupied properties: 16.7 million (provisional)

Estimated value of owner occupied property: £1,340 billion

Value of mortgages outstanding (at June 1998): £436 billion

DETR estimates and Bank of England.

Schools (Discretionary Rate Relief)

Mr. Sawford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement about discretionary rate relief granted by local authorities to their own schools. [54625]

Ms Armstrong: As my Department has advised local authorities, rate relief cannot be granted to Local Education Authority (County) schools under section 47 of the Local Government Finance Act 1988. In this respect local authority schools are treated the same as other types of local authority property. The fact that the full rates are payable on local authority property has always been taken into account in the Government's funding of local authority expenditure.

The rates paid by local authorities, like all other rate income, are pooled and redistributed among all local authorities. Therefore if, some authorities do not pay their full rate bills, they do so to the detriment of all authorities. My Department intends to ensure that the outstanding rates are paid into the national rate pool for redistribution to all authorities.

Motorway Service Areas

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is his policy on the spacing of motorway service areas; and if he will make a statement. [54626]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Motorway service areas (MSAs) exist to meet a road safety need by giving drivers somewhere to stop and rest. It is nevertheless important to strike a balance between the needs of motorists and the protection of the countryside from unnecessary development.

Policy on MSAs was last set out by the previous administration in Annexe A to PPG13 and Roads Circular 1/94. In summary, MSAs were to be not more than around thirty miles apart and, to increase competition and choice, could be provided as frequently as about every fifteen miles.

Some six years after its introduction, there is little evidence of new operators entering the MSA sector. I am, however, concerned that additional MSA provision has been at the expense of other considerations, particularly in areas of planning restraint. We therefore intend to return to a policy based on the provision of MSAs approximately every thirty miles in order to provide drivers with adequate opportunities to stop and rest. Services at closer intervals will not be ruled out completely but we will in future expect to approve them only where there are exceptional need and safety grounds for doing so.

I am today issuing detailed guidance on this and a number of related MSA matters. Copies have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses. This new advice will take effect immediately and we will expect developers, planners and others to take account of it when considering proposals for new MSAs. Where it differs from previous statements of policy, the new guidance should be regarded as taking precedence. It will be incorporated in a consolidated circular on MSA policy in due course.

Soap and Detergent Industry

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is his Department's policy on the soap and detergent industry's code of good environmental practice; to what extent this code complies with the proposed standards and initiatives his Department is considering for greater eco-efficiency in the home; and if he will make a statement. [54817]

Mr. Meale: The code is a welcome initiative by the soap and detergent industry. It has the potential to make a significant contribution to the Government's Sustainable Development Strategy and is in line with the Government's market transformation approach for consumer products. In particular, the industry's proposal to provide guidance to consumers on the responsible use of laundry detergents and their packaging, and to set quantifiable targets against which progress can be audited independently, provides a positive example for other industry sectors to follow.

In order to meet the Government's wider aims for reducing energy consumption and other environmental impacts, the industry will need to demonstrate that the targets it has set for itself are being achieved. My Department is currently in discussion with the Soap and Detergent Industry Association on this point, and on how we can work together to integrate this initiative within our wider environment strategies.

Housing (Expenditure)

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the gross public expenditure in 1997 prices on capital investment in housing in England and Wales for each financial year from 1968 to 1997; and what were the levels of expenditure in 1997 prices for (a) local authority new build and acquisitions, (b) renovation of local authority housing stock, (c) private sector renovation, (d) housing association new build, (e) housing association rehabilitation, (f) low cost home ownership and (g) other in each of these years; and what are the projections for expenditure under each of these headings for each year between 1997–98 and 2001–02. [54541]

Mr. Raynsford: I will write to my hon. Friend with the available data shortly.

Non-Departmental Public Bodies

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the non-departmental public bodies in existence on 1 May 1997 that (a) have been disbanded, (b) will be disbanded in the next 12 months, (c) have had their functions transferred to (i) another non-departmental public body and (ii) a democratically elected body, (d) have been renamed but continue to perform a similar role and (e) have been unchanged; if he will indicate in (c) (ii) the relevant successor body; what new non-departmental public bodies have been established since 1 May 1997; and how many non-departmental public bodies his Department currently is responsible for. [53864]

Mr. Meale: The information is as follows:

(a) 12 non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs) sponsored by this Department have been wound-up since 1 may 1997; 9 Urban Development Corporations—Birmingham Heartlands, Black Country, London Docklands, Merseyside, Plymouth, Sheffield, Trafford Park, Teesside and Tyne & Wear—which were executive NDPBs, and 3 advisory bodies—the Assessment Panel for Construction Research, the Advisory Committee on Plant and Machinery and the Local Government Staff Commission (England).

(b) North Hull Housing Action Trust, an executive NDPB, is due to be wound-up early in 1999.

(c) No bodies have had their functions transferred to either (i) another NDPB or (ii) a democratically elected body.

(d) None have been renamed but continue to perform a similar function.

(e) Details of other NDPBs in existence on 1 May 1997 sponsored by this Department are listed in "Public Bodies 1997".

Four advisory NDPBs have been established since 1 May 1997; the Committee on Chemicals and Materials on Construction for use in Public Water Supplies and Swimming Pools, the Expert Group on Airborne Particles, the Expert Group on Cryptosporidium in Water Supplies, and the Expert Panel on Sustainable Development Education. Docklands Light Railway was reclassified as an executive NDPB, to enable it to receive grant-in-aid from the Department, on 1 April 1998 following the wind-up of London Docklands Development Corporation.

This Department currently sponsors 50 NDPBs—28 executive and 22 advisory bodies.

The Government are committed to keeping the number of NDPBs to a minimum and to ensuring that those which remain are open, accountable and effective. Many of the new NDPBs established since 1 May 1997 will be essential in helping the Government to deliver their Manifesto commitments.

Birmingham Northern Relief Road

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 13 July 1998, Official Report, column 15, what is the current projection of traffic flows on the M42 and M6 if the Birmingham Northern Relief Road is built. [53730]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 30 July 1998]: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency, Mr. Lawrie Haynes, to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Brian Jenkins, dated 31 July 1998:

The Transport Minister, Glenda Jackson, has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Birmingham Northern Relief Road.

The current traffic forecasts are those prepared during the BNRR Public Inquiries and a table showing these is attached. The forecasts are for the design year 2011, and they assumed that the Western Orbital Route would not be built. Traffic forecasts are currently being updated and I shall let you know details when they are available.

Birmingham Northern Relief Road

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the contract between MEL and the contractor for BNRR is in the possession of his Department; and if the Government would (a) be liable in respect of categories of damages and (b) be liable for penalties to the contractor if the Government had not decided to proceed with BNRR. [53075]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Department has a copy of the construction contact let by MEL in 1992, although I understand MEL will be reviewing it in the light of decisions over the last six years. The Government have no direct liabilities to MEL's contractors.

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make public (a) part or (b) all of the concession agreement for the Birmingham Northern Relief Road under the Environmental Information Regulations 1992 in the event of the High Court ruling that he has a discretion. [53077]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I am considering the Judgment given on 29 July by the High Court.

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions for what categories of damage the Government would have been liable if they had decided not to proceed with the Birmingham Northern Relief Road; and what estimate was made of the size of the possible damages in such categories. [53078]

Ms Glenda Jackson: As Section 1(4) of the New Roads and Street Works Act 1991 requires, the Birmingham Northern Relief Road Concession Agreement makes provision in certain circumstances for compensation payments to the Concessionaire in respect of costs incurred by him. The details are, however, confidential.

Poplar II HARCA Ballot

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will ensure the votes of the eight separate estates being balloted for the Poplar II HARCA will be counted separately. [53972]

Mr. Raynsford: No. The conduct of the count is a matter for the London Borough of Tower Hamlets.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the results of the Poplar II HARCA ballot will be published estate by estate. [53971]

Mr. Raynsford: The publication of the Poplar ballot result is a matter for the London Borough of Tower Hamlets.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what measures he proposes to ensure that the votes of leaseholders are given equal weight to those of tenants in the Poplar II HARCA ballot. [53973]

Mr. Raynsford: When deciding whether or not to give consent to a transfer under section 32 of the Housing Act 1985 the Secretary of State has to be satisfied that the majority of secure tenants are not opposed to the proposals. There is no such requirement in relation to leaseholders, although the Secretary of State will take their views into account when making his decision.

Health and Safety

Mr. Pond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list all UK legislation currently in force regarding the health and safety of children and young people at work. [54075]

Mr. Meale: The Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974 and its relevant statutory provisions apply to persons at work and those affected by work activities in Great Britain including children and young people. In particular, the following legislation applies restrictions to protect the health and safety of children and young people at work:

The Employment of Women, Young Persons and Children Act 1920;

The Health and Safety (Young Persons) Regulations 1997;

The Explosives Act 1875 (amended by the Explosives Act 1923);

The Ionising Radiations Regulations 1985;

The Control of Lead at Work Regulations 1998;

The Power Presses Regulations 1965;

The Woodworking Machines Regulations 1974;

The Agriculture (Circular Saws) Regulations 1959;

The Carriage of Dangerous Goods by Road Regulations 1996;

The Agriculture (Avoidance of Accidents to Children) Regulations 1958;

The Docks Regulations 1988;

The Construction (Lifting Operations) Regulations 1961;

The Mines and Quarries Act 1954;

The Coal and Other Mines (Sidings) Regulations 1956;

The Coal and Other Mines (Locomotives) Regulations 1956;

The Quarries (General) Regulations 1956;

The Quarries (Ropeways and Vehicles) Regulations 1958;

The Quarries Vehicles Regulations 1970;

The Quarries (Explosives) Regulations 1988;

The Miscellaneous (Mines Explosives) Regulations 1959;

The Coal and Other Safety Lamp Mines (Explosives) Regulations 1993; and

The Shipbuilding and Ship-repairing Regulations 1960.

Additionally, the Children and Young Persons Act 1933 and the Children and Young Persons (Scotland) Act 1937, as amended, control conditions and hours that children can work.

Green Transport

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 27 March 1998, Official Report, column 293, on departmental transport arrangements, what further changes he has made. [54016]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My Department has asked its property managers to prepare green transport plans and held a workshop to discuss what is involved. It has issued further internal guidance on green transport plan proposals for 1998–99 and drafted a site survey form for use in preparing a first plan, taking account of the experience with the earlier pilot studies. Good progress is being made. For example, DVLA has persuaded a local bus operator to improve services to its main site in Swansea.

Driving Penalties

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the effects of replacing the charge of reckless driving with that of dangerous driving in terms of improving the safety of vulnerable road users. [53304]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We commissioned the Transport Research Laboratory, on 1 May 1998, to study the effect of the Road Traffic Act 1991 on prosecutions for dangerous driving.

The study will examine whether there is sufficiently clear guidance on the law and its purpose, and how this affects the choice of penalty. The study will include a comparison of sentencing trends before and since the 1991 Act and will assess how the changes in the definition of "bad driving" offences have been implemented by police and courts.

We shall try to gain an understanding of what leads prosecutors and courts to select one offence or one penalty rather than another. We hope that, by examining the whole procedure from charging to sentencing, we shall be able to identify ways of improving practice, so as to deter poor driving more effectively. We expect to complete this study by October 2000.

Pedestrians

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on trends in (1) numbers of pedestrians and (2) the number of pedestrian deaths over the last 30 years. [53306]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Data on the number of trips made by pedestrians, and the distance they travel, are collected regularly as part of the National Travel Survey. In 1994–96 the distance walked per person per year averaged 200 miles, compared to 244 miles in 1985–86 and 255 miles in 1975–76.

Trends in pedestrian deaths are available from data on accidents collected by the police and local authorities. Deaths have fallen from 2,964 in 1967 to 973 in 1997. A comprehensive list of research on pedestrian safety over the last 30 years is not available, but a wide range of relevant research has been carried out including a study of pedestrian accident causation, and research on traffic calming and safety measures in urban areas. A study of pedestrian behaviour and exposure to risk has recently been completed.

The Department is developing a Walking Strategy which will take account of a wide range of information and research findings on pedestrian safety.

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into (1) the number or child pedestrian deaths over the last 30 years and (2) how the number of child pedestrian deaths compares with other Western European countries. [53307]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Child pedestrian deaths, aged 0–14, have reduced from 541 a year in 1967 to 133 in 1997. But this still represents an unsatisfactory rate of 1.1 child pedestrian deaths per 100,000 children, higher than the European average of 1.0.

A summary of recent research on child pedestrians is contained in the booklet my Department produced in June which covers the road safety education of children. A copy of the booklet was placed in the Library.

We have also commissioned MVA and the Institute of Transport Studies at Leeds University to undertake an international study of children's exposure to accidents, and of previous child pedestrian accidents. The study aims to identify the reasons for differences in child pedestrian accident rates between countries and hence identify ways of, and policies for, reducing the child pedestrian accident risk.

Radioactive Emissions

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what are the limits on radioactive emissions over a quarter of a mile from (a) coal-fired power stations and (b) nuclear power stations. [53313]

Mr. Meacher: Discharges of radioactivity to the environment must be authorised by the Environment Agency under the Radioactive Substances Act 1993. The guiding principle in authorising discharges from a particular site is the need to restrict the radiation doses that might be received by the most exposed members of the public, or "critical group", since adequate protection of this group will ensure that others are also protected. Exposure may result from a number of pathways, for example, through inhalation of airborne activity, through drinking water, or through uptake by animals and transfer to foodstuffs. For the purposes of discharge authorisations, the UK has since 1986 applied a limit of 1 millisievert per year (mSv/y) to members of the public from all man-made sources of radioactivity other than medical exposure and furthermore requires that such doses are 'as low as reasonably achievable'.

Coal-fired power stations are exempt from regulation under the Radioactive Substances Act 1993 because levels of naturally occurring radioactivity in the fuel and waste products are below the levels specified in that Act.

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the arrangements for the safe disposal of radioactive flyash discharged by coal-fired power stations. [53312]

Mr. Meale: Coal-fired power stations are exempt from regulation under the Radioactive Substances Act 1993 because levels of naturally occurring radioactivity in the fuel and waste products are below the levels specified in that Act and indeed can be lower than those found in natural deposits. Flyash from such power stations which is disposed of as a waste is therefore managed in the following ways:

(i) Some ash is stored on site at the power stations, pending processing such as grading. This activity is controlled by the Environment Agency under an IPC authorisation.

(ii) The majority of the flyash is landfilled, under local authority planning and Environment Agency waste management regulatory controls. The material is regarded as virtually inert. Waste management licensing requirements ensure the protection of human health and the environment.

A significant amount of ash is also used in the construction industry. It is a by-product in this context and as such falls outside waste disposal controls. The best known application is in light-weight concrete blocks used to form internal walls of houses and other buildings. It is a useful civil engineering material and an increasing range of uses are being found.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what arrangements his Department has made for public consultation concerning the proposal for a temporary increase in radioactive emissions from AWE, Aldermaston; and if he will make a statement. [54958]

Mr. Meale: I understand that in respect of the applications made by Hunting-BRAE Ltd. and AWE plc to dispose of radioactive wastes from the Atomic Weapons Establishments at Aldermaston and Burghfield the Environment Agency is preparing to consult with public bodies, local authorities and members of the public before making any decision. The Agency has placed copies of the applications on its public register at its regional office in Reading and the public register of the local authority, West Berkshire Council, in Newbury. These are available for inspection during normal office hours. The Agency has held two public meetings, one at Reading and one at Newbury, to explain the consultation process, and it will publish a consultative document later this year.

HFCs

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimates he has made of likely levels of HFC emissions in 2010. [53321]

Mr. Meacher: Based on research funded by my Department, the Government estimate that UK emissions of HFCs will be just over 3 thousand tonnes in 2010.

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) whether the consultation paper on ways to reach the United Kingdom targets for reducing greenhouse gas emissions will include a commitment to phase out HFCs; [53320]

(2) what proportion of the commitment to reduce greenhouse gases by 12.5 per cent. would be advised by the phasing out of HFCs. [53322]

Mr. Meacher: We intend to issue shortly a consultation paper on policy options for delivering our climate change targets. This will cover the options for reducing all greenhouse gas emissions, including HFCs. HFCs are necessary replacements for ozone depleting substances in some applications, and enable us to meet our commitments under the Montreal Protocol. Following consultation we will develop a balanced climate change programme which will focus on cost effective options for reducing emissions across all six greenhouse gases.

Road Traffic Law

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to review the road traffic law to protect vulnerable road users. [53305]

Ms Glenda Jackson: There are no plans to do so at present. The aim of the road traffic law is to provide protection for all road users. It contains general rules and regulation making powers which govern correct behaviour and so has safety benefits for all road users.

Greenhouse Gases

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to conclude the consultation process on ways to reach United Kingdom targets for reducing greenhouse gas emissions agreed at Kyoto. [53326]

Mr. Meacher: We intend to issue a consultation paper shortly on policy options for delivering our climate change targets. We expect the consultation period to last for 3 months.

Housing (Disabled People)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make it his policy to include in the guidance to local authorities on the use of moneys released by the capital receipts initiative a requirement that (a) all new homes will be built to be accessible for disabled people and (b) renovations and refurbishments where appropriate should improve access for disabled people. [54112]

Mr. Raynsford: Within the Capital Receipts Initiative in 1999–2000 it will be for each local authority to decide, within its allocation, how best to use the resources in the light of local circumstances. It will remain open to local authorities to use their allocations to improve accessibility of housing to disabled people where to do so is consistent with both the local housing strategy and the authority's own priorities. We will issue guidance shortly.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions following the Government's decision to cut funding to the Access Committee for England, what action the Government are taking to ensure that issues of access for disabled people are addressed by (a) Government departments and (b) local authorities; and which Government department takes lead responsibility on policy for access for disabled people. [54039]

Mr. Raynsford: I will write to the hon. Member.

Departmental Vehicles

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 22 July 1998, Official Report, columns 535–36, concerning the vehicle replacement programme, how many vehicles due for replacement in 1998–99 are planned to be replaced by vehicles using (i) petrol, (ii) diesel, (iii) natural gas, (iv) electric batteries and (v) other fuels. [54184]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I refer the hon. Member to my previous answer of 28 July 1998, Official Report, column 117.

Concessionary Fares

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has for officials to liaise with representatives of local government on the implementation of the national minimum standard for local authority concessionary fares. [54247]

Ms Glenda Jackson: There will be consultation with local government when the legislation is being prepared.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions by what date he expects implementation of the national minimum standard for local authority concessionary fares for elderly people, as proposed in the Transport White Paper, to start. [54248]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The necessary primary legislation will be brought forward as soon as Parliamentary time permits.

Departmental Publications

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many of his Department's publications have been made available in (a) Braille, (b) audio tape and (c) large print in 1997–98; and what percentage of the total number of publications this represents. [54278]

Mr. Meale: Information on the numbers of documents published in alternative formats such as audio tapes will normally be considered by officials with responsibility for the documents in question. This information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Unlicensed Vehicles

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the DVLA's recent We Are Clamping Down campaign. [54613]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The national scheme to wheelclamp and impound unlicensed vehicles was introduced in August 1997 and is being extended progressively across the country. In the 8 months to March 1998, it is estimated that some 80,000 additional vehicles were licensed as a result of the campaign, raising an extra £8.5 million. Support from the police, local authorities and the public has been enthusiastic.

Environmental Agreements

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list each international environmental agreement (a) signed by the UK Government and (b) ratified by the UK parliament during the last 10 years. [54850]

Mr. Meale: I will place the information in the Library as soon as possible and ensure that my hon. Friend receives a copy.

Traffic Speeds

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the most recent assessment of the average speed of traffic in (a) central London, (b) inner London and (c) each of the 10 largest conurbations in England. [54851]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given on 28 July 1998, Official Report, column 117, for details of the Department's traffic speed surveys. The results from the latest surveys are as follows:

mph

	Morning peak	Daytime off-peak	Evening peak
Central London	10.0	10.0	10.2
Rest of inner London	13.4	15.0	12.8

The latest traffic speed survey in central London was conducted in 1997, in the rest of inner London was conducted in 1995, in outer London in 1996–97, and in other cities in England in 1996.

More detailed results from these surveys are available from DETR statistical publications.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the effect of reducing the maximum speed limit to 20 miles per hour in built up areas on road deaths and injuries. [54911]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Department commissioned the Transport Research Laboratory (TRL) to study the effectiveness of 20 mph speed limit zones with traffic calming. TRL published their report, Review of Traffic Calming in 20 mph Zones, number 215, in 1996 and found that 20 mph zones with traffic calming reduced accidents by 60 per cent., and accidents involving child pedestrians and child cyclists by 67 per cent. Accidents to cyclists were reduced by 29 per cent. Only in those 20 mph speed limit zones with traffic calming was this degree of casualty reduction achieved. This corresponded to an average reduction in vehicle speed of nearly 10 mph, to less than 20 mph.

This week TRL has published the findings of its latest study for the Department on Urban Speed Management Methods, TRL report number 363. It concludes that where speeds of around 20 mph are desired in urban areas, traffic calming remains the best option to achieve this. The use of static signs only without traffic calming appears insufficiently effective to reduce speeds to 20 mph or to achieve accident reductions. Speed reductions of only 1 to 2 mph were found. Small additional speed reductions and accident savings can be achieved with associated publicity and enforcement campaigns, but speeds are still likely to remain well above the 20 mph speed limit.

Regional Development Agencies

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to announce the appointment of the chairmen and other members of the regional development agencies; and if he will make a statement. [54428]

Mr. Caborn: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 29 July 1998, Official Report, columns 244–45, to my hon. Friend the Member for Corby (Mr. Hope), concerning the appointment of Chairmen. A further announcement on other board appointments will be made in the Autumn.

Mr. Derek Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he plans to issue further guidance on the criteria which regional chambers must meet in order to be designated for the purposes of regional development agencies. [55195]

Mr. Caborn: I propose to write shortly to representatives of the emerging chambers and to other interested parties setting out our views.

Manchester Metrolink

Mr. Cunliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals he has evaluated relating to the extension of the Manchester Metrolink tramway to Leigh. [54170]

Ms Glenda Jackson: No such proposals have been put to my Department for evaluation.

Sustainable Development

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to the letter of 16 July MR/PSO/8216/98, what is his timetable for moving towards the electronic publishing of headline indicators. [54055]

Mr. Meacher: My Department plans to publish proposals for a core set of indicators of Sustainable Development in the Autumn. A final set of indicators, following consultation on the proposals, will be published alongside the Sustainable Development Strategy itself, around the turn of the year. Electronic publication of the core indicators will follow as soon as practicable thereafter, probably in the Spring of 1999.

Agriculture (Environmental Effects)

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he intends to publish the report of the study of the Environmental Effects of Agriculture commissioned by his Department. [53670]

Mr. Meale: We have published the report "Environmental Effects of Agriculture" today. Copies have been placed in the Library.

Leaded Petrol

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he plans to announce how (a) the EU directive banning lead in petrol and (b) the derogation for the continued supply of leaded petrol will be incorporated into UK law. [53978]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The provisions in the EU directive which require a general ban on leaded petrol whilst allowing the continuance of a limited supply of leaded petrol, will be incorporated into UK law by means of an amendment to the Motor Fuel (Composition and Content) Regulations 1994. The amendment will also incorporate the directive requirements introducing improved specifications for petrol and diesel fuel commencing from 1 January 2000. The process of amendment, which includes statutory consultation and Parliamentary approval, will begin as soon as the directive has been formally adopted—which is currently expected later this year.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) which oil companies have notified him that they propose to market lead replacement petrol by 1 January 2000; [53979]

(2) if he will ensure that petrol containing lead substitutes will be widely available in rural areas from 1 January 2000. [54517]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Oil companies will not commit to the marketing of lead replacement petrol until UK regulations are enacted which ban the general sale of leaded petrol. These regulations will follow the adoption of the EC Directive, expected later this year, which introduces the leaded petrol ban. However, the UK Petroleum Industry Association have stated that the commercial opportunities for such a product are sufficiently high to ensure that few, if any, UK oil companies will decline to offer lead replacement additives from 1 January 2000, either pre-mixed with high octane unleaded petrol or offered in measured doses for use at point-of-sale. Such supplies will be widely available wherever there is a demand and there is no indication that rural areas will be disadvantaged in this regard. In the light of this, the Government do not consider it necessary to require provision of these substitutes on a statutory basis.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions which interest groups he is liaising with about the proposed ban on leaded petrol from 1 January 2000; and how often he has met them since 1 May 1997. [53991]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The following special interest groups have been approached regarding implementation of the ban on leaded petrol:

The UK Petroleum Industry Association (UKPIA)

The Association of UK Oil Independents (AUKOI)

The Petroleum Retailers Association (PRA)

The Society of Motor Manufacturers & Traders (SMMT)

The Royal Automobile Club (RAC)

The Automobile Association (AA)

The Federation of British Historic Vehicle Clubs (FBHVC).

Two meetings with UKPIA have taken place and one meeting with each of the SMMT, AUKOI, RAC and FBHVC. Department officials will be meeting with representatives from PRA and the AA next week.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions which specialist interest groups will distribute leaded petrol after 1 January 2000. [53992]

Ms Glenda Jackson: No information is available at this stage. Department officials are continuing to discuss options with interested organisations. However, the continued supply of leaded petrol will ultimately be a commercial decision which will need to take into account such matters as the practicality, safety and security of distribution—including the necessity to comply with the regulations relating to the storage of petrol—as well as potential demand. The Department's objective is to ensure that, within the constraints imposed by the directive, there are no obstacles, legal or otherwise, to prevent this happening.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he plans to publish publicity material about the proposed ban on leaded petrol; and where he plans to distribute it. [54516]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Department is preparing information about the proposed ban on leaded petrol. We are looking into the possibilities of distribution through MOT test centres, petrol stations and at specialist car events in the Autumn. The motoring organisations are also preparing publicity.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proportion of and how much petrol used in Britain contained lead in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available. [54647]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Figures for petrol deliveries in the United Kingdom for the last 10 years are as follows:

Year	Total petrol deliveries Tonnes	Leaded petrol deliveries Tonnes	Leaded petrol as proportion of total (percentage)
1987	22,183,848	22,165,669	99.9
1988	23,238,048	22,980,953	98.9
1989	23,927,632	19,275,687	80.6
1990	24,307,594	16,051,618	66.0
1991	24,021,384	14,152,924	58.9
1992	23,906,094	12,701,808	53.1
1993	23,799,019	11,253,604	47.3
1994	22,842,969	9,681,199	42.4
1995	18,087,034	6,855,080	37.9
1996	22,408,607	7,177,229	32.0
1997	22,237,923	6,256,041	28.1

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to discourage the use of petrol containing lead. [54645]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Sales of leaded petrol have already fallen to approximately 22 per cent. of total petrol sales as a result of measures such as the duty differential between leaded and unleaded petrol. This decline is expected to continue until 1 January 2000 when an EU ban on leaded petrol, as agreed by the European Council of Ministers and the European Parliament, will come into effect.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to reduce the use by his Department of petrol containing lead. [54644]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Department does not use leaded petrol. Of the cars supplied on contract by the Government Car and Despatch Agency for Ministerial use, six use unleaded petrol and three use liquified petroleum gas.

Vehicle Emissions

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the percentage of harmful vehicle emissions attributable to vehicles over 10 years old; and what percentage of the United Kingdom vehicle fleet such vehicles represent. [54463]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Although my Department regularly estimates emissions from road transport by vehicle type and emission standard, we have no ready-to-hand estimate of the proportion of emissions from vehicles over 10 years old. I will write to the hon. Member as soon as an estimate is available, and a copy of the letter will be placed in the House of Commons Library.

26 per cent. of the United Kingdom vehicles fleet were over 10 years old at the end of 1997.

Vehicle Conversions

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the Energy Saving Trust's Powershift programme gives grants for the conversion of cars, buses and taxi cabs to use (a) liquid propane gas and (b) natural compressed gas. [54896]

Mr. Meale: The Energy Saving Trust's Powershift programme provides grants for funding partnerships to promote the manufacture of cars, buses and taxi cabs fuelled by these fuels. So far, out of the 350 clean fuel vehicles to receive funding, 290 have been vehicles fuelled by liquefied petroleum gas or natural gas. Grants for a further 500 clean fuel vehicles have been approved.

Bus and Railway Station Facilities

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will introduce measures to require a minimum standard of facilities at bus and railway stations. [54171]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The White Paper "A New Deal for Transport" stresses the importance of better facilities at stations and other places of interchange. We expect the local transport plans developed by local authorities to include an audit of existing facilities against key attributes of good provision and to identify improvements that need to be made.

In addition, the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 will place specific requirements on operators of bus and rail stations to provide facilities that meet the needs of disabled passengers.

Canals and Waterways

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what support his Department is providing for the restoration and development of canals and waterways; and if he will make a statement. [54639]

Mr. Meale: The Government value the social, economic and environmental benefits that inland waterways can bring and are keen to maximise the full potential of the canal network.

We have provided financial help to a range of canal restoration projects through the Single Regeneration Budget Challenge Fund, Land Reclamation Programme grant and the Environmental Action Fund. Projects are also eligible for funding from the various Lottery distribution boards, from local authorities and from Europe. The forthcoming report by the Inland Waterways Amenity Advisory Council on their prioritisation of restoration projects will help to ensure that available funding is more effectively targeted.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the advantages of increasing the level of freight traffic on the United Kingdom's canals and waterways. [54640]

Mr. Meale: Research in 1993 indicated that there may be potential to divert about 3.5 per cent. of the UK's road freight traffic to water although the majority of this would be to ships rather than barges. The Government recognise the environmental benefits of making use of waterways for carrying freight. As stated in the White Paper on the Future of Transport, the Government will encourage greater use of inland waterways as an alternative to road transport where this is a practical and economic option.

Sunlight Reflectors

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what assessment he has made of the Space Regatta Consortium's proposal to place reflectors in space to direct sunlight to the Arctic region; and if he will make a statement; [54650]

(2) if he will assess the environmental impact of the Znamya 2.5 experiment; and if he will make a statement. [54649]

Mr. Meale: The Znamya 2.5 experiment is planned by the Space Regatta Consortium to assess the feasibility of illuminating dark areas of the Earth's surface, particularly during winter. The experiment would last for a single night and is intended to be visible from a given point on the Earth for only a few minutes every 90 minutes. Even if the experiment occurs and is successful, which is by no means certain, the eventual operational deployment of an array of deflectors would be at least 10 years away. The environmental impact is such an array would need to be assessed in light of the conclusions of the small scale experiment and, if necessary, addressed in the appropriate international bodies.

Teesside Development Corporation

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the arrangements for the provision of advice during the lifetime of Teesside Development Corporation to its board by officers of the Corporation. [53443]

Mr. Caborn: I have made no such assessment. The arrangements are covered in the published reports of the Corporation's external auditors, and in reports by the Department's Internal Audit Service, which are confidential between the Department and the Corporation.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will estimate the costs of carrying out works on structural problems of the Tees Barrage. [53460]

Mr. Caborn: These matters are now the responsibility of the Commission for the New Towns. I will write to my hon. Friend when I have made further inquiries.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 29 July 1998, Official Report, column 237, if he will give equivalent figures for standard spending assessments for Milton Keynes Borough Council. [54955]

Ms Armstrong: The information requested is in the tables. They show the effects of re-calculating the standard spending assessments for 1997–98 and 1998–99 using the method of calculating the area cost adjustment proposed by the 1996 Review of the Area Cost Adjustment but keeping the indicators of need used in the current SSA formulae.

Table 1: Standard Spending Assessments for 1997–98

	Milton Keynes
1997–98 SSA £ million[1]	149.397
1997–98 SSA Using method proposed in Elliott Report[2] (£ million)	156.155
Difference (£ million)	6.758
Difference (percentage)	4.5
Difference (£/head[3])	34.28

[1] The figures for 1997–98 are indicative SSAs to allow for the effects of local authority reorganisation on 1 April 1998
[2] The figures are taken from Standard Spending Assessments Sub-Group: Report for 1998–99. They show the effect of using the method of calculating the ACA proposed by the 1996 Review of the Area Cost Adjustment using data available at August 1997 to determine the coefficients on the SSA formulae while keeping the same indicators in the formulae.
[3] The population figures are as at 30 June 1996

Table 2: Standard Spending Assessments for 1998–99

	Milton Keynes
1998–99 SSA £ million	157.475
1998–99 SSA Using method proposed in Elliott Report[1] (£ million)	163.554
Difference (£ million)	6.079
Difference (percentage)	3.9
Difference (£/head[2])	30.84

[1] The figures show the effect of using the method of calculation proposed by the 1996 Review of the Area Coast Adjustment using data available at July 1998 to determine the coefficients on the SSA formulae while keeping the same indicators in the formulae
[2] The population figures are as at 30 June 1996.

Dr. George Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if he will list the amounts allocated per head of population for the cost effects of population density and sparsity in the other services sub-block of the Personal Social Services SSA for each local authority in England; [54197]

(2) if he will list for each SSA block and sub-block the proportion which is determined by regression analysis of previous expenditure; [54198]

(3) if he will list for each fire authority in England the amounts allocated per head of population for the cost effects of population density or sparsity; [54199]

(4) if he will estimate for each education authority the change in SSA if the Other Education Sub-block SSA were to include a sparsity effect equivalent in effect to the average of the factor in all other education sub-blocks; [54200]

(5) if he will estimate the changes in SSA for Norfolk if all elements of the Social Services SSA that can be expressed in unit cost terms were calculated using average unit cost SSA data for all authorities within (i) the Eastern Region (ii) all Shire counties (iii) England and Wales and (iv) London; [54231]

(6) if, for Norfolk County Council, he will estimate (a) the change in the SSA highways block if the SSA per kilometre of road were calculated at the average rate for England, (b) the change in SSA Fire Service block if calculated at the average rate per head of population for England and (c) the change in total SSA if calculated at the same average rate per head of population as that pertaining to (i) the Eastern Region, (ii) all shire counties, (iii) England and Wales and (iv) London; [54234]

(7) if he will estimate the changes in SSA for Norfolk if the SSA per pupil in (a) primary, (b) secondary, (c) post 16 and (d) under 5 SSA blocks were calculated using the average for local education authorities within (i) the Eastern Region, (ii) all shire counties, (iii) England and Wales and (iv) London. [54235]

Ms Armstrong: When the calculations requested have been completed, the information requested will be placed in the Library.

Dr. George Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will introduce a sparsity factor in the Other Education Sub-block of the SSA. [54201]

Ms Armstrong: We expect to announce our proposals for Standard Spending Assessments for 1999–2000 around the beginning of December. No proposal of the kind described has been developed in this year's discussions with the Local Government Association about Standard Spending Assessments.

Dr. George Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will take account in future SSA calculations of the Highways SSA block for Norfolk of (i) the maintenance costs of minor roads which have not been constructed to a high standard and (ii) the number of summer visitors. [54230]

Ms Armstrong: The formula already takes account of the length of roads, including minor roads, which each Highways Authority is responsible for maintaining. It also takes account of traffic flow, making no distinction between traffic flow arising from residents and that arising from visitors.

Planning Appeals

Mr. Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will consult on proposed changes to the planning appeals system as part of the Government's Modernising Planning Initiative. [54978]

Mr. Caborn: I have today issued a consultation paper, and I have placed copies in the Library of the House, on our proposals for recovering the cost of holding inquiries into planning appeals as part of our drive to modernise the planning system. If implemented, this will provide the Planning Inspectorate with some additional resources to benefit the appeals system as a whole.

Costs would be recovered by means of a standard daily rate for all public local inquiries, although they would not be recovered where their imposition appears unreasonable.

Recovery of costs is already established practice for other public inquiries into development proposals covered by the Electricity Act 1989, the Harbours Act 1964 and the Transport and Works Act 1992. This change would, therefore, also bring about greater consistency in inquiry practice.

Subject to public consultation, it is proposed that this change would take effect from April 1999. It would not apply to planning applications and appeals received by the Planning Inspectorate before that date.

Roads Review

Mr. Leslie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he proposes to announce the results of the Roads Review. [55131]

Dr. Reid: I refer my hon. Friend to oral statement today, Official Report, columns 653–56.

Trunk Roads

Mr. Leslie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what provision he intends to make for investment in trunk roads in England. [55132]

Dr. Reid: I have today announced our new priorities for Trunk Road investment. Planned provision for the Highways Agency's programmes for the next three financial years is as follows:

	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02
Trunk road maintenance	651	740	794	780
Making Better Use of trunk road network	139	139	193	220
Existing Road schemes	445	350	259	137
New schemes in Targeted Programme of Improvements	0	0	51	234
Private Finance	114	177	238	208
Total	1,349	1,406	1,535	1,579

The Highways Agency will work up more detailed plans for delivering this programme which will be published as part of its normal planning cycle.

Car Use

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what account he will take of the impact of proposals set out in the Integrated Transport White Paper for reducing car use when considering proposals by county councils to construct new settlements in the countryside; and if he will make a statement. [54458]

Mr. Raynsford: We are in the process of drawing up draft planning guidance on housing and transport and will be considering this issue, among others, as part of that process.

The New Deal for Transport announced that, in updating the guidance on locations for major growth, we will give an increased emphasis on accessibility to jobs, leisure and services by foot, bicycle and public transport, including the promotion of major development in public transport corridors and other areas where good public transport exists or can be provided.

Rolling Stock

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if he will place in the Library copies of correspondence between OPRAF and the Health and Safety Executive relating to the use of mark 1 rolling stock; [54521]

(2) if he will place in the Library copies of correspondence between his Department and the Health and Safety Executive relating to the use of mark 1 rolling stock. [54522]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the future of the Channel Tunnel night-train rolling-stock. [54114]

Ms Glenda Jackson: This rolling stock is now the responsibility of the manufacturer, Metro Cammel. In the event that the rolling stock were sold on, European Night Services will take a share of any profit, which will be subject to a Government clawback.

Airport Noise

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to paragraph 4.217 of the White Paper on Transport, when measures will be put in place to mitigate noise pollution from airports; and who will bear the cost of these measures. [54116]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Measures are already in place to mitigate noise pollution from airports. At Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted certain such measures are prescribed by the Secretary of State under s.78 of the Civil Aviation Act 1982; elsewhere, by airports either independently or by agreement with local authorities through the planning system. The costs of compliance are normally borne by the aviation industry, consistent with the 'polluter pays' principle. This principle will be integral to the airports policy, which we have undertaken in the White Paper to develop.

Queensway Hall, Dunstable

Sir David Madel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will call in for determination by his Department the prospective planning application for the redevelopment of the Queensway Hall site in Dunstable; and if he will make a statement. [54052]

Mr. Caborn: No planning application for this proposal has yet been submitted. If an application is made, the Secretary of State will consider the need for call-in in the usual way.

Sir David Madel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to make a decision on the application of South Bedfordshire District Council to his Department to disregard the highest bidder for the purchase of the Queensway Hall, Dunstable; and if he will make a statement. [54051]

Mr. Caborn: We are currently considering the Council's application, and will issue our decision as soon as possible.

Transport Statistics

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make it his policy to publish complete information on central and local government expenditure on transport in Great Britain in future editions of Transport Statistics Great Britain, 1997. [54182]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Transport Statistics Great Britain (TSGB) is a compendium of Transport Statistics, generally relying on information already in the public domain.

The publication of information on central and local government expenditure in TSGB has always included summary results drawn from the most recently published editions of Scottish Transport Statistics, Welsh Transport Statistics, and DETR Annual Report: Government Expenditure Plans (or formerly The Transport Report: Government Expenditure Plans). I have no plans to change this policy, but we will continue to consult with the Welsh and Scottish Offices to ensure that TSGB contains the most up-to-date publicly available information.

Building Regulations

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list those disability organisations that have been consulted in preparing draft building regulations for life-time homes. [54041]

Mr. Raynsford: When the Department consulted on proposals to extend Part M of the Building Regulations covering access and facilities for disabled people to new housing on 12 January 1995, a list of organisations being consulted, including disability organisations, was included as an annexe to the consultation letter.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to publish draft building regulations for life-time homes; what consultations will take place on the draft regulation; and when he expects to lay final regulations before the House. [54042]

Mr. Raynsford: The Department consulted on proposals to extend Part M of the Building Regulations covering access and facilities for disabled people to new housing on 12 January 1995. I expect to lay final regulations before the House in October this year.

M4 Service Area

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to issue a decision on the report he has received from the Planning Inspectorate on the public inquiry into three applications for a motorway service area on the M4 between junction 8/9 and 10. [54710]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Inspector's Report was received on 28 July. I am not yet able to say when the decision will be issued.

Climate Change

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when the Government's consultation paper on climate change will be published; and if he will make a statement. [54219]

Mr. Meacher: We intend to issue a consultation paper shortly on policy options for delivering our climate change targets.

Energy-efficient Lighting

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the country's annual electricity consumption for lighting; and what plans he has to encourage energy-efficient lighting. [54220]

Mr. Meacher: Our most recent estimate is that lighting uses about 20 per cent. (58 TWh) of electricity in the UK, accounting for about 6.4 per cent. of UK CO_2 emissions and is projected to rise.

My department supports a comprehensive programme of national and European-wide measures to encourage energy efficient lighting. At a national level, provisions in the Building Regulations to set lighting efficiency requirements are currently being reviewed; and I have just agreed increased funding for the Best Practice Programme which, among other things, provides guidance on cost-effective energy efficiency lighting measures to building owners, equipment specifiers and users. The planned budget for the Energy Saving Trust's work to promote energy efficiency for the Department has also been increased, and a new project "Lightswitch" has been approved to promote energy efficient lighting to the non-domestic sector. The Market Transformation Programme will inform Government plans to continue to support Common and Co-ordinated Policy Measures at European level to provide product information, raise product standards and facilitate the procurement of energy efficient lighting products. We plan to introduce a regulation for the mandatory energy labelling of light bulbs next June.

Eurostar

Mr. Syms: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many paths are currently allocated for regional Eurostar services; how many of these train paths are non-operational; what is the cost of maintaining these paths; and what plans he has to release these train paths for other operational rail services. [54901]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Eurostar (UK) Ltd. have an access contract with Railtrack which provides for 2 paths on the East Coast Main Line and 3 paths on the West Coast Main line each way per day for Regional Eurostar services. As no passenger-carrying regional Eurostar services are operating at the present time, these paths are not being used by EUKL although other paths are being used for testing the trainsets. The cost of maintaining these paths is a matter for Railtrack and EUKL as would be their release for other operational rail services.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if the plans of the consortium selected to run Eurostar require regulatory approval; and if he will make a statement; [54206]

(2) what share British Airways will have of the consortium selected to run Eurostar; and if he will make a statement. [54208]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The consortium arrangements are a matter for the consortium members and will be notified separately by them to the European Commission and/or UK authorities, as the case may be, fully in accordance with relevant EU and UK competition rules. British Airways is proposing to take an initial shareholding of 10 per cent.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions who is the current owner of the regional Eurostar sets. [54205]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Eurostar (UK) Ltd. has the beneficial ownership rights to the regional Eurostar sets.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate his Department has made of (a) Eurostar's and (b) British Airways' share of the London-Paris rail/air market. [54207]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My Department have made no estimate of either Eurostar's or British Airways' share of the London-Paris rail/air market.

Shipping

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will publish the report of the Shipping Working Group on ways to promote British shipping. [53901]

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what measures he will put in place to attract commercial shipping companies away from flags of convenience. [54113]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Integrated Transport White Paper set out the broad aims of a shipping policy. A shipping paper, based on the work of the Shipping Working Group, will be published shortly.

Cycling

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he has taken in the last six months to protect the safety of cyclists, with particular reference to those on rural roads. [54910]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Forty per cent. fewer cyclists were killed or seriously injured on our roads in 1997 compared with the 1981–85 annual average. We are continuing to build on this improvement by encouraging local authorities to provide for safe cycling in their transport policies and programmes. £50 million funding was made available in 1998–99 for local safety schemes and traffic calming measures which have proven safety benefits for vulnerable road users, including cyclists. It is for local authorities to decide on which roads their work to improve the safety of cyclists will be most effective.

We have also continued with our road safety education, publicity and research projects concerning cyclists' safety.

Rough Sleepers

Sir Raymond Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many homeless people have used Admiralty Arch (a) in total and (b) in each week since the homeless unit's establishment. [54707]

Mr. Raynsford: Last winter Admiralty Arch was used by Centrepoint as one of the temporary winter shelters for rough sleepers funded by the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions as part of the Government's Winter Shelter Programme. Almost 500 additional beds for rough sleepers were provided in London as part of the Winter Shelter Programme and about 50 in Bristol and Cambridge. The Admiralty Arch shelter provided 60 beds and was open from 15 December 1997 to 31 March 1998. During that time a total of 253 admissions were made by 234 individuals. Weekly breakdown figures are not available but for each month the shelter was open the average daily occupancy figures were:

December 1997: 28.37 beds occupied

January 1998: 45.22 beds occupied

February 1998: 44.5 beds occupied

March 1998: 37 beds occupied

The figures for December and March are lower due to staggered opening and phased closing.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to the Green Paper Cm. 3805, New Ambitions for our Country: A New Contract for Welfare, (p84), what is the number of people sleeping rough at present, and what it was in April 1997 and March 1998. [54592]

Mr. Raynsford: Information on the number of people sleeping rough is not collected by the Department. The last systematic count was undertaken as part of the 1991 Census of Population and found 2,674 people sleeping rough on Census night in England. The recent Social Exclusion Unit report Rough Sleeping Cm 4008 reviewed more recent information collected through twice yearly street counts in central London and ad hoc counts in various other towns and cities undertaken by the voluntary sector, and estimated that around 2,000 people sleep rough in England each night.

Fatal Accidents (Manslaughter charges)

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many manslaughter charges have been brought following fatal accidents at work in each of the last 10 years; how many have been brought against (a) employees and (b) managers; and how many have resulted in convictions. [54846]

Mr. Meale: The number of manslaughter charges brought following fatal accidents at work which have been investigated by the Health and Safety Executive (HSE), and the outcome, in each of the last six years is as follows:

	Manslaughter charges
Year	Against employees	Against managers	Convictions
1992–93	—	—	—
1994–95	1	4	1
1995–96	1	—	—
1996–97	—	2	—

HSE has not collated data for previous years.

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many manslaughter charges have been brought following fatal rail crashes in each of the last 10 years; how many have been brought against (a) drivers and (b) managers; and how many have resulted in convictions. [54845]

Mr. Meale: A train driver was charged with manslaughter and convicted following a fatal rail crash on 4 March 1989. Following a further fatal crash on 8 August 1996 charges were laid against a driver who was subsequently found not guilty. A driver has also been charged following a fatal crash on 19 September 1997. There have been no manslaughter charges brought against managers in this period.

Stockton University

Ms Dari Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he has reached a decision on grants to the University of Stockton. [54977]

Mr. Caborn: I am pleased to advise my hon. Friend that I have today given my approval to the payment of two grants to the University College Stockton; £800,000 to endow a Chair in Urban Regeneration and Change, and £500,000 towards the construction of amenity facilities for staff and students.

I firmly believe that expanding higher education facilities into areas of economic and social disadvantage makes a vital contribution towards their development and regeneration.

Coastguard

Mr. McNulty: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will announce his decision on the outcome of consultation on HM Coastguard's five-year strategy; and if he will make a statement in the context of the Maritime and Coastguard Agency merger. [55233]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Following extensive consultation which included staff, trades unions and members of the House, and in the light of the new Maritime and Coastguard Agency created on 1 April, I have decided that the 5-year Coastguard strategy will be taken forward as proposed, though with some changes in timing.

The 5-year strategy involves a major investment o £5 million-£10 million in new digital technology to re-equip and improve the operation of a major rescue service. The new equipment will provide an integrated communications system, replacing outdated equipment which is approaching life-expiry. Associated with the new investment is a programme to close selected Coastguard co-ordination centres which will effectively be replaced by the greater capability of the new equipment. The timing of these closures has also been revised following the consultation process. The centres at Oban and Pentland were proposed for closure by the end of 1999, and this has been revised to Autumn 2000; for Tyne Tees and Liverpool the proposed closure date by the end of 2000 has been revised to Autumn 2001; while the co-location of Portland and Lee on Solent, formerly proposed for the end of 2002, has been revised to Autumn 2003.

The new equipment will provide more effective backup to the frontline Coastguard whose local knowledge will be supported by modern technology. In view of interest in the relationship between the new technology and the station closures, we will keep the reequipment programme under close monitoring to ensure high standards of service are maintained.

I have arranged for copies of the Operational Research Unit's analysis of responses to the consultation document to be placed in the Library of each House.

I have also agreed proposals for management changes within the Maritime and Coastguard Agency which will yield further progress in the closer integration of its two predecessor agencies, to the benefit of all the new Agency's customers.

British Transport Police

Mr. Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what are the Government's proposals for the future of the British Transport Police. [55234]

Dr. Reid: The British Railways Board are currently under a duty to maintain a railway police force for the national railway, the London Underground and the Docklands Light Railway (DLR) and are in consequence the employer of the British Transport Police (BTP). In order to improve the public status and accountability of the force, the Government have decided, when a suitable legislative opportunity arises, to seek to establish an independent national police authority for the BTP on similar lines to the existing police authorities for Home Office forces, with its members appointed by the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions.

The Force's jurisdiction on railway land at present depends on contracts with the privatised rail industry. These contracts can cause problems in defining jurisdiction (eg to company premises which are not part of the railway network and are already properly policed by Home Office forces), they can overlap and there are parts of the network which are not covered. The proposed legislation would seek to put the jurisdiction of the force on all railway land (including the London Underground and the DLR) on a statutory basis.

In 1996 Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary recommended extending the BTP's jurisdiction outside the railway in three specific circumstances: when called on for assistance by a Home Office police officer, when called on for assistance by a member of the public, and in an emergency. The Home Office are undertaking a further consultation exercise with a view to assessing the acceptability of such an extension of jurisdiction.

Public Safety Zones

Maria Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what decisions he has reached on public safety zone policy and administration following the public consultation. [54628]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We received about 100 responses to the consultation document which we published last December and I am grateful to all those who replied. The broad policy objective, that once a Public Safety Zone has been established, there should be no significant increase in the number of people living, working or congregating within it, remains unchanged. In general the consultation responses supported the proposed adoption of a policy based on risk contour modelling and setting limits on the degree of risk which is tolerable for people on the ground near airports.

We have therefore decided to use risk contour modelling as a basis for developing Public Safety Zone policy. This will mean the introduction of Zones which will taper from the runway end, in contrast to the current Zones which broaden out from it. In setting the areas of the Zones we shall make broad assumptions about the number and type of aircraft movements at the respective airports in fifteen years time; and we shall roll these assumptions forward every ten years. This will provide a sensible balance between imposing unduly onerous controls on the use of land around airports and failing to anticipate the effects on third party risk of the forecast increase of aircraft movements.

We consider that Public Safety Zones should correspond essentially to the areas which may be expected to experience individual risk of death of 1 in 100,000 per year or greater in fifteen years time. We shall redefine the existing Public Safety Zones accordingly. A decision on whether to have a few standard sizes of Public Safety Zone or separate sizes for each airport will be taken later.

We shall prepare and publish guidance to local planning authorities for use in considering planning applications arising within Public Safety Zones. The guidance will recommend that new housing development, and most types of non-housing development, should not be approved within Public Safety Zones. We intend to go ahead with the proposal that existing development need be removed only where people would be subject to an individual risk of death of 1 in 10,000 per year or greater.

We have also considered with the Civil Aviation Authority the future administration of Public Safety Zone policy. At present a planning application arising within Public Safety Zones is notified to the CAA, which advises local planning authorities whether it should be approved. The CAA has carried out this function on behalf of the Department for many years but now wishes to relinquish it. We are minded that the CAA's role should be discontinued and that the residual work in administering the policy should be transferred to the Department. We shall consult those concerned about this proposal.

Our objective is to introduce these new arrangements as early as possible in 1999. Meanwhile in considering planning applications within existing Public Safety Zones the CAA will have regard to whether the site in question is likely to remain within a Public Safety Zone.

Cowboy Builders

Mr. Hope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how he intends to take forward the proposals contained in his Department's consultation paper "Combating Cowboy Builders". [54875]

Mr. Raynsford: I am pleased to announce the formation of a working group chaired by Anthony Merricks CBE to drive forward the Government's campaign against cowboy builders.

This follows the publication of our consultation paper "Combating Cowboy Builders" to which we received over 130 responses from the construction industry, local government and consumer interests.

The tone of these responses, a summary of which I am placing in the Library, was very encouraging, with the overwhelming majority supporting the two key proposals in the consultation paper: the development of an approved list (or lists) of reputable contractors to empower consumers; and a kitemark or badge of quality which would indicate that a trader subscribed to agreed standards of quality backed by a warranty and an effective means of redress if things go wrong.

The new working group's terms of reference include a commitment to deliver a tangible outcome by this time next year. It will include key representatives from the construction industry, local government, consumer interests and the insurance industry.

Compost

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what action he proposes to take to develop the markets for compost. [54942]

Mr. Meacher: A Composting Development Group was established last year to identify the problems and obstacles of marketing compost to a range of sectors, including landscaping, horticulture, agriculture and land restoration, and to develop proposals for overcoming them. The Group, whose members were drawn from the composting industry, research organisations, agricultural and composting trade associations, and central government, has completed its discussions and submitted its report to DETR Ministers.

It contains a number of proposals for improving the markets for compost, including the need to agree national standards to cover both the product and the process, and to develop a coherent and comprehensive programme of publicity and information measures, supported by research, demonstrations and trials, to improve public perception. The report recommends that securing the participation and cooperation of professional institutes and trade associations is the key to gaining greater access to individual sectors.

It also proposes that compost producers develop a more innovative approach, for example by setting up temporary on-site composting schemes to restore land, or by local authority producers maximising the use of compost in their own parks and gardens. I am today issuing the report for consultation, and will consider its recommendations in the light of comments received. Copies are being placed in the Library of the House.

The increased composting of organic waste has an important part to play in an integrated approach to sustainable waste management, and to meeting the targets of the landfill directive. I welcome the Group's report as a positive contribution to developing the markets for compost, and am grateful to its members for the time and effort they have put into the Group's work.

British Railways (Surplus Land)

Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how the BR board are to conduct their review of surplus land. [54943]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government announced in the White Paper "A New Deal For Transport: Better for Everyone" that the British Railways Board was suspending land sales while it conducted an audit of the remaining sites. These amount to some 1,200, with a book value of about £137 million.

The Board will immediately enter into discussions with key players in the rail industry on the latter's plans for the future. It will report to the Government, as the review progresses, on sites which in the light of these discussions appear to the Board to have a realistic prospect of use for transport purposes in the foreseeable future, so that they may in due course be offered for sale to Railtrack, the rail businesses, other transport operators and relevant local authorities at open market value.

Sites which appear to the Board to have no realistic use for transport purposes in the foreseeable future will be put on sale, but local authorities and the rail industry will be given at least two months notice of the intention to sell any site in the category so that they will still have full opportunity to bid for it. The Board will consider sympathetically any request to delay the sale of such a site where it can be shown that a transport use is already under active consideration.

Fastship Project

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the impact of the Fastship project. [53964]

Mr. Spellar: I have been asked to reply.

I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Public Appointments

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the President of the Council if he will make a statement on his policy in respect of the organisations which are requested to suggest names for public appointment. [53383]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: I have been asked to reply.

I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before the Summer Recess. I shall therefore write to my hon. Friend and will place a copy of the letter in the Library of the House.

Departmental Publications

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many of his Department's publications have been made available in (a) Braille, (b) audio tape and (c) large print in 1997 98; and what percentage of the total number of publications this represents. [54262]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before the Summer Recess. I shall therefore write to the hon. Member and will place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Electronic Red Box

Mr. Chope: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Lichfield (Mr. Fabricant) of 8 July 1998, Official Report, column 567, on the electronic red box, if the new prototype is now in use in his office, and if he will make a statement. [54577]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: I am aware of the innovative work done by my predecessor my right hon. Friend the Member for South Shields (Dr. Clark). The prototype is not currently in use in my office.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Chope: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Bournemouth, East (Mr. Atkinson) of 8 July 1998, Official Report, column 565, on millennium compliance, if he will write to all hon. Members during the summer to report the results of the next quarterly report. [54515]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before the Summer Recess. I shall therefore write to the hon. Member and will place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, pursuant to his answer of 30 March 1998, Official Report, column 379, on departmental transport arrangements, what further changes he has made. [54020]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before the Summer Recess. I shall therefore write to the hon. Member and will place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Cabinet Office

Sir Raymond Powell: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) what is the estimated cost of relocating part of the Cabinet Office including the new Performance and Innovation Unit and the Centre for Management and Policy Studies in Admiralty Arch; [54705]

(2) what is the estimated cost of setting up the new Centre for Management and Policy Studies in the Cabinet Office; and how many additional civil servants will be employed; [54703]

(3) what will be the effect of the proposed Cabinet Office move to Admiralty Arch on the homeless unit currently there; how many homeless persons are currently in Admiralty Arch; and what efforts have been made to rehouse them. [54706]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before the Summer Recess. I shall therefore write to my hon. Friend and will place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Departmental Vehicles

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how much his Department expects to spend in each year from 1998 99 to 2000 01 on vehicle replacements. [54907]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before the Summer Recess. I shall therefore write to the hon. Member and will place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Correspondence

Mr. McNulty: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he will publish the latest figures on his Department's handling of correspondence from hon. Members; and if he will make a statement. [55134]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: Figures showing the volume of correspondence received by Ministers and Agency Chief Executives from hon. Members in 1997, the targets set for reply and the percentage of replies sent within target are set out in the table. The table also includes comparative figures for 1996—first published on 17 June 1997, Official Report, columns 107–12.

The Government attach great importance to the effective handling by departments of correspondence from hon. Members, and individual Ministers have already taken action to improve response times where their department's performance has not been satisfactory. However, the nature of correspondence and caseload varies greatly between departments and between agencies. In some departments and agencies, for example, a high proportion of correspondence requires reference to individual casework before a reply can be sent. Targets are set to reflect the particular circumstances of departments and agencies and performance against target is not therefore directly comparable. My Department will be producing shortly central guidance for all departments and agencies reminding them of the correct procedures to be followed when handling Ministerial correspondence.

Notes on 1997 Figures

[1] The Intervention Board is not a MAFF Agency but a separate Government Department reporting to MAFF Ministers

[2] Includes correspondence from MPs to the then Deputy Prime Minister

[3] Figures from 1 May 1997 to 31 December 1997

[4] The Department of National Heritage was renamed the Department for Culture, Media and Sport on 14 July 1997

[5] Includes all Ministerial replies, not only replies to Members of Parliament

[7] The Overseas Development Administration became the Department for International Development on 1 May 1997

[8] Since 1 May 1997, DFID no longer handles correspondence on political matters in Africa. 1996 and 1997 figures are therefore not directly comparable

[9] The former DOE and DOT merged on 1 May 1997 to form the DETR. 1996 correspondence figures for the former DOE and DOT have been added together for ease of reference

[10] 74 per cent. of letters were replied to within 20 working days

[11] In addition, the FCO's migration and visa department received 9,818 letters direct from MPs in 1997, of which 42 per cent. were replied to within 15 working days

[12] HM Prison Service DG cases

[13] UK Passport Agency DG cases

[14] Includes letters from January 1997 where the target time was reduced for IND and UKPA cases from 25 to 15 working days. Excludes letters where Agency Chief Executives have replied on Ministers' behalf

[15] Includes letters from February 1997 where the target time was reduced for HMP cases from 25 to 20 working days. Excludes letters where Agency Chief Executives have replied on Ministers' behalf

[16] The Home Office is reviewing its procedures and has appointed a team to improve the timeliness of Ministerial replies and to establish that its statistics are prepared on the same basis as other departments

[17] Head Office figures

[18] 'Local Office and 'delegated' figures (where local officials reply direct to MPs)

[19] This figure excludes letters which were subsequently replied to by the Director of Public Prosecutions

[21] Includes letters where the Chief Executive has replied on Ministers' behalf

[22] Excludes DOE (NI) which received 368 letters from MPs in 1997 (77 per cent. of which were replied to within 8-15 working days). The figures given in the table, however, include an element of all letters which received a Ministerial reply, where figures for MPs' letters only were not held separately

[25] The 1996 figures are taken from the Official Report, 17 June 1997, columns 107-112. Please also refer to notes given with that reply. Departments and Agencies which received a total of between 1 and 10 letters from MPs during 1997 are not shown in this table

Service Standards

Mr. McNulty: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the performance of the main departments and agencies against the six service standards for central Government. [55135]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: The six standards came into effect on 1 April 1997. An analysis of the main departments' performance over the 12 months to 31 March 1998 showed that they generally had both telephone inquiry points and complaints procedures in place, were consulting their users, and were trying to make their services more accessible, for example, through greater use of new technology and the publication of information in minority languages. On appointments, the results showed that people were generally seen within 10 minutes of a pre-arranged appointment.

The performance of the main departments and agencies in responding to letters from the public is set out in the table.

[2] Figures relate to correspondence addressed to Ministers.
[3] Correspondence addressed to Ministers, e-mailed to the MOD web site, and mail on defence issues received by other departments between 1 August 1997 and 31 March 1998.
[4] As a result of the large increase in correspondence after the General Election it was often impossible for letters to be passed to the answering division within 15 days. Consequently many parts of the Department have interpreted the target as being a response within 15 days of receipt in the responding division, rather than from when the letter was actually received in the Department.
[6] Includes all Home Office agencies except the Prison Service.
[7] This is the number of items of post received by the Department's network of offices.
[8] Holding replies are not counted in order to maximise the incentive to issue full replies quickly.
[9] Includes all Northern Ireland departments' agencies except the Prison Service, and the CSA(NI) and SSA(NI) whose performance is shown separately.
[10] In addition 17,151 letters were received from DSS HQ but were passed on to the Department's executive agencies for reply and are therefore included in the agencies' return.
[11] Total volumes are not recorded. Performance is calculated through a sample, which in 1997–98 was just under 25,000 letters.
[12] Total volume not known. The performance against target was calculated by evaluating 4,000 letters sent out by a research company. In the same period some 780 letters were received addressed to Ministers - 80.6 per cent. of these were cleared within 15 days.

I will be placing a more detailed summary of performance by the main departments and agencies against the six standards in the Libraries of the House. I believe the Whitehall Standards are an important tool for improving the quality of Central Government services. This is the first time such information has been made available. It shows our commitment to open government and to reporting transparently on our performance. We plan to retain the standards in their present form until 31 March 1999, when they will be reviewed and if necessary revised.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

(2) if he will define the phrase, "very high earning individuals" used in paragraph 2 of the Inland Revenue Press Release 33 of 17 March. [46402]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 18 June 1998]: As I explained in my answer of 11 June, there is no standard definition of what constitutes very high earnings.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from the Inland Revenue on the feasibility of delivering the working families tax credit via the PAYE system; and if he will place a copy of any such representations in the Library. [50252]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 13 July 1998]: The advice of officials to Ministers is confidential, but I can refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Hove (Mr. Caplin) on 9 July 1998, Official Report, column 576, on the question of how the WFTC will be delivered to employees.

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what date he has set for achieving the target of an £180 per week income for all working families with a full-time worker under the working families tax credit scheme. [53115]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 28 July 1998]: The WFTC will guarantee an income of £180 for families with a full time worker from when it is introduced in October 1999.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimates he has made of the number of people expected to be entitled to, and to claim, the working families tax credit in Scotland. [53172]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 28 July 1998]: It is estimated that in 2000–01, the first full year of WFTC, around 130,000 families in Scotland will be in receipt of WFTC and we intend to ensure that as many families as are entitled receive the tax credit.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which computer system will be used to collect (a) tax and national insurance information and (b) information required under the working families tax credit; and which company/consortium has been awarded the contract to oversee the computer system. [52747]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 28 July 1998]: The current, separate, IT systems for collecting tax and NIC will continue to be used and the Working Family Tax Credit will build on existing Family Credit IT systems. The current IT support for Family Credit will transfer to the Inland Revenue to enable them to successfully deliver the Working Family Tax Credit. There has been no new award of contracts resulting from Working Family Tax Credits or the proposed merger of The Contributions Agency.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what systems have been set up to allow for direct payments from the Inland Revenue of the working families tax credit where the credit is not made through the pay packet. [52803]

Dawn Primarolo: I regret that it has not been possible to provide a substantive answer before the summer recess. I shall write to the hon. Member shortly and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people are expected to be eligible for, and to claim, the child care credit within the working families tax credit; and if his Department has estimated the costs involved in Scotland. [53173]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 28 July 1998]: I regret that it has not been possible to provide a substantive answer before the summer recess. I shall write to the hon. Member shortly and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 16 June 1998, Official Report, column 133–34, if he will give the corresponding figures for a single earner married couple with one child aged four years. [53692]

Dawn Primarolo: The table shows the net income (after income tax, including WFTC, NICs and child benefit), and equivalised net income, of a single earner married couple with 1 child aged 4, at different levels of gross income, with an additional £48.80 of basic WFTC.

£ per week

Single earner married couple (1 child aged 4)
Gross Income	150	200	250	300	350	400
Net Income (after taxes and benefits)	245.73	260.99	276.07	291.14	306.22	321.29
Equivalised Net Income	208.25	221.18	233.96	246.73	259.51	272.28

The figures include the effect of Budget measures taking effect in 1999–2000 (abolishing the employee NICs entry fee, MCA at 10 per cent. and £2.50 additional child benefit for the first child, although at 1998–99 levels of tax and benefits.

The data assume that the earner in the household is working over 30 hours a week for Working Family Tax Credit purposes; that earnings are from employment; and that there are no other sources of income.

The Standard McClements scales have been used to determine equivalised income. This is the same process that is used in the DSS's Households Below Average Income publication.At some levels of earnings this family may also be entitled to housing benefit and council tax benefit. However, as this will depend upon the composition of the housing costs (between mortgage payments, council tax, and rent), housing benefit and council tax benefit have been left out of these figures.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the basis for his assumption that 20 per cent. of the working families tax credit is to be accounted for as tax forgone. [53720]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 30 July 1998]: The assumption that 20 per cent. of the Working Families Tax Credit will be accounted for as tax forgone is based on an estimate of the proportion of WFTC payments which are paid up to an individual's gross income tax liability. WFTC payments paid over an individual's gross income tax liability will be accounted for as expenditure in the national accounts, under current conventions.

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the Treasury has reached agreement with the Office for National Statistics on the treatment of the working families tax credit for the purposes of the national accounts. [54121]

Mr. Byers: Decisions on classification for the national accounts are for Office for National Statistics alone following international standards.

International Debt

Mr. Reed: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will list by country the value of the outstanding debts on (a) United Kingdom aid loans and (b) loans guaranteed by the British Government through the ECGD for (i) each developing country which reports under the Debtor reporting System of the World Bank, (ii) Afghanistan, (iii) Antigua and Barbuda, (iv) Bahrain, (v) Cuba, (vi) Gibraltar, (vii) Iraq, (viii) Kiribati, (ix) the Democratic Republic of Korea, (x) Libya, (xi) Namibia, (xii) Saudi Arabia and (xiii) Surinam; [51422]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 20 July 1998]: I regret that it has not been possible to provide a substantive answer before the summer recess. I shall write to my hon. Friend shortly and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will estimate the cost of reducing VAT on domestic fuel for, and estimate the benefit to, (a) non-pensioners, (b) pensioners on income support and (c) pensioners not on income support; [52035]

(2) if he will estimate the average annual benefit for households that include (a) a person on income support, (b) a person paying higher rate tax and (c) no person on income support and no person paying higher rate tax, of reducing VAT on domestic fuel. [52036]

Mr. Healey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people his Department is committed to employing during 1998 under (a) the subsidised job option and (b) the unsubsidised job option of the New Deal programme. [52591]

Ms Hewitt: As a major UK employer, Government departments are being actively encouraged to consider the important supply of potential new recruits that New Deal can offer. So far as the Chancellor's main departments are concerned, the Inland Revenue will have a programme in place this autumn under which it hopes to employ over 100 people in subsidised jobs in the first full year, more if there are people who fit the department's needs. About 30 people will be in post by the end of December. Customs and Excise expect to recruit up to 6 people into unsubsidised jobs over the next year. HM Treasury, though not undertaking much recruitment at the moment, will recruit at least one person from the New Deal Gateway into an unsubsidised job, before the end of the year. Of the Chancellor's smaller departments, the Office for National Statistics (ONS) hopes to recruit up to 11 staff in subsidised jobs.

Charities' Taxation

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many representations he has received from charities about the abolition of the repayment of dividend tax credits; and if he will list the individual organisations, indicating how many (a) supported and (b) opposed the policy. [52552]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 27 July 1998]: About 250 charities, many in response to the Charities Taxation Review, have written asking for changes to the current treatment of dividend tax credits. We have made generous transitional arrangements to help charities adjust to the withdrawal of payable tax credits.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he plans to answer Mr. Eason's letter of 19 May regarding the McKinsey report. [52722]

Ms Hewitt: The Treasury has no record of having received Mr. Eason's letter. I will be happy to respond promptly when I do receive it.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Spelthorne of 20 January, concerning Mr. F. R. Cannings of Ashford, Middlesex, reference 1/03342/1998. [53797]

Ms Hewitt: [holding answer 30 July 1998]: I regret the long delay in replying to this letter. The correspondence was unfortunately mislaid due to a problem with the computer system used to handle Ministerial correspondence between the Inland Revenue and the Treasury. In view of its subject matter, the correspondence has now been passed to my right hon. Friend the President of the Council and Leader of the House and I understand the hon. Member can expect to receive a reply in the near future.

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the hon. Member for Walsall, North will receive a reply to his letter dated 22 June regarding a constituent (ref: O603/19). [54100]

Dawn Primarolo: I replied to my hon. Friend's letter on 28 July.

Dawn Primarolo: I have received a number of representations which have been taken into account by Customs and Excise.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the total revenue forgone from 1 April to 30 June as a result of the withdrawal of the VAT (Sport, Sports Competitions and Physical Education) Order 1998. [53331]

Dawn Primarolo: Customs and Excise estimate the avoidance of VAT during that period to have been £2 million.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects the redrafting of the VAT (Sport, Sports Competitions and Physical Education) Order 1998 to be completed; and if he will make a statement. [53335]

Dawn Primarolo: Customs and Excise will consult on any proposals before a further announcement is made.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received regarding VAT treatment for sporting facilities provided by (a) local authorities and (b) private individuals and organisations. [53332]

Dawn Primarolo: I have received a number of representations concerning the VAT treatment of sporting facilities and the VAT (Sport, Sports Competitions and Physical Education) Order 1998.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to Her Majesty's Customs and Excise News Release 06/98, when the consultation exercise regarding VAT exemption on sporting services commenced; and when it will be completed. [53334]

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the revised draft order on the VAT treatment of sports clubs will be published for consultation. [52856]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 29 July 1998]: The arrangements for the consultation exercise will be announced by means of a Customs and Excise News Release.

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate his Department has made of revenue which would accrue from the taxation of disability living allowance. [53035]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 28 July 1998]: I regret that it has not been possible to provide a substantive answer before the summer recess. I shall write to the hon. Member shortly and a place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Small Businesses

Mr. Gale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proposals he has to stimulate investment in and expansion of small business; what consideration he has given to allowing the retention of profits for the purpose of investment in and the expansion of small businesses; and if he will make a statement. [53124]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 28 July 1998]: The Government announced in the Comprehensive Spending Review that they will refocus business support programmes to promote innovation and enterprise, with a particular emphasis on small and medium-sized enterprises that have the potential for high growth.

The Government said in the last Budget that they will continue to examine how best to create an environment which encourages investment by small and medium-sized businesses. This includes reviewing the case for continuing with enhanced capital allowances.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures he will take to ensure that the tax take on small businesses is redistributed to provide incentives for the retention of earnings for investment. [54941]

Dawn Primarolo: I cannot anticipate my right hon. Friend's Budget Statement.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the extent of tax barriers to long-term investment in small companies. [54940]

Dawn Primarolo: The Capital Gains Tax regime encourages long-term investment in all companies, irrespective of their size.

Compliance Cost Assessments

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what cumulative net increase in compliance costs has been estimated in compliance cost assessments published by his Department since 1 May 1997. [52963]

Ms Hewitt: [holding answer 28 July 1998]: The estimated net cumulative increase in compliance costs assessments published by the Chancellor's departments during the period 1 May 1997 to 30 June 1998 is as follows:

Recurring: £7 million

Non-recurring: In the range of £44 million-£94 million.

Of the non-recurring costs, some £25 million to £75 million is accounted for by the Modernisation of the Transfer Pricing Legislation arising out of the Finance (No.2) Bill 1998. This estimate is based on the minimum and maximum cost figures arising from consultation with parties who would be affected by the legislation and represents best and worst case assumptions.

Inland Revenue Office, Evesham

Mr. Luff: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the future of the Evesham Inland Revenue Office. [52735]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 28 July 1998]: I regret that it has not been possible to provide a substantive answer before the summer recess. I shall write to the hon. Member shortly and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Least Cost Procurement

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the Secretary of State for Defence has agreed his Department's proposals for least cost procurement. [52799]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 28 July 1998]: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given to him by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence on 20 July 1998, Official Report, column 430.

Government Receipts

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were the receipts from (a) tobacco duty, (b) alcohol duty and (c) other duties expressed (i) in cash terms, (ii) at June 1998 prices and (iii) as a percentage of total Government receipts for each year since 1982–83. [53208]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 29 July 1998]: The figures for (a) tobacco are as follows:

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what were the receipts from (a) inheritance tax and (b) corporation tax expressed (i) in cash terms, (ii) at June 1998 prices and (iii) as a percentage of total Government receipts for each year since 1982–83; [53206]

(2) what were the receipts from (a) income tax and (b) capital gains tax expressed (i) in cash terms, (ii) at June 1998 prices and (iii) as a percentage of total Government receipts for each year since 1982–83. [53205]

Aircraft and Ship Sales

Mr. Goggins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the implementation of the opinion of the European Commission on the successor regime for duty and tax-paid sales on aircraft and ships after the end of June 1999 will require a change in (a) EU and (b) United Kingdom law. [52536]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 29 July 1998]: The Commission's view is that there is no requirement for a change in EU legislation in order to enact their suggestion for the successor regime and it has said that, to the extent necessary, certain legal provisions may be disregarded by mutual agreement. The UK has reserved its position on this to examine all options.

Dividend Tax Credits

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the Government will issue a statement on the ability of non-taxpayers to claim tax credits on dividend income. [53969]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the answers given by my hon. Friend the Paymaster General to the hon. Member for Sutton and Cheam (Mr. Burstow) on 23 July 1998, Official Report, column 652, and 28 July 1998, Official Report, column 217.

Children's Fund

Mrs. May: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which Department will have prime responsibility for administering the children's fund. [53890]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 30 July 1998]: The Children's Fund will be set up to fund Sure Start, a new programme for 0–3 year olds and their families in areas of need. It will be located on the budget of the Department for Education and Employment and administered by new inter-departmental arrangements.

VAT Group Treatment

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated annual lost revenue resulting from VAT avoidance from schemes using the VAT grouping concessions. [53721]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 30 July 1998]: There is no reliable estimate of the VAT loss arising from exploitation of the grouping facility for tax avoidance purposes. The revenue cost of the normal operation of the facility has been estimated at £400 million.

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what estimate his Department has made of the additional revenue which will be raised from (a) the education sector, (b) the health sector, (c) the property industry, (d) the banking sector, (e) the financial services industry, (f) the insurance industry and (g) charities as a result of the restriction of VAT group treatment to fully-taxable corporate bodies; [54693]

(2) what amount of additional revenue will be raised by the Government's proposals to restrict VAT group treatment to fully-taxable corporate bodies; [54840]

(3) what estimate his Department has made of the effect on customer charges for financial services products of the restriction of VAT group treatment to fully-taxable corporate bodies; [54701]

(4) what basis the estimated revenue cost of £400 million of current VAT grouping structures is calculated; [54819]

(5) what research the Treasury has carried out since 1 May 1997 on the revenue cost of current VAT grouping structures; [54837]

(6) what estimate his Department has made of the (a) compliance costs and (b) restructuring costs resulting from the restriction of VAT group treatment to fully taxable corporate bodies. [54832]

Dawn Primarolo: No reliable or up-to-date estimates exist of the costs associated with the VAT grouping facility, either for business or the Exchequer. It is one of the main purposes of the consultation process that the extent of such costs, and the associated revenue implications, should be established. As part of this process Customs and Excise will be meeting representatives from a number of key business sectors in the autumn to discuss, in detail, these and other aspects of the proposal to restrict the VAT grouping facility.

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the rules relating to VAT group treatment in each other member state of the European Union. [54694]

Dawn Primarolo: VAT grouping facilities exist in eight of the fifteen member States of the EU: Austria, Denmark, Finland, Germany, the Netherlands, the Republic of Ireland, Sweden and the United Kingdom. Germany and the Netherlands operate systems which are obligatory and which encompass the entire corporate group. In Sweden and Finland grouping is restricted to the financial sector. The Danish facility is broadly similar to the current system operated in the UK. VAT grouping in the Republic of Ireland is granted at the absolute discretion of the Revenue Commissioners.

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions have taken place with other European Ministers about the harmonisation of VAT rates; and if he will make a statement. [54633]

Dawn Primarolo: There have been no recent discussions in ECOFIN about the harmonisation of VAT rates. However, the European Commission's suggestion for an optional reduced rate of VAT for some local, labour-intensive services was discussed at February's ECOFIN.

Any change to the EC VAT system requires the unanimous agreement of member states. The Government, while supportive of efforts to simplify and modernise the current European Community VAT system, are opposed to further harmonisation at the Community level.

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what estimate his Department has made of the level of abuse of the current rules on VAT grouping in order to avoid tax; and how much tax he estimates to have been lost as a result of this abuse; [54831]

(2) how much of the revenue raised by the Government's proposals to restrict VAT group treatment to fully-taxable corporate bodies will come from closing down tax avoidance schemes. [54839]

Dawn Primarolo: There is no reliable estimate of the VAT loss arising from exploitation of the grouping facility for tax avoidance purposes. The revenue cost of the normal operation of the facility has been estimated at £400 million.

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with other European Finance Ministers about the proposed changes to the VAT grouping rules. [54695]

Dawn Primarolo: No such discussions have been held.

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what estimate his Department has made of the number of companies which because of regulatory requirements cannot restructure their organisation to avoid being affected by the proposed restriction of VAT group treatment to fully-taxable corporate bodies; [54696]

(2) what estimate his Department has made of the number of companies which will be able to restructure their organisation to avoid being affected by the proposed restriction of VAT group treatment to fully-taxable corporate bodies; [54697]

(3) how many companies, broken down by sector, will be affected by the Government's proposals to restrict VAT group treatment to fully taxable corporate bodies. [54838]

Dawn Primarolo: There are no detailed estimates as to the number of companies which would be affected by the proposal to restrict VAT grouping. The main purposes of the consultation process are to give businesses the opportunity to comment in detail on the potential implications that such a proposal would have for them and to obtain better information about the numbers and types of companies affected.

Taxation (Guernsey)

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will enter into negotiations with the Government of Guernsey to alter the United Kingdom's tax treaty with Guernsey so that the treatment of dividends from Guernsey companies is put on an equal footing with tax dividends from other EU countries. [53809]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 30 July 1998]: I am not clear what the hon. Member has in mind. The tax treatment of a dividend paid by a Guernsey company and received in the UK is no different from the tax treatment of a dividend payable by a company resident in an EU country. In both cases, where the recipient of the dividend is a UK resident company which controls at least 10 per cent. of the voting power in the company paying the dividend, tax credit relief is allowed for the amount of tax actually paid on the profits out of which the dividend is paid; a UK resident individual is not entitled to such relief.

Persistent Inquirers

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which of his agencies have procedures to identify persistent inquirers for information. [53955]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executives of the Royal Mint, the Valuation Office, the Debt Management Office, National Savings and the Office for National Statistics. I have asked each of them to reply directly.

Letter from Allan E. Pearce to Mr. Adrian Sanders, dated 31 July 1998:

Thank you for your recent question to the Chancellor of the Exchequer regarding procedures to identify persistent inquirers. I am replying on behalf of the Chief Executive of the Royal Mint.

Whilst we do on occasion receive calls from persistent inquirers, the Mint does not monitor these independently of general enquiries.

I hope you will find this reply helpful.

Letter from Michael A. Johns to Mr. Adrian Sanders, dated 31 July 1998:

I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question to the Chancellor (ref 53955) where you ask which of his agencies have procedures to identify persistent inquiries for information.

The Valuation Office Agency monitors correspondence which requires a substantive reply, but we do not log incoming telephone calls.

We do not have specific procedures in place to identify persistent inquiries as we have not experienced any problems with this to date.

I trust that this answers your query, but if I can help further please let me know.

Letter from Mike Williams to Mr. Adrian Sanders, dated 31 July 1998:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply direct to the Parliamentary Question you asked about procedures for identifying persistent inquiries for information, insofar as it relates to the UK Debt Management Office ("DMO").

The DMO does not maintain a formal record of persistent telephone inquirers although, by the nature of our business, we have a large number of regular telephone inquirers and monitor informally the sources of all telephone inquiries made. The great majority of inquiries from the general public are seeking factual information on gilt-edged stock.

We do maintain a formal record of all written inquiries to the DMO and have a published target deadline within which to respond to these. A written acknowledgement will be sent to inquirers within two weeks of the receipt of the correspondence and, for at least 95 per cent. of inquirers, a substantive reply will be sent within four weeks.

Letter from Peter Bareau to Mr. Adrian Sanders, dated 31 July 1998:

I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question 53955 about whether National Savings has procedures to identify persistent inquiries for information.

National Savings receives thousands of calls for information each day from savers. We keep records of many of the calls, but do not monitor specifically for calls from persistent inquirers.

National Savings does, however, keep a record of the main subjects of inquiry and ensures that the staff who handle inquiries are equipped to deal with them.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Adrian Sanders, dated 31 July 1998:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent question on Treasury agencies having procedures to identify persistent inquiries for information.

The ONS Public Enquiry Line staff record the total number of calls they have answered. However, whilst they do receive calls from persistent inquirers, these are not monitored independently.

Overseas Visits

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list those who have accompanied (i) him and (ii) his departmental Ministers on overseas visits since 1 January indicating (a) the venue of the visit, (b) the purpose of the visit, (c) the names of those involved, (d) the job of those involved, (e) the reasons why they were included in the visit and (f) the cost to public funds. [53838]

Mr. Gordon Brown [holding answer 30 July 1998]: All overseas visits by Treasury Ministers are conducted in accordance with the principles set out in the Ministerial code.

Non-departmental Public Bodies

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the non-departmental public bodies in existence on 1 May 1997 that (a) have been disbanded, (b) will be disbanded in the next 12 months, (c) have had their functions transferred to (i) another non-departmental public body and (ii) a democratically elected body, (d) have been renamed but continue to perform a similar role and (e) have been unchanged; if he will indicate in (c) (ii) the relevant successor body; what new non-departmental public bodies have been established since 1 May 1997; and how many non-departmental public bodies his Department currently is responsible for. [53868]

Ms Hewitt: [holding answer 30 July 1998]: The Government are committed to keeping the number of NDPBs to a minimum, and to ensuring that those which remain are open, accountable and effective. Details of all Non-departmental Public Bodies in existence since 1 May 1997 are listed in "Public Bodies 1997". Since publication, the Policyholder's Protection Board has transferred from the DTI to the Treasury.

ICL Pathway Project

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Christchurch (Mr. Chope), of 23 July 1998, Official Report, columns 652–53, on the ICL Pathway Project, what is the extent of the Government's commitment to the completion of the project. [53454]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 30 July 1998]: The Government are committed to providing a secure and cost effective method of paying benefits over post office counters. ICL pathway have contracted with the Benefits Agency (on behalf of DSS) and Post Office Counters Ltd. to deliver this using the benefit payment card.

Economic and Monetary Union

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will list the main activities of the Euro Preparations Unit since December 1997; [53741]

(2) if he will make a statement on the programme of the Standing Committee on Preparations for EMU in 1998–99; [53737]

(3) if he will publish a breakdown of the Euro Preparations Unit's programme of co-ordination with external organisations. [53740]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 30 July 1998]: The Treasury published on 28 July "Getting Ready for the Euro, first report July 1998". Copies were placed in the Library of the House. The report includes a description of the activities undertaken by the Treasury's Euro Preparations Unit, including its extensive contacts with business. The report also sets out the programme of activities relating to practical preparations for the euro over the next six months, including the next meeting of the Standing Committee on preparations for EMU. The Standing Committee is expected to consider preparations for the launch of the euro on 1 January 1999, communications with business, and progress on the outline national changeover plan, which will set out the steps which would need to be followed if the United Kingdom were to decide to join the single currency.

Task Forces

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the task forces and advisory groups composed of independent members which have been set up by his Department since 1 May 1997, indicating in each case (a) their remit, (b) their membership, (c) how many members are (i) scientists, (ii) engineers, (iii) small business people or representatives of small businesses, (d) any remuneration members receive for their services and (e) their budget. [53282]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 30 July 1998]: The task forces and advisory groups composed of independent members, which have been set up by the Treasury since 1 May 1997 are as follows:

1. Private Finance Taskforce

(a) remit:

to advance the private finance initiative and private/public partnerships across government;

(b) membership: twenty two;

(iii) small business: many of the associations represented on the Business Advisory Group have members which are small businesses, and two of the associations have memberships entirely composed of small businesses;

(d) remuneration: none;

(e) budget: none.

In addition, a number of temporary working parties and other committees have been organised to consider detailed aspects of preparations for the euro. Their membership is drawn largely from the associations represented on the Business Advisory Group, including small business representatives, and from the Government departments and other public authorities. None offers remuneration or has a budget. Details are available in "Getting Ready for the Euro, first report July 1998", published by the Treasury on 28 April. Local Telephone Calls (VAT)

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much was collected in value added tax from local telephone calls in each of the last five years. [54642]

Dawn Primarolo: The VAT collected from businesses classified to telecommunications as a whole is as follows:

1993: £1,500 million

1994: £1,400 million

1995: £1,450 million

1996: £1,550 million

1997: £1,400 million.

Prior to 1996, telecommunications were included in the trade classification for post and telecommunications. HM Customs and Excise have therefore estimated the amount that related to telecommunications based on the yield in subsequent years. Unfortunately they are unable to estimate the amount of this relating specifically to local telephone calls.

Environmental Taxation

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what progress has been made by the working party on environmental taxation. [54692]

Dawn Primarolo: There is no single Government working party that is looking at environmental taxation.

In the last Budget my right hon. Friend the Chancellor appointed Lord Marshall, assisted by a Government Task Force to examine the potential for the use of economic instruments—such as an industrial energy tax and/or other market mechanisms—to improve business energy use and reduce greenhouse gas emissions from this sector. Lord Marshall has been asked to report back to the Chancellor by the start of November. A consultation document was released by the Task Force on 5 June. Responses have been requested by 31 July.

Aggregates

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects the working group on the taxation of the extraction of aggregates to report. [54691]

Dawn Primarolo: There are two aspects to this. First, the Customs and Excise consultation on how such a tax could operate asked for replies by the end of August. Second key results from the further work on the environment costs and benefits of the supply of aggregates are due in January. Both will be feeding into further consideration of the case for a tax or other measures.

Landfill Tax

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much of the 20 per cent. of the landfill tax available through the Environmental Trust was (a) used for environmental purposes and (b) not used and retained by Customs and Excise. [54689]

Dawn Primarolo: Credits claimed at 22 July amounted to £78.4 million. In the same period (1 October 1996 to 22 July 1998) total landfill tax revenue declared was £650 million, giving rise to a maximum credit that could have been claimed of £130 million. The majority of credits are claimed at the end of landfill site operators contribution years which mainly fall between October and December.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much revenue was generated by the landfill tax in its first year of operation. [54690]

Dawn Primarolo: As I told my hon. Friend on 21 July 1998, Official Report, column 503, the most accurate figures I now have for revenue received in the first year of the landfill tax are £420 million gross and £396 million net of tax credits claimed.

Savings Income

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the Government's policy on the proposed withholding tax on savings income of residents of other EU member states. [54698]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government are in principle in favour of effective international action to tackle tax evasion. But the Government would need to be satisfied that any proposals would not do serious damage to financial markets.

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with other European Finance Ministers about the proposed imposition of a withholding tax on savings income of residents of other EU member states. [54699]

Dawn Primarolo: Last December's meeting of Finance Ministers at ECOFIN invited the Commission to produce a draft directive on this subject. The draft has now been published and is being considered and discussed.

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact on the UK financial services industry of the imposition of a withholding tax on the savings income of residents of other EU member states. [54700]

Dawn Primarolo: The Draft Directive would involve some compliance costs for payers who would have to withhold tax and/or provide information. The Government are concerned about its possible impact on the financial markets. It is holding discussions with interested parties and will publish a fuller assessment in the light of these.

Zero-rated VAT

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list those goods and services which are zero-rated for VAT in each member state of the European Union. [54631]

Dawn Primarolo: The goods and services which are zero-rated for VAT in other Member States are shown on the list below.

Excise Duties

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions have taken place with other European Ministers about the harmonisation of excise duties; and if he will make a statement. [54632]

Dawn Primarolo: Excise duty rates on alcohol, tobacco and oils within the EU were discussed in ECOFIN on 23 October 1995.

In relation to oils, a proposal for a directive restructuring the Community framework for the taxation of energy products was introduced at the 17 March 1997 ECOFIN. The Presidency created a High Level Working Group at official level to discuss the proposal, and produced a brief progress report to ECOFIN on 12 May 1997. ECOFIN called on the Commission to do further work on the single market case for the proposal, its environmental and economic justification, and the impact on competitiveness. A number of discussions took place at official working group level under the Dutch, Luxembourg and UK Presidencies to examine technical aspects of the proposal. The last Ministerial level discussion took place in the Tax Policy Group, under the chairmanship of Commissioner Monti, on 3 July this year at which I represented the UK.

For tobacco products, the Commission published its report on its biennial review of the minimum rates in June. The first discussion, at official working group level, is scheduled to take place in September. Discussion in ECOFIN is expected to follow.

The Commission's report on alcohol minimum rates, due by 31 December 1996, is awaited.

Direct Taxes

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions have taken place with other European Ministers about the harmonisation of direct taxes; and if he will make a statement. [54634]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government's view is that direct taxation is a matter for national Governments. Decisions on European tax issues are subject to unanimity.

Departmental Publications

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many of his Department's publications have been made available in (a) Braille, (b) audio tape and (c) large print in 1997–98; and what percentage of the total number of publications this represents. [54277]

Ms Hewitt: If requested Treasury publications would be made available in Braille using Braille transcription services. Similarly, if requested, the Treasury would make arrangements to have publications produced on audio tape. However to date these services have not been requested.

All public Treasury documents are produced in the optimum typeface sizes for legibility. These are also available on the Internet, where they can be heard by visually handicapped people who have access to a 'talking computer', or can be displayed and printed out as text of any size.

Ministerial Meetings

Mr. Chope: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many meetings Ministers have had with BSkyB since 1 February; and on what matters; [54491]

(2) how many meetings Ministers have had with BAA plc since 1 February; and on what matters; [54493]

(3) how many meetings Ministers have had with Manpower since 1 February; and on what matters; [54489]

(4) how many meetings Ministers have had with Tesco plc since 1 February; and on what matters; [54490]

(5) how many meetings Ministers have had with Marks and Spencer plc since 1 February; and on what matters. [54488]

Ms Hewitt: Ministers, their Special Advisers and other civil servants meet many people in the course of their work. This properly includes meetings with interest groups outside Government. This liaison is intended to help Ministers draw upon outside contributions—from academics, think-tanks, trade and industry associations, private sector organisations, trade unions and others, as well as relevant experience from other countries—during the process of policy analysis and development. But they must observe the requirements of propriety: for instance they must not provide confidential information without authorisation, or allow improper influence on policy. It is not our policy to make information on meetings or their content public.

Welfare Reform

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, (1) pursuant to the Green Paper, Cm 3805, "New Ambitions for our Country: A New Contract for Welfare", page 82, what is the proportion of working age people living in workless households at present; and what it was in April 1997 and March 1998; [54606]

(2) pursuant to the Green Paper, Cm 3805, "New Ambitions for Our Country: A New Contract for Welfare", page 84, what is the proportion of children living in workless households at present; and what it was in April 1997 and March 1998. [54596]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Steven Webb, dated 31 July 1998:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary questions about proportions of people living in workless households.

The ONS defines workless households as those where there is no one in employment and normally applies this where there is at least one person of working age.

Estimates from the quarterly Labour Force Survey (LFS) giving the proportion of working age people and dependent children living in workless households are shown in the table.

ONS will shortly be releasing LFS Household Datasets, designed specifically for analysis at household level, which will enable improved estimates of these measures to be produced. The figures given should therefore be regarded as provisional, and I will send you estimates based on the LFS Household Datasets when they are available. An article describing these new datasets will be published in Labour Market Trends on 6 August and will be available in the House of Commons Library.

The LFS is a household survey and therefore the institutional population is largely excluded apart from students in halls of residence who are sampled via their parental home and staff in NHS accommodation who are sampled separately.

Proportions of people living in workless households

	Spring 1997	Spring 1996
Percentage of people of working age living in workless households[1]	13.6	13.4
Percentage of dependent children living in working age households who live in workless households[2]	18.2	18.5

[1] Households where there is at least one person of working age (men aged 16–56, women aged 16–59) and there is no one in employment

[2] All aged 0–15 and 16–18 year olds in full-time education

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the Green Paper, Cm 3805, "New Ambitions for Our Country: A New Contract for Welfare", page 83, what is the non-Governmental proportion of personal savings and insurance at present; and what it was in April 1997 and March 1998. [54609]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Steven Webb, dated 31 July 1998:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary question on personal savings and insurance.

63 per cent. of contributions for social insurance were paid to non-governmental schemes in 1996 (the latest period for which information is available).

The figures underlying these calculations are:

	£ billion
Contributions to life assurance and pension funds	36.8
Individual premiums for life policies	42.9
Social Security contributions	46.3
Total contributions	126.0

Government Expenditure

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the contingency reserve for each year since 1970–71 until and including those years forecast in the latest Government expenditure forecasts (a) in cash, (b) as a percentage of GGE and (c) as a percentage of GDP; where figures for the reserve were published for more than one year, if he will calculate (a) to (c) for each published figure; and for those years for which cash figures are not available if he will publish the equivalent figures based on survey prices. [52816]

Mr. Byers: Before 1981, public expenditure was planned in volume terms. Figures for the planned reserves on a comparable basis are available starting from the 1981 Public Expenditure Survey, the first year of public expenditure cash planning. These may be found in the annual Financial Statement and Budget Reports (FSBRs), with the exception of plans for Departmental Expenditure Limits for the period 1999–2000 to 2001–02 which were set out in the July 1998 Comprehensive Spending Review White Paper (Cm 4011).

The scope of expenditure covered by the main control aggregate has varied since 1981, especially at the point of regime changes (i.e. from planning total to Control Total, and from Control Total to Departmental Expenditure Limits). In particular, the coverage of Departmental Expenditure Limits is substantially narrower than that of the Control Total. This needs to be taken into account if making comparisons over time.

Figures for the percentage of GGE may be calculated using the figures for GCE contained in Table A6 of Cm 4011. Figures for the percentage of GDP can be calculated using the table, which gives figures for GDP since 1982–83 and projections of GDP consistent with Cm 4011.

Year	GDP
1982–83	280.7
1983–84	304.4
1984–85	326.2
1985–86	358.4
1986–87	385.7
1987–88	427.0
1988–89	475.4
1989–90	517.1
1990–91	556.7
1991–92	581.3
1992–93	606.8
1993–94	640.2
1994–95	678.5
1995–96	713.4
1996–97	752.2
1997–98	796.7
1998–99	833.6
1999–00	872.3
2001–02	958.3

Figures up to 1997–98 are outturn GDP figures, adjusted to remove the distortion caused by the abolition of domestic rates; figures for the period 1998–99 to 2001–02 are calculated using projections of GDP consistent with those used in Cm 4011

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to Annex A, Table A6 of the Comprehensive Spending Review, what factors underlie the differences between the figures for General Government Expenditure and Total Managed Expenditure; and what Government documents set out the distinction between the two aggregates. [52817]

Mr. Byers: For an explanation of the differences between Total Managed Expenditure (TME) and General Government Expenditure (GGE) I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer the former Chief Secretary gave to the right hon. Member for Horsham (Mr. Maude) on 25 June 1998, Official Report, column 616.

TME was described in the Comprehensive Spending Review (Cm 4011), Paragraph B1. GGE was described in Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses 1998–99 (Cm 3901) paragraph 1.8.

Government Spending

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the amounts of non-BSE related Government spending on agriculture in real terms for (a) each of the last 10 years and (b) the next three years. [54947]

Mr. Byers: Historical expenditure series for government expenditure on agriculture, fisheries, food and forestry are given in tables 3.2 and 3.3 of the "Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses" publication. The table excludes BSE expenditure. Provision for UK agriculture over the next three years has not yet been finalised, pending consultations in Wales and Northern Ireland on the allocation of their settlements.

£ billion

Year	Expenditure
1988–89	3.3
1989–90	3.0
1990–91	3.7
1991–92	3.7
1992–93	3.6
1993–94	4.5
1994–95	4.0
1995–96	4.4
1996–97	4.6
1997–98	4.0
1998–99	3.7

At 1997–98 prices

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will calculate the real increase or decrease in Government expenditure (a) for each Department and (b) in total, relative to his Department's forecasts for growth in the economy in each of the next three years; and what assumptions underlie these projections; [54962]

(2) what is the forecast growth for Government capital and current spending combined, relative to the predicted growth of the economy in each of the next three years. [54961]

Mr. Byers: I regret that it has not been possible to provide a substantive answer before the summer recess. I shall write to the hon. Member shortly and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what contingency planning his Department has undertaken in respect of funding his expenditure plans if real growth is less than 1.75 per cent. rising to 2.25 per cent. in two years' time. [54963]

Mr. Byers: The Government have adopted a prudent approach so that it meets its fiscal rules over the economic cycle. We are planning for surpluses on current budget, including a margin within Annually Managed Expenditure and are basing our fiscal projections on cautious assumptions, audited by the National Audit Office. This prudent approach and the significant reduction in public borrowing since 1996–97 leave the public finances well placed to cope with the effects of any changes to the short-term economic outlook.

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the size of the fiscal surplus or deficit resulting from combined Government spending on (a) capital and (b) current account over the next three years. [54948]

Mr. Byers: Forecasts for public sector net borrowing and the surplus on current budget consistent with the Government's spending plans were set out in tables 4.4 and 4.5 of the Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report 1998 (Cm 3978).

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of the national income will be spent on capital investment by the Government in the current year; and what was the average percentage in each of the last 10 years. [54952]

Mr. Byers: Public sector net investment as a share of GDP for the current year and for the previous 10 years is set out in table 4A.1 in the Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report, June 1998.

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the expected capital savings on PFI contracts over the next three years; and what will be the resultant additional current spending. [54946]

Mr. Byers: Departments enter into PFI contracts when they are satisfied that the PFI route offers the best means of securing improved public services and value for money for the taxpayer over the lifetime of the contract.

Table B15 of the March 1998 Financial Statement and Budget Report provides a breakdown of anticipated investment by the private sector on PFI projects, with Table B16 providing a breakdown of the service payments the Government is committed to in respect of contracts that have been signed. These tables will be updated, and published, in September this year.

Funding (Wales and Scotland)

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will change the funding formula for (a) Scotland and (b) Wales for the next three years. [54954]

Mr. Byers: The White Papers "Scotland's Parliament" (Cm 3658) and "A Voice for Wales" (Cm 3718) explained that the funding formula will be updated from time to time to take account of population and other technical changes.

Matching Funds

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will review the policy of encouraging matching funds from the private sector in those areas which lack access to significant private funds; and if he will make a statement. [54907]

Mr. Byers: Attracting matching funds from the private sector forms an important part of public private partnerships in a number of areas of government and brings important benefits to the taxpayer.

Registration Records

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what timescale he has set for the Registrar General to present to Ministers an options paper on access to registration records. [54960]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. David Lidington, dated 31 July 1998:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary question on a timescale for an options paper on access to registration records.

No timetable has been set for the production of the options paper.

The options paper will consider the use of information technology to improve the service to customers and to provide better data management. It will also consider the possibility of working with a wide variety of organisations outside the public sector.

Educational Qualifications

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the Green Paper, "New Ambitions for Our Country: A New Contract for Welfare", Cm. 3805, page 83, what is the proportion of the adult population with educational qualifications at present; and what it was in April 1997 and March 1998. [54603]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Steven Webb, dated 31 July 1998:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question about the percentage of adults with qualifications.

Estimates from the quarterly Labour Force Survey (LFS) are shown in the table below. Figures have been given both for all those of working age (16-state retirement age) and also those aged 18 to state retirement age (ie adults of working age). The LFS does not ask respondents above working age about their qualifications unless they are in employment.

The LFS is a household survey and therefore the institutional population is largely excluded apart from students in halls of residence who are sampled via their parental home and staff in NHS accommodation who are sampled separately.

Percentage of people with educational qualifications (United Kingdom, not seasonally adjusted)

Percentage

	All working age[1]	At least 18 and working age[1]
Spring 1997	81.3	82.0
Spring 1998	81.9	82.6

Conception Statistics

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the Green Paper Cm. 3805, "New Ambitions for our Country: A New Contract for Welfare", (p84), what is the rate of conceptions among girls aged under 16 years in the areas where the rate is highest, at present; and what it was in April 1997 and March 1998. [54594]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Steven Webb, dated 31 July 1998:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question on the rate of conceptions among girls aged under 16.

The conception rates in 1996 for the three Health Authority Areas with the highest rates are shown in the table. Figures for 1997 and 1998 are not yet available.

Conception rates for girls aged under 16 in 1996

Health authority	Rate per 1,000 girls aged 13–15
Sunderland	19.5
Lambeth, Southwark and Lewisham	19.5
South Humber	18.3

Conception rates for the remaining Health Authority areas are published in the ONS Monitor Ref FM1 98/1 which is available in the House of Commons Library.

Foreign Earnings

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the impact of the changes to the foreign earnings deduction arrangements on the overseas earnings and competitive position outside the United Kingdom of (a) the consultancy sector, (b) consulting engineers, (c) contractor and (d) industries in the UK which supply goods and services for British consultants and contractors operating overseas. [53665]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 29 July 1998, Official Report, columns 292–93.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what estimate he has made of the impact of the changes to the foreign earnings deduction arrangements on the gross and tax revenues accruing to the Exchequer; [53667]

(2) what estimate he has made of the impact of the changes to the foreign earnings deduction arrangements on the overseas operating costs of British charities. [53666]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to him on 29 July 1998, Official Report, column 292.

Green Transport

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 2 April 1998, Official Report, column 619, on departmental transport arrangements, what further changes he has made. [53987]

Dawn Primarolo: Her Majesty's Treasury is working towards the target announced in the White Paper "A New Deal for Transport". The Treasury should have green transport plans in place by March 1999.

Lear's Macaws

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what response he is sending to the Brazilian authorities about their representations over the handling by HM Customs of three Lear's Macaws. [53461]

Dawn Primarolo: Customs inquiries concerning the three Lear's Macaws are still in progress. Until these are completed the birds will remain in this country. Officials are, however, already in contact with the Brazilian authorities who have been offered the opportunity to view the birds to alleviate any concerns about their current welfare. The final re-homing of the birds will take full account of their welfare and the need to maximise the breeding potential of such an endangered species.

Public Service Agreement

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to publish the terms of the public service agreement negotiated between the Treasury and the spending departments. [54119]

Mr. Byers: We will make available a collected set of Public Service Agreements in due course.

Republic of Ireland

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what advice he has given to banks, building societies, insurance and assurance firms with registered headquarters in Northern Ireland on conducting business in the Republic of Ireland. [54565]

Ms Hewitt: None.

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will list the banks, building societies, insurance and assurance firms with registered headquarters in Northern Ireland which own or partly own banks, building societies, insurance and assurance firms in the Republic of Ireland; [54562]

(2) if he will list the banks, building societies, insurance and assurance firms with registered headquarters in England which own or partly own banks, building societies, insurance and assurance firms in the Republic of Ireland; [54563]

(3) if he will list the banks, building societies, insurance and assurance firms with registered headquarters in Scotland which own or partly own banks, building societies, insurance and assurance firms in the Republic of Ireland; [54564]

(4) if he will list the banks, building societies, insurance and assurance firms with registered headquarters in Wales which own or partly own banks, building societies, insurance and assurance firms in the Republic of Ireland. [54561]

Ms Hewitt: The information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

EU Budget

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the net EU Budget contributions for each member state (a) in 1996 and (b) estimated for 1997, indicating the sources of the figures. [54202]

Ms Hewitt: Indicative net contributions for all Member States for the budgetary year 1996 are set out in the table. The Community does not publish forward estimates of the net contributions for Member States. Information on the 1997 outturn for Member States, after account is taken of the United Kingdom's abatement, will be available later this year when the European Court of Auditors publishes its report on the 1997 European Community Budget.

Net contributions to the EC Budget in 1996

Member State	million ecu
Belgium	746.2
Denmark	−193.4
Germany	10,894.9
Greece	−3,932.7
Spain	−5,972.2
France	459.8
Ireland	−2,260.3
Italy	1,402.3
Luxembourg	79.3
Netherlands	2,446.8
Austria	272.2
Portugal	−2,774.3

Net contributions to the EC Budget in 1996

Member State	million ecu
Finland	−27.1
Sweden	752.5
UK	2,276.0

Notes:

1. The Court of Auditors uses European Currency Unit figures, the unit of account for the EC Budget

2. The Court of Auditors does not allocate all Community spending to the Member States. Consequently the figures in the table are likely only to be indicative of the amount of Member States' net positions. For example, if all administrative expenditure were allocated to the country in which it is paid, the net position of Belgium and Luxembourg would be substantially improved

Single Currency

Mr. Derek Twigg: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the arrangements for paying tax in euros after the single currency is introduced on 1 January 1999. [54980]

Ms Hewitt: The Chancellor of the Exchequer announced in his speech to the CBI on 10 November 1997 that businesses, if they wished, would be able to pay their taxes in euro from 1 January 1999. The Inland Revenue and Customs and Excise are today publishing a joint press release setting out further details of the arrangements and inviting comments from interested parties on any aspects of the proposals.

Environmental Trust

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to ensure that sufficient of the funds allocated by the Environmental Trust flows into research and development projects. [53391]

Dawn Primarolo: Research and Development work on sustainable waste management is one of the approved objects under the landfill tax credit scheme, which gives tax credits to site operators who make contributions to environmental bodies. Neither the Government nor the private sector regulator of the scheme, Entrust Ltd., may direct to which of the approved objects site operators choose to make their contributions. However, Customs and Excise are currently examining, together with other interested departments, whether and how the scheme could be altered to encourage recycling.

Equity Release Mechanisms

Mr. Love: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will commission research into the use of equity release mechanisms to assist elderly home owners to unlock additional income in retirement; and if he will make a statement. [53906]

Dawn Primarolo: We have no plans to commission any such research. However, the issue of equity release is currently being considered on a cross-departmental basis.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Green Transport

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 30 March 1998, Official Report, column 356, on departmental transport arrangements, what further changes he has made. [54017]

Mr. Fatchett: I shall write to the hon. Member shortly and place copies of the letter in the Library.

Fiji

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the level of British Government assistance to Fiji; and what plans he has to increase the level of support. [52057]

Mr. Foulkes: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave yesterday, 30 July 1998, Official Report, column 460.

Public Registers

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the public registers for which his Department has responsibility. [47354]

Mr. Tony Lloyd [holding answer 29 June 1998]: I shall write to my hon. Friend shortly and place copies of the letter in the Library.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects to respond to the question from the hon. Member for Leyton and Wanstead, to which a holding answer was given on 29 June, concerning the public registers for which his Department is responsible. [54023]

Mr. Robin Cook: I shall write to my hon. Friend shortly and place copies of the letter in the Library.

Data Protection

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if his Department holds copies of all the certificates, signed by Cabinet Ministers since 1984, under section 27 of the Data Protection Act 1984. [47387]

Mr. Tony Lloyd [holding answer 29 June 1998]: I shall write to my hon. Friend shortly and place copies of the letter in the Library.

Diplomatic Service

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on how many occasions since 1968 a United Kingdom ambassador or high commissioner has followed a deposed democratic leader or Government into exile. [51861]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 23 July 1998]: Since April 1980, HMG has recognised states, not governments (whether in exile or otherwise).

The original decision that the High Commissioner in Freetown should leave for Conakry, was taken out of concern for his safety, and that of his staff, as a result of the fighting in Freetown. His presence in Conakry, from where he monitored the situation in Sierra Leone, also allowed him to remain in contact with President Kabbah, who was based in Conakry between May 1997 and March 1998. There are no direct parallels with this case.

Two indirect parallels, however, are:

HMG continued to deal with the Kuwaiti government in Saudi Arabia as the legitimate government of Kuwait after the Iraqi invasion of August 1990. HMA Kuwait was unable to leave Kuwait City after the Iraqi invasion; following the coup in Haiti in September 1991, HMG along with the EU, the OAS and the UN continued to regard President Aristide as Haiti's democratically elected Head of State. In exile he met FCO officials, including the UK's non-resident Ambassador to Haiti based in Jamaica.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many staff in posts overseas are working full-time to win inward investments projects for the United Kingdom, and in which countries they are serving. [54554]

Mr. Fatchett: I shall write to the hon. Member shortly and place copies of the letter in the Libraries of the House.

Biological Warfare

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what assessment his Department has made since 1990 of the implications of information being exchanged between Libya and the biological warfare programme organised by South Africa's former apartheid regime; what were the conclusions of this assessment; when this assessment was started and finished; what action has been taken in the light of this assessment; and if he will make a statement; [53103]

(2) what assessment his Department has made of the implications of the extent and nature of the biological warfare programme organised by South Africa's former apartheid regime; what were the conclusions of this assessment; when this assessment was started and finished; what action has been taken in the light of this assessment; and if he will make a statement. [53102]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence, my hon Friend the Member for Warley (Mr. Spellar) today, Official Report, column 711.

Mrs. Farrukh Sheikh

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he proposes to make to French Customs officials over the case of Mrs. Farrukh Sheikh of Leicester. [52753]

Mr. Fatchett: I shall write to my hon. Friend shortly and copies will be placed in the Library.

Denis Halliday

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the resignation of Mr. Denis Halliday, UN Humanitarian Co-ordinator for Iraq. [53459]

Mr. Fatchett: Mr. Halliday's resignation is matter for the UN.

Sally Becker

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action his Department has taken in respect of the imprisonment of Sally Becker in Lipjan prison; what representations he has made to the Serbian authorities on this matter; and if he will make a statement. [52729]

Mr. Fatchett [holding answer 28 July 1998]: Our staff have visited Ms Becker almost daily since they were informed of her arrest on 18 July. She has appointed a local lawyer who lodged an appeal against her sentence. The appeal hearing has been postponed to 3 August. Ms Becker started a hunger strike on 23 July. Our Embassy asked the prison Governor to monitor her condition carefully and to ensure she was regularly examined by the prison doctor. Our Ambassador spoke to an official at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs on 24 July to request that Ms Becker's hunger strike be handled sensitively with her health as the priority. When our Ambassador visited her on 29 July she had abandoned her hunger strike. Our continuing concern about Ms Becker's situation is being raised with the local authorities.

Compliance Cost Assessments

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for (1) Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the compliance cost assessments published by his Department since 1 May 1997; [52966]

(2) if he will list those compliance cost assessments since 1 May 1997 in which there is a net reduction in compliance costs resulting from a legislative proposal; [52964]

(3) what cumulative net increase in compliance costs has been estimated in compliance cost assessments published by his Department since 1 May 1997. [52965]

Mr. Fatchett [holding answer 28 July]: There have been no compliance cost assessments published by this Department during this period.

National Employment Plans

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the section "Jobs" in the document, "UK Presidency of the EU Half Way Mark", if he will make a statement on the purpose of national employment plans; how many jobs they will create; and if such plans existed prior to the United Kingdom presidency. [53783]

Ms Quin: National employment action plans describe the measures taken by each Member State to meet the collectively agreed Employment Guidelines. It is the measures in these action plans which should encourage job creation. No national employment action plans were submitted by Member States and subject to peer review before the UK Presidency.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the document,

"UK Presidency of the EU Half Way Mark", if he will list the agreements reached on millennium compliance by the close of the UK presidency. [53782]

Mr. Fatchett: Our aim to raise awareness of this issue across Europe and work together on responses to it was a high priority during the UK Presidency. We contributed to the preparation of a European Commission information paper on the Millennium Bug, which was presented at various Councils to encourage early and vigorous action by Member States. We hosted a workshop in May, involving senior representatives from each Member State to promote Millennium compliance throughout the EU. We secured an important statement in the Conclusions of the Cardiff European Council, highlighting the urgency of action by all Members. This helped to promote a sense of common purpose within the EU on the Millennium problem. We expect there to be further discussions in the Council of Ministers and in other EU contexts under the Austrian Presidency.

Belarus

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions his Department is having with the Belarus Government regarding the policy of the Belarus Government towards embassies of foreign countries based in Belarus. [53700]

Ms Quin: We, our EU partners and other countries affected by the Belarusian decision to exclude Ambassadors from their residencies at Drozdy are in regular contact with the Belarusian authorities. The Troika of EU chargés d'affaires met Deputy Foreign Minister Gerasimovich on 20 July. They underlined the need for the Belarusian authorities to comply with international law on the inviolability of diplomatic premises, and called on the Belarusian authorities to put forward concrete proposals to resolve the problem.

Departmental Research

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the cost of all research undertaken by his Department since May 1997, excluding the cost of green papers and other public consultation documents drafted by his officials; and if he will list in each case the organisations which undertook that research. [52695]

Mr. Fatchett [holding answer 30 July 1998]: The FCO maintains a specialised cadre of Research Analysts, who provide research support to the Office as a whole. The approximate annual cost of this research facility is £3 million. Specialised and ad hoc research is done by other departments including Economic Advisers, Legal Advisers and the Library and Records Department. This is only part of their duties and expenditure on such research is not managed centrally.

Sri Lanka

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to visit Sri Lanka; what discussions he has had regarding the political situation in Sri Lanka; and if he will make a statement. [53556]

Mr. Fatchett: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary currently has no plans to visit Sri Lanka. I hope to reinstate my postponed visit from April as soon as possible. In a range of discussions on Sri Lanka, we have made clear our view that a lasting solution to the conflict there can only be reached through a political settlement. We have said publicly that we stand ready to help in the resolution of the conflict if the parties involved ask us to play a role.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what Government initiatives (a) have been taken since 1 January and (b) are currently being planned to bring about a peaceful end to the conflict in Sri Lanka. [54097]

Mr. Fatchett: A lasting solution to the conflict in Sri Lanka requires a political settlement between the parties. We have made clear that we stand ready to help if both sides ask us to play a role.

Sudan

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 21 July 1998, Official Report, column 491, what reports his Department received on what dates from the British Embassy in Khartoum of impending famine in Southern Sudan. [53553]

Mr. Fatchett: I shall write to the hon. Member shortly and place copies of the letter in the Library.

EU Staff (Security Vetting)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the security vetting procedures for the selection of United Kingdom candidates for the European Community's senior staff; what level of staff are involved; and what political opinions on the European Union are held to invalidate candidature. [53772]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The Commission of the European Communities and the European Atomic Energy Community (EURATOM) are the only EC offices that impose personnel security obligations on member nations. Security vetting is a requirement for all UK nationals directly recruited for work at the Commission and is the responsibility of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. Staff are cleared to SECRET level following a request from the Commission on the basis of personal particulars provided by the candidate on a completed security questionnaire. The procedure is broadly similar to the process for SC clearance in respect of UK Civil Servants as set out in the then Prime Minister's Statement on Security Vetting dated 14 December 1994. For the EC, it involves a check against the National Collection of Criminal records and a check against Security Service records.

No account is taken of a candidate's political opinions.

Departmental Publications

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many of his Department's publications have been made available in

(a) Braille, (b) audio tape and (c) large print in 1997–98; and what percentage of the total number of publications this represents. [54276]

Mr. Fatchett: The FCO leaflet on British Consular Services Abroad is available in large print. The FCO also provides an automated telephone answering service offering recorded travel advice on destinations which give rise to the most inquiries. Advice on other destinations is available from the FCO's Travel Advice Unit whose members can read out the advice or provide hard copies in large print. Other FCO publications aimed at overseas audiences are not available in Braille, audio tape or large print.

Task Forces

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the taskforces and advisory groups composed of independent members which have been set up by his Department since 1 May 1997 and in each case (a) their remit, (b) their membership, (c) how many members are (i) scientists, (ii) engineers and (iii) small businesspeople or representatives of small businesses, (d) any remuneration members receive for their services and (e) their budget. [53149]

Mr. Fatchett [holding answer 30 July 1998]: Since 1 May 1997 the Foreign and Commonwealth Office has established one advisory group which includes independent members—Panel 2000 set up on 1 April 1998—but no task forces.

Panel 2000's remit is:

to produce a strategy to improve the way Britain is seen overseas;

to look at the methods and tools available to do this;

to make sure that the public and private sectors are working together to do this; and to modernise the way the Foreign and Commonwealth Office communicates with the public.

Membership of the Panel, drawn from both the public and private sectors, is as follows:

Of these, one member is a scientist, four are from small and medium sized businesses. There are no engineers on the panel. The members are unpaid, but can claim travel expenses. No budget has been allocated to the Panel.

International Exhibitions

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list (a) the value of financial support provided to United Kingdom companies attending, (b) those Ministers and other Government officials who attended and the cost of their attendance and (c) any other costs incurred by (i) his Department and (ii) Defence Export Services Organisation in connection with (1) IMDEX Asia 97, (2) the Paris Air Show 1997, (3) IDEF 97, (4) IMDEX 97, (5) the Underwater Defence Technology Conference and Exhibition, (6) the International Defence and Security Technology Fair, Brno, Czech Republic, May 1997, (7) the 3rd International Civil and Military Aerospace Exhibition, Prague and (8) the 3rd Central European Defence Equipment and Aviation Exhibition and Conference, Budapest. [54168]

Mr. Fatchett: I shall write to my hon. Friend shortly and place copies of the letter in the Library.

Cyprus

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussion he has had with the Turkish Government on the overflying of the Republic of Cyprus by Turkish military aircraft; and if he will make a statement. [54412]

Ms Quin: We have repeatedly made clear to all concerned, including the Turkish Government, our concerns about military activity in Cyprus. In line with the relevant UN resolutions, we have urged all parties to refrain from any action, particularly in the vicinity of the buffer zone, which would exacerbate tension.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what discussions he has had and with whom in Northern Cyprus on the offer of President Clerides of Cyprus for Northern Cyprus to take part in the Cypriot team discussing that country's application for membership of the European Union; [54416]

(2) what discussions has he had with Turkish representatives on the offer made by President Clerides of the Republic of Cyprus to include Turkish Cypriots within the Cypriot delegation to discuss the application of Cyprus for membership of the European Union; and if he will make a statement; [54413]

(3) what discussions has he had with the Government of the Republic of Cyprus on their offer to Turkish Cypriot representatives in northern Cyprus to participate in the negotiating team representing Cyprus in their application for membership of the European Union. [54414]

Ms Quin: We welcome President Clerides's offer to the Turkish Cypriot community to participate in the team negotiating Cyprus's EU accession. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary made this clear when he met President Clerides on 12 March. We continue to urge both sides to work actively to promote such participation. Sir David Hannay, acting in his capacity as UK Special Representative for Cyprus and as the Austrian EU Presidency Representative for Cyprus, visited the island on 20–22 July and discussed with President Clerides the importance of continued efforts to encourage Turkish Cypriot acceptance of his offer. The then Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, my hon. Friend the Member for Newcastle-upon-Tyne, North (Mr. Henderson) conveyed the same message to Cyprus's Chief EU Negotiator, George Vassiliou, when the latter visited the UK on 2 July.

We are in regular contact with the Turkish Cypriot community in northern Cyprus, including Mr. Denktash, through our High Commission in Nicosia. We have made clear on several occasions that we consider President Clerides's offer to the Turkish Cypriots to participate in Cyprus's EU accession negotiations to be reasonable. We continue to urge them to agree with the Greek Cypriot side an arrangement acceptable to both parties allowing their participation in those negotiations. Sir David Hannay reiterated this message to representatives of the Turkish Cypriot community during his recent visit to Cyprus.

We remain in regular contact on this issue with the Turkish Government through our Embassy in Ankara. We continue to stress to them the importance of Turkey's constructive cooperation on Cyprus.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Austrian Government as holders of the presidency of the European Union on the application by the Republic of Cyprus for membership of the European Union; and if he will make a statement. [54415]

Ms Quin: I shall write to my hon. Friend shortly and place copies of the letter in the Library.

Sierra Leone

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when Mr. Peter Penfold's position as High Commissioner to Sierra Leone will end. [53871]

Mr. Robin Cook: Mr. Penfold became High Commissioner to Sierra Leone in March 1997. Staff in the High Commission normally serve two tours of duty of 12 months each, with an option of a third. This tour length reflects the classification of Freetown as a "difficult post".

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those private military companies on which explicit guidance will be given to officials on handling their contacts with such companies. [53873]

Mr. Tony Lloyd [holding answer 30 July 1998]: There is no such list. We are in the process of preparing more detailed guidance, in consultation with other Whitehall departments.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if his Department informed the Prime Minister before 11 May that Mr. Penfold had displayed a lack of caution in his dealings with Colonel Spicer. [54256]

Mr. Robin Cook: No. That Mr. Penfold displayed a lack of caution in his dealings with Mr. Spicer is a finding of the Report of the Sierra Leone Arms Investigation. I have stated previously that it would have been improper to draw conclusions on the actions of individuals in advance of the full, independent findings of Sir Thomas Legg's investigation.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will place in the Library the Permanent Under Secretary's letter to Mr. Peter Penfold; [54257]

(2) if he will make a statement on the Permanent Under Secretary's interview with Mr. Peter Penfold. [54255]

Mr. Robin Cook: No. Such matters are in confidence between the FCO and its employees.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his oral statement of 27 July 19998, Official Report, column 19, what advice has been received from Sierra Leone authorities on the role of Mr. Peter Penfold in the restoration of civilian Government. [54254]

Mr. Robin Cook: President Kabbah wrote to the Prime Minister in May 1998 to thank him for HMG's support. He stated that Mr. Penfold had encouraged his Government to remain committed to the ideals of democracy and not to lose hope. The letter said that Mr. Penfold had been a source of moral strength.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what advice was given to Mr. Peter Penfold at CHOGM in Edinburgh, on his relations with President Kabbah. [54260]

Mr. Robin Cook: None.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to section 10 of the report of the Sierra Leone Arms Investigation for what reasons Mr. Penfold was not informed that in banning the supply of arms to Sierra Leone, the resulting embargo covered all parties. [54259]

Mr. Robin Cook: The Report notes that Mr. Penfold was sent the full text of Security Council Resolution 1132 on 8 October.

We have accepted the finding of the Report that FCO officials were not as alert to the importance of sanctions enforcement as they should have been. We have set up a new Sanctions Enforcement Unit, which has responsibility for ensuring that the relevant terms of any Security Council Resolution, and the details of the Order in Council giving effect to the Resolution in UK law, are drawn to the attention of all officials in London and to all diplomatic missions.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his oral answer of 27 July 1998, Official Report, column 31, what factors underlie his description of Britain's record in Sierra Leone as positive. [54258]

Mr. Robin Cook: Britain has a consistent record of supporting democracy in Sierra Leone. The UK provided funding for the elections in 1996. After the military coup in 1997 we led international efforts to support peaceful restoration of the democratic government. DfID gave assistance to President Kabbah while in Conakry to enable him to plan for the resumption of his government. We provided assistance to refugees through the ICRC.

Britain was first on the scene with humanitarian aid after the restoration of President Kabbah. We have sponsored the UN resolution providing for military observers to help the process of demilitarisation, and we are providing four Military Officers to serve as UN Military Observers. We are providing aid to fund the process of strengthening democracy, civil reconstruction and military demobilisation. We are the first donor to the UN Trust Fund for Sierra Leone.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library a copy of the Sandline paper itemised as document 49 dated 2 February in Annex D of the Legg report; if this document is identical the Sandline planning paper dated 28 January noted in Annex B; and if both documents were viewed by the Legg investigation. [54543]

Mr. Robin Cook: The two references refer to the same document. It was seen by the Legg investigation. The paper in question is not an FCO document and was not given to us on the basis that it would be published. I do not therefore intend to place it in the Library of the House, but I have told the Foreign Affairs Committee that I would be willing to consider any specific request to have access to documents listed in the Annex to the Legg report.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the reference to a helicopter in FCO telegram 37 to Abuja relates to aviation operated by Sandline in a military context; and if he will make a statement. [54474]

Mr. Robin Cook: The telegram refers to reports of several helicopter flights carrying Kamajors from Lungi airport and says that the helicopter is assumed to be an MI17. No further information is given about the helicopter or its operators.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the Legg report, if he will make a statement on the nature of the work undertaken by Ann Grant of AD(E) in Brussels on 4 to 6 February; when the work was planned; and who organised the work. [54553]

Mr. Robin Cook: Ms Grant was attending, as representative of the UK Presidency of the European Union, a monthly meeting of the Africa Working Group of the Council of the European Union.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what were the reasons Sir Thomas Legg QC advertised for witnesses for his investigation in national newspapers; what response he gave to Sir Thomas Legg on being informed that such a move was intended; and what was the response achieved from them. [54548]

Mr. Robin Cook: The investigation advertised in order that people outside the public service could contribute any relevant evidence. 35 responses were received. The investigation was entirely independent and I gave no comment to Sir Thomas Legg on its working practices.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the nature of the random checks undertaken by the Legg Inquiry to verify that all relevant material had successfully been collated. [54475]

Mr. Robin Cook: The random check of the relevant files in the FCO referred to in paragraph 2.12 of the Legg report was conducted by a member of the Secretariat at an early stage in the investigation. This involved a thorough trawl of the records and files held in the relevant registry in Africa Command.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when Mr. Penfold communicated with staff of Sandline during his visit to Canada and North America at the turn of 1998; and what reports were dispatched to Whitehall in consequence. [54544]

Mr. Robin Cook: Mr. Penfold spent three days in New York with Mr. Flynn, the Foreign Secretary's Special Representative on Sierra Leone, between 14–16 January. While Mr. Penfold was in New York, he telephoned Mr. Spicer to ask whether he had any up-to-date information on the security situation in Sierra Leone. Mr. Penfold sent no reports to London while he was in the USA or Canada.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the ministers who saw press releases pertaining to SCR1132 (a) before and (b) after release of such internal FCO documents assessing the effect of the arms embargo on forces opposed to the Sierra Leone coup; and on what dates. [54547]

Mr. Robin Cook: The press line announcing the adoption of UNSCR 1132 was seen at the time by the Minister of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Manchester, Central (Mr. Lloyd).

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those documents requested by the Legg inquiry which (i) had been destroyed, (ii) had been mislaid and (iii) of which no trace in the records existed. [54550]

Mr. Robin Cook: No documents requested by Sir Thomas Legg were unavailable to him for any of the reasons cited.

Mr. David Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the recommendations of the Legg Inquiry what proposals he has to improve communications between Ministers in his Department. [53976]

Mr. Robin Cook: The Report of the Sierra Leone Arms Investigation contains no findings to suggest that communications between Ministers were unsatisfactory. Nevertheless, guidance issued in the light of the Report covers the processing of papers to and between Ministers.

Immigration

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how long applicants (a) who are being interviewed in July 1998 and (b) who applied in July 1998 have waited, or may expect to wait, for interview in the settlement queues in (i) Islamabad, (ii) Karachi, (iii) New Delhi, (iv) Bombay, (v) Madras, (vi) Colombo, (vii) Lagos, (viii) Abuja, (ix) Moscow and (x) Bogota. [53962]

Mr. Fatchett: Statistics for July from Entry Clearance Posts are not yet available. We have asked the Posts to which my hon. Friend refers to provide the information required as soon as possible. Once the figures are available they will be sent to my hon. Friend in writing.

Persistent Inquirers

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which of his Department's agencies have procedures to identify persistent inquirers for information. [53947]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: I shall write to the hon. Member shortly and place copies of the letter in the Library.

Lockerbie

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what recent contacts there have been with (a) officials and (b) ministers of the Libyan Government on the arrangements for a trial of suspects in the Lockerbie case in The Hague; and if it is his intention that discussions on this issue should continue; [54066]

(2) if he will make a statement on the arrangements which would be acceptable to Her Majesty's Government for a trial of suspects of the Lockerbie bombing to take place in The Hague. [54067]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: I refer the hon. Member to the statement made by my noble Friend the Lord Advocate in another place on 30 July 1998, Official Report, House of Lords, column 1618.

UN Budget Deficit

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what options are currently under review to address the UN budget deficit. [54025]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The best option currently under consideration to address the UN's financial difficulties is the package of financial reform proposals developed by the UK and France and tabled by the EU in New York in January 1996. These comprise full payment of all member states' arrears; revision of the UN Regular Budget and peacekeeping scales of assessment to reflect more closely member states' capacity to pay; and penalties and incentives to encourage prompt payment in future.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement in respect of the USA's current membership of the UN General Assembly; what dues are currently owed by the United States of America to the UN; and what percentage of total arrears this constitutes. [54024]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: All UN member states, including the US, have the right to be represented on the UN General Assembly's six Main Committees. Those states whose arrears exceed two years' contributions (of which the US is not one) may not vote in the General Assembly. At 30 June the US owed $569 million to the UN Regular Budget and $966 million to UN peacekeeping budgets in respect of prior year arrears and unpaid 1998 dues. This represents 62 per cent. of total unpaid dues to the Regular Budget and 63 per cent. of total unpaid dues to peacekeeping budgets.

Ethiopia and Eritrea (Arms)

Ms Ward: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement in light of the recent press reports on the shipment of arms to Ethiopia and Eritrea. [55186]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We are aware of reports of shipments of arms from China to Ethiopia, and from Bulgaria to Eritrea on a Ukranian aircraft. We are seeking to establish whether these arms were ordered before or after the border dispute between Ethiopia and Eritrea had broken out.

There are no arms embargoes against either Ethiopia or Eritrea. But we are nevertheless extremely concerned that both countries, two of the poorest in the world, should apparently be seeking to rearm themselves at a time when the OAU, supported by the United Nations and the EU, are engaged in mediation efforts to settle their dispute by peaceful means.

We remind all countries who might be considering supplying arms to either Ethiopia or Eritrea of their responsibility to exercise responsibility in the transfer of conventional arms in line with their international commitments.

Westminster Foundation for Democracy

Ms Ward: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the Annual report of the Westminster Foundation for Democracy will be available. [55187]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Copies of the Foundation's Annual Report for 1997/98 have been placed in the libraries of both Houses.

The Foundation received £2,713,650 from the FCO, along with £139,099 from other sources, for its activities in 1997/98. With these funds it supported 256 new projects in 47 countries. It directed most of its funds to supporting democratic institutions in Central and Eastern Europe, the former Soviet Union and Anglophone Africa, and also supported worthwhile projects in other parts of the world. It makes a valuable contribution to the promotion of democracy overseas. Projects have included work with political parties, parliaments, the independent media, trades unions, human rights groups, women's groups and other non-governmental organisations involved in political development.

Landmines

Ms Ward: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the United Kingdom will ratify the Ottawa Convention banning anti-personnel landmines. [55188]

Mr. Robin Cook: Our instrument of ratification will be deposited with the UN Secretary General in New York today, thus fulfilling our pledge to be among the first forty ratifications and helping to bring the Convention into force.

We have placed in the Library the note accompanying the instrument of ratification, which sets out our understanding that the mere participation in the planning or execution of operations, exercises or other military activity by the United Kingdom's Armed Forces, or individual United Kingdom nationals, conducted in combination with armed forces of States not party to the Ottawa Convention, is not, by itself, assistance, encouragement or inducement for the purposes of Article 1, paragraph 1(c) of the Convention.

Know-How Fund

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will list the UK based recipients of Know-How Fund support for 1997-98 indicating in each case what the funding is provided for; [54820]

(2) what procedures are in place to ensure that Know-How Funding is used effectively. [54821]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development will write to the hon. Member shortly. Copies of the letter will be placed in the Library.

Burma

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contingency plans the Government have made in the event of a deterioration in the human rights situation in Burma. [53663]

Mr. Fatchett: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Bolton, North East (Mr. Crausby) on 29 July 1998, Official Report, column 303. We have been deeply concerned by the regime's recent interference with Aung San Suu Kyi's freedom of movement and association. I have made clear to the Burmese Foreign Minister on 28 July that such harassment is unacceptable and I called on the Burmese authorities to enter into immediate dialogue with the NLD and other opposition groups. We will continue to monitor the situation closely.

New Agenda Coalition

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on the recent Irish initiative known as the New Agenda Coalition. [54964]

Mr. Robin Cook: I shall write to my hon. Friend shortly and place copies of the letter in the Library.

Nuclear Export Controls

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his letter of 27 June, what discussions he has had with the Chinese on nuclear export controls with particular reference to Pakistan. [54054]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: FCO officials have raised with China the issue of their nuclear export controls, with particular reference to Pakistan, on numerous occasions, and with some success. In October 1997 China introduced export controls on nuclear items using the same control lists as the Nuclear Suppliers Group (NSG). The one point on which Chinese controls fall short of NSG standards is that they do not require all nuclear facilities in a country to be subject to International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) safeguards in order to export. They do, however, require the importing facility to be subject to safeguards. This means that they export to Pakistan's safeguarded civil nuclear facilities only, and not to facilities linked to the weapons programme.

In May this year China introduced export controls on dual-use items usable in a nuclear programme. We will continue to work to persuade China to strengthen its conditions of supply on nuclear exports, so that it fully meets the international norm, requiring all facilities in an importing country to be safeguarded.

Comprehensive Spending Review

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) pursuant to paragraph 15.7 of the Comprehensive Spending Review, if he will list those British missions that are being considered for upgrading of their premises; [54568]

(2) if he will list the residential accommodation that is being reviewed under paragraph 15.9 of the Comprehensive Spending Review; [54570]

(3) if he will list those assets that are to be recycled and the value attributable to such assets that gave rise to the £90 million figure in the Comprehensive Spending Review. [54424]

Mr. Fatchett: I refer the hon. Member to the answers I gave to the hon. Member for Spelthorne (Mr. Wilshire) on 21 July 1998, Official Report, columns 491–92.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will set out, pursuant to chapter 15 of the Comprehensive Spending Review, the method of calculating the number of British jobs secured through foreign direct investment; how many such jobs have been created since 1 May 1997; and how many such jobs have been lost through the withdrawal of foreign direct investment since 1 May 1997. [54571]

Mr. Fatchett: I shall write to the hon. Member shortly and place copies of the letter in the Libraries of the House.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to paragraph 15.5 of the Comprehensive Spending Review, if he will list the posts that (a) are being considered for closure and (b) will be strengthened. [54567]

Mr. Fatchett: A wide range of overseas trade services are available to companies—some are free of charge, others are chargeable.

Posts abroad and country and sectoral help desks in London deal with initial and some other inquiries free of charge. Published and pre-prepared information is available from DTI free of charge.

Commercial Officers at overseas posts produce tailor-made reports for UK companies on request. Reports can include basic market information, identification and assessment of potential agents/distributors, customised local contact lists, market assessments for a companies product or service, advice on market approach, information about potential local business contacts and general information on overseas investment opportunities. Some posts can arrange a programme of visits to potential business contacts and offer support during the visit.

Charges for these services are based on the number of hours research required for the inquiry and currently stand as follows:

Information held by Commercial Sections	50
Up to 4 hours research	100
4–8 hours research	200
8–12 hours research	300
12–24 hours research	600
24–48 hours research	1,200
Each additional 24 hours research	600

Services are also available to help publicise new products and services abroad. A professionally written article can be targeted at trade journals and other media in chosen markets by overseas posts. The cost is £100 for an article in one chosen market and £50 for additional markets.

Besides these services, grant support is available from the DTI for trade missions, trade fairs and seminars abroad. Export Development Counsellors located in most Business Link offices in the UK can help companies develop an export strategy. Their services are free or chargeable depending on the level of help required.

(2) what account was taken of the political affiliations of persons recently appointed to the Board of Governors of the BBC; [53263]

(3) what representations he received from the Chairman of the BBC about the recent appointments of (a) the Deputy Chairman and (b) other governors of the BBC; [53264]

(4) what political affiliations were disclosed by the successful candidates during the recent selection process for appointments to the Board of Governors of the BBC; [53262]

(5) what criteria were used in determining recent appointments to the Board of Governors of the BBC; [53265]

(6) what discussions he held with the Union of Communications Workers about recent appointments to the Board of Governors of the BBC. [53260]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 29 July 1998]: The process for appointing the BBC Vice-Chairman and two Governors was based on the principles set down by the independent Commissioner for Public Appointments.

Candidates had to have, or be able to acquire quickly, the ability to represent the interests of BBC viewers and listeners and of the public at large; an appreciation of the requirements of operating as a board and the management of a large and complex public service and commercial undertaking; sensitivity to and the ability to keep in touch with public opinion on broadcasting issues; and the ability to work in an effective and collegiate manner with other Governors and the senior management of the BBC. Candidates for the position of Vice-Chairman were, in addition, expected to have the qualifications and experience to deputise for the Chairman and possess sufficient influence, experience and weight to act as an effective bridge between the BBC and Parliament. Candidates for the position of the Governor who chairs the English National Forum were expected to have knowledge of the English Regions and be willing to travel extensively within England. These were the primary criteria for selection. Considerations such as the political balance of the Board of Governors and the overall gender/ethnic minority representation were also taken into account, but were not determining factors.

The cost of advertising for recent BBC Governor appointments was £40,486.98.

All candidates for appointment to major public bodies are asked to provide information on significant political activity in the past five years. This reflects the guidance set down by the Commissioner for Public Appointments and is used for overall monitoring purposes only. The information is confidential.

Role specifications for the Vice-Chairmanship and the two Governor positions were agreed with the BBC. The BBC Chairman was invited to suggest names for consideration alongside respondents to the advertisement, and to comment on the shortlist for each position. The Chairman was a member of the selection panel that interviewed candidates for the Vice-Chairmanship, and also interviewed the final shortlist of candidates for the two Governor positions. The final decision on all three appointments was taken by Her Majesty the Queen in Council, on the advice of the Prime Minister.

I held no discussions with the Union of Communication Workers about the appointments.

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 18 June 1998]: Apart from the usual disposal of obsolete furniture and IT equipment, my Department has no plans to dispose of any assets at present, although I am considering options for the future of the land to the north of the British Library at St. Pancras and of 6 Burlington Gardens, formerly the Museum of Mankind.

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations he has received about the training of dance and drama students; and if he will make a statement. [52652]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 27 July 1998]: During the last few months my Department has received a number of letters on this subject, largely focusing on the issue of funding. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what arrangement he is making for commemorating the Christian element of the millennium. [53722]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 30 July 1998]: The Christian Churches in the UK have a well-advanced programme of events to mark the Millennium, including a special programme of celebrations at Pentecost 2000. My Department is working closely with the Christian Churches and other faiths, through the Lambeth Consultation Group, to ensure that the importance of the year 2000 as a Christian anniversary is reflected more generally in the celebrations. The Group has produced guidelines for events organisers on how Millennium activities can be made relevant and accessible to Christians and other members of faiths. Members of the Group are also working with my Department to draw up plans for special Millennium Church Services on the first Sunday of the year 2000. With the assistance of the Lambeth Group, the New Millennium Experience Company is working to ensure that the Christian significance of the year 2000 is reflected in the Dome at Greenwich and its associated national programme of activities.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps he is taking to ensure that talented people from ethnic minorities participate in the British film industry. [54050]

The British Film Institute is committed to improving access for all to moving image culture and has recently run a number of schemes aimed at new black writers and has also established a new post dedicated to black and minority film cultures. It is encouraging to note that to date more than £10 million of National Lottery money has

This represented 3 per cent. of the total number of publications produced.

Mr. Chris Smith: My Department is working towards the target announced in the White Paper "A New Deal for Transport", that all headquarters buildings and main buildings occupied by Executive Agencies and Government Offices for the Regions should have green transport plans by March 1999 and all other key buildings by March 2000. The Department provides bicycle storage, and has only very limited car parking spaces. We are reviewing the position on business travel and business deliveries.

Cycling

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what proportion of the employees of his Department and of the employees of each agency for which he is responsible cycle to work; and what measures he plans to increase that proportion. [52677]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 28 July 1998]: Between 1 per cent. and 2 per cent. of the Department's staff currently cycle to work. The equivalent figure for the Royal Parks Agency is 5.6 per cent.

To encourage cycling to work, parking space is provided and this could be increased if necessary. There are showers and changing rooms at the Department's main building, 2–4 Cockspur Street, and the same is planned for a second building, Grove House. Staff who wish to buy bicycles can apply for an advance of salary of up to £300 towards the cost of purchase.

Further measures to increase the proportion of employees cycling to work are being considered as part of the development of green transport plans for buildings occupied by the Department and the Royal Parks Agency.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what parking facilities for cycles exist at each office or site for which his Department is responsible and for each agency for which he is responsible. [52676]

(2) if he will list box office income, as a percentage of operating costs, among the producing theatres in the region covered by Southern Arts. [50605]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 14 July 1998]: Figures for 'box office income' are not available. The following figures for core earned income as a percentage of operating costs are taken from the data received as part of the Arts Council of England's Annual Survey of Regularly Funded Organisations for 1996–97.

(a) 76 per cent. for all regional producing theatres in England

(b) 94 per cent. for all producing theatres in the region covered by Southern Arts.

Notes:

1. The Survey uses 'core earned income' which includes box office, but also all other forms of earned income.

2. Operating costs are 'staff costs' plus 'overheads'.

Special Advisers

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many special advisers, political advisers and other political appointees are working in his Department; at what annual cost to the public purse including recruitment costs, salaries, pensions and National Insurance contributions; and what was the position in the last full year of the last Government. [43320]

Mr. Chris Smith: For details of the numbers of Special Advisers and the annual cost of employing them, I refer the hon. Member to the answer my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister gave to the hon. Member for Woodspring (Dr. Fox) on 11 June 1998, Official Report, column 664.

National Insurance contributions are excluded from this figure but are paid under the same rules and at the same rates as for other civil servants. Information on the paybill costs for the two Special Advisers within DCMS and other individual Departments is not provided in order to protect the privacy of the individuals concerned.

Information on the costs of employing Special Advisers in previous years was given by my right hon. Friend, the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) on 25 November 1997, Official Report, columns 472–73.

Mr. Casale: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps his Department is taking to improve compliance with the Television without Frontiers quota requirements. [52141]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 30 July 1998]: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before the summer recess. I shall therefore write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Casale: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) how many UK licensed television channels met the quota (a) for European works in Article 4 and (b) for independent productions in Article 5 of the Television Without Frontiers directive; [52139]

(2) which UK licensed television channels had a lower proportion of (a) European originating programmes and (b) independent productions in 1996 than 1995. [52140]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 30 July 1998]: In April 1998, the European Commission published its third monitoring report of Member States' compliance with the quota provisions under Articles 4 and 5 of the EC Broadcasting Directive. The report covers the period 1995–96. An Explanatory Memorandum was submitted to Parliament on 5 May, and copies of the Commission's report have been placed in the Library of the House.

The report showed an upward progression in the proportion of European and independently produced programming transmitted by UK broadcasters. In 1996, the latest year for which data are publicly available, 40 of the 80 UK-licensed channels subject to the quota provisions met the requirements for European works and 49 met the requirement for independent productions. The following tables, derived from the European Commission's third monitoring report, list those channels that had a lower proportion of European works and independent productions in 1996 than 1995.

[1] Article 5 of the EC Broadcasting Directive requires Member States to ensure, where practicable and by appropriate means, that broadcasters reserve at least 10 per cent. of their transmission time, excluding the time appointed to news, sports events, games, advertising and teletext services, for independent European works, or alternatively, at the discretion of the Member State, at least 10 per cent. of their programming budget

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list the cost of all research undertaken by his Department since May 1997, excluding the cost of green papers and other public consultation documents drafted by his officials; and if he will list in each case the organisations which undertook that research. [52705]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 29 July 1998]: I regret that is has not been possible to provide an answer before the summer recess. I shall therefore write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

Public Appointment

Ms Ward: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list the public appointments for which he is responsible indicating the dates of (a) appointment and (b) retirement for those currently in post; and what proposals he has to widen the range of individuals who will be considered for such appointments in future. [54892]

Mr. Chris Smith: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before the summer recess. I shall therefore write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

BBC Governors

Sir Raymond Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) who were the members of the advisory panel for public appointments which considered the short-listed candidates for the two BBC governor positions; and who were the independent members; [54889]

(2) if the Chairman of the BBC Governors is normally a member of a selection panel interviewing for the post of vice-chairman of the governors; [54888]

(3) what changes were made to the final short list of candidates to the two governor positions after it had been seen by Sir Christopher Bland and the head of the Department's Broadcasting and Media Group; [54891]

(4) if the Chairman of the BBC Governors informed the existing governors that he was to be involved in the interviewing of new governors; [54887]

(5) for what reasons Sir Christopher Bland and the head of the Department's Broadcasting and Media group were shown a final short list of candidates for the two governor positions. [54890]

Mr. Chris Smith: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before the summer recess. I shall therefore write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

Departmental Vehicles

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much his Department expects to spend in each year from 1998–99 to 2000–01 on vehicle replacements. [54992]

Mr. Chris Smith: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before the summer recess. I shall therefore write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

D'Oyly Carte

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps he has taken to secure the future of the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company. [53748]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 30 July 1998]: D'Oyly Carte is an independent company, responsible to its Board and backers for the operational decisions it takes. Public funding for the arts is channelled through the Arts Council of England who take decisions on the funding of individual arts organisations without the involvement of Ministers. Ministers have, however, drawn to the attention of the Arts Council the representations made in Parliament on this issue.

Sports Hooligans

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions he has had with sports governing bodies on measures for dealing with sports supporters who bring their sport, teams or country into disrepute. [53596]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 30 July 1998]: The Government deplore all acts of hooliganism at sporting events. I know from my regular dealings with sports governing bodies that they share this sentiment. The actions of thugs and hooligans who constitute a tiny minority detract from the good behaviour of the vast majority who are sport's true supporters. Of course, the full weight of the criminal law can be used to deal with incidents of serious disorder at sports grounds but increasingly sports organisers are tightening their own rules in response to bad behaviour.

Employees Over 60

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many (a) men and (b) women aged over 60 years were employed by (i) his Department and (ii) his Department's agencies on 1 January. [53066]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 30 July 1998]: On 1 January my Department employed four women, aged over 60. No staff over 60 were employed by the Royal Parks Agency on that date.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many (a) men and (b) women employed by (1) his Department and (2) his Department's agencies have contracts of employment which permit them to retire after their 60th birthday. [53042]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 30 July 1998]: No staff in my Department have terms and conditions of employment which permit them to retire after their 60th birthday. However, staff may be retained beyond age 60 if there is an exceptional need for their services. In the Royal Parks Agency one man and two women have contracts which specifically allow them to work beyond 60 subject to the needs of the Agency, continued good health and efficient performance. These are reviewed annually.

Non-departmental Public Bodies

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list the non-departmental public bodies in existence on 1 May 1997 that (a) have been disbanded, (b) will be disbanded in the next 12 months, (c) have had their functions transferred to (i) another non-departmental public body and (ii) a democratically elected body, (d) have been renamed but continue to perform a similar role and (e) have been unchanged; if he will indicate in (c) (ii) the relevant successor body; what new non-departmental public bodies have been established since 1 May 1997; and how many non-departmental public bodies his Department currently is responsible for. [53857]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 30 July 1998]: The answer is as follows:

(a) None

(b) None

(c) (i) None, (ii) None

(d) Treasure Valuation Committee (formerly the Treasure Trove Reviewing Committee)[1]

New Millennium Experience Company (formerly Millennium Central Ltd.)[2]

(e) Details of all other NDPBs in existence on 1 May 1997 sponsored by this department are listed in "Public Bodies 1997".

The following NDPBs have been established since 1 May 1997:

(i) National Endowment for Science, Technology and the Arts

(ii) New Opportunities Fund

(iii) Football Taskforce

(iv) Historic Royal Palaces (formerly the Historic Royal Palaces Agency).

[1] The Treasure Trove Reviewing Committee was reconstituted as the Treasure Valuation Committee in September as a result of the Treasure Act 1996.

[2] Millennium Central Ltd. was reconstituted as the New Millennium Experience Company following the review of the Millennium Dome Project by the Government during May and June 1997.

My Department is responsible for 54 public bodies which include executive and advisory NDPBs and public corporations.

Ancient Monuments Laboratory

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to his answer of 29 June 1998, Official Report, column 59, (1) if he will request the Chief Executive of English Heritage to answer questions 47396, 43400 and 47397 tabled by the hon. Member for the City of York (Mr. Bayley) on 24 June; [53719]

(2) what discussions he has held with the Chief Executive of English Heritage about the proposed relocation of its Ancient Monuments Laboratory to Fort Cumberland, Portsmouth, with reference to (a) potential job losses, (b) the accuracy of the figures in the Chief Executive's letter dated 21 July to the hon. Member for the City of York (Mr. Bayley) and (c) the need to consult widely before relocating. [53608]

Mr. Banks: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before the summer recess. I shall therefore write to the hon. and learned Member and place a copy of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

DEFENCE

Overseas Travel

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his estimate of the cost of Ministerial overseas travel in his Department in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98 to date. [26638]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 5 February 1998]: I regret that it has not been possible to provide the full details requested in the hon. Member's question before now. I will write to the hon. Member in due course and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Correspondence

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans his Department has to correspond electronically with (a) hon. Members and (b) members of the public. [49848]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Biological Warfare

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what assessment his Department has made since 1990 of the implications of information being exchanged between Libya and the biological warfare programme organised by South Africa's former apartheid regime; what were the conclusions of this assessment; when this assessment was started and finished; what action has been taken in the light of this assessment; and if he will make a statement; [53088]

(2) what assessment his Department has made of the implications of the extent and nature of the biological warfare programme organised by South Africa's former apartheid regime, what were the conclusions of this assessment; when this assessment was started and finished; what action has been taken in the light of this assessment; and if he will make a statement. [53087]

Mr. Spellar: A thorough assessment of South Africa's biological warfare programme was made as part of the continuous process by which the UK Government monitor the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction. I am withholding further details under Exemption 1 of the Code of Practice for Access to Government Information, relating to Defence, Security and International relations.

Gulf War

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of British service personnel deployed to the Gulf in 1998 refused to take anti-anthrax injections; for what reasons such injections are currently voluntary; and if he plans to make such injections compulsory. [50001]

Mr. George Robertson: On 3 March this year, the Ministry of Defence announced that UK Service personnel and MOD civilians posted to the Gulf region were being offered immunisation against anthrax. As of 13 July, our records showed that 4,482 UK Service and MOD personnel have been offered immunisation and 1,469 are recorded as having commenced a course of anthrax immunisation. Hence an estimated 67 per cent. of personnel offered anthrax immunisation have declined to accept it. The level of uptake appears to be related to where an individual is serving and may be based on his or her personnel judgment as to the threat they personally face or faced. For example, 66 per cent. of personnel who were offered their first vaccination whilst serving in Kuwait have chosen to be vaccinated, but of personnel who were offered their first vaccination whilst serving on RN ships in the Gulf only 18 per cent. have chosen to accept.

We consider Immunisation to be vitally important for the protection of UK Service personnel against disease, in the context of public health threats as well as defence against biological warfare agents. At present, MOD policy is that immunisation for both purposes is voluntary, on the basis of informed consent. However, the means of protecting our personnel against such threats are continually reviewed and updated in the light of changing circumstances.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 29 June 1998, Official Report, column 7, what estimate he has made of the numbers, breeds and species of animals required at Porton Down for the experiments relating to Gulf War Syndrome; how many experiments involving animals will be required; and what representations he has received concerning the experiments. [50625]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

DERA

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the qualifications held by senior civil servants which are relevant to their duties in the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. [52047]

Mr. Spellar: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from John Chisholm to Dr. Ian Gibson, dated 31 July 1998:

I have been asked to reply to your question about qualifications held by senior civil servants relevant to their duties in the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA).

Senior civil servants employed in DERA are assessed and appointed against the criteria applied across Government, which embrace experience, competence and, on initial recruitment, appropriate academic and professional qualifications.

In addition, DERA's specialist staff generally have one or more of a wide spectrum of scientific, engineering and other degrees, about half at PhD level. The majority are also either members or fellows of prestigious learned and professional institutions. A number also hold visiting Professorships.

I hope this is helpful.

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what redundancies have (a) taken place and (b) are pending in the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. [52045]

Mr. Spellar: Since DERA was formed in 1995, there have been 878 redundancies, of which 65 were compulsory. At present there are 13 members of staff in a surplus position who might be made redundant if suitable alternative employment cannot be found.

As a result of the outcome of the review of the DERA's land ranges, announced today, a further reduction of 291 jobs is planned. The implementation of the reduction is dependent on the outcome of the detailed consultation with staff and Trades Unions but will certainly involve some redundancies.

Mr. McWilliam: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the future of DERA's land ranges at Eskmeals, Shoeburyness and Pendine. [55200]

Mr. Spellar: The initial period of consultation on the second stage of the review to address the long term future of DERA's land ranges is now complete. In order to maintain the necessary facilities, and to keep the affordable within projected income, we have decided to concentrate as much of the test and evaluation work as possible at Eskmeals and to use the ranges at Shoeburyness and Pendine only as required. The proposals put forward in January have been modified slightly in the light of the consultation process, with the retention of 6 additional jobs at the range at Shoeburyness and 10 at Pendine, and the loss of 20 jobs at Eskmeals. Plans for the Environmental Test Centre and demilitarisation facilities at Shoeburyness are unchanged. The planned figures are shown in the following table:

	Staff levels
Site	Current	Future	Difference
Shoeburyness
Range	182	31	−151
Environmental Test Centre	69	34	−35
Demilitarisations	72	72	—
Pendine	115	30	−85
Eskmeals	140	120	−20
Total	578	287	−291

The implementation of these measures will be phased to ensure that customer requirements are still met during the process. It is anticipated that most of the changes will have taken place by April 1999, though the exact timing is dependent on the work programme and on the completion of the next stage of detailed consultation with staff and Trades Unions.

Submarines

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions permission has been (a) granted, (b) deferred and (c) refused to lift submarines on the shiplift at Faslane; and if he will make a statement. [52167]

Mr. Spellar: The Clyde Naval Base Shiplift has been used to lift submarines on 15 occasions. Of these, 13 have been on VANGUARD Class SSBNs and 2 on SSNs. No planned or unplanned lifts have been refused permission. The shiplift returned to operational use in June 1998 having been withdrawn from service from October 1997 to March 1998 to allow modification to the platform rails. Two dockings planned in this period were deferred. Docking dates frequently change from a variety of reasons, not directly linked to the Shiplift. The docking programme is optimised for submarine operational commitments, for which SSBNs have the priority, the tasking of submarine maintenance and repair staff on other priority tasks, and the maintenance requirements of the shiplift.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the estimated cost of each of the Astute class submarines currently on order. [53760]

Mr. George Robertson: The total cost of procuring the first three Astute Class submarines is expected to be around £2 billion. This includes design, build and some in-service support as a package.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will make a statement on his Department's future plans for the storage of spent submarine reactor cores at BNFL Sellafield; [54080]

(2) what was the average running cost of transporting used submarine reactor cores in (a) 1986, (b) 1991 and (c) 1996. [54084]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the locations of each used submarine reactor core. [54096]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how much his Department has spent to date on the new fuel transport flasks for the transport of submarine reactor cores; and what he estimates the total cost of this project will be; [54082]

(2) if he will make a statement on progress being made towards introducing the new fuel transport flasks for the transport of submarine reactor cores. [54083]

Mr. Spellar: Good progress is being made towards introducing the new used core transport package flasks for the transport of spent submarine reactor cores at the end of 1998. Manufacture of the flasks is nearing completion and they will soon be tested before delivery. I am withholding the cost of the contract under Exemption 13 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information relating to Third Party's commercial confidences.

Transport Aircraft

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what options he is assessing for replacing RAF transport aircraft. [51066]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Guardsmen Fisher and Wright

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) on how many occasions and on what dates the Army Board has considered the question of discharge of Guardsmen Fisher and Wright; and what plans it has to consider this matter further; [48364]

(2) from which public relations companies he has received representations concerning the interests of Guardsmen Fisher and Wright; and if he will estimate the cost to public funds of replying to these representations. [54028]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

RAF Aircraft (Gulf)

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make statement about the RAF aircraft deployed in the Gulf. [52542]

Mr. George Robertson: At present 6 RAF Tornado aircraft and 243 personnel are based in Saudi Arabia, 2 VC-10 tankers and 36 personnel are based in Bahrain and 12 RAF Tornados and 380 personnel are based in Kuwait. These forces remain in the Gulf to demonstrate our determination that Iraq should comply with all relevant United Nations Security Council Resolutions.

In addition, HMS Grafton maintains a Royal Naval presence in the Gulf and will shortly be joined by HMS York. The Armilla patrol has displayed the UK's commitment to the region since 1980 and plays an important part in enforcing United Nations sanctions.

Chemical Weapons

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date he agreed with the US Defence Secretary to increase co-operation to combat chemical and biological weapons; for what reasons he has agreed to increase such co-operation; what are the objectives of the increased co-operation; and if he will list the areas of chemical and biological warfare which are covered by this agreement. [49494]

Mr. George Robertson: I agreed with Secretary Cohen on 3 June, during my recent visit to the United States, that our two countries would enhance our co-operation efforts to combat chemical and biological weapons.

There is a clear and growing international consensus that the possession of chemical and biological weapons is unacceptable. Recent events in Iraq have demonstrated why co-operation between the US and UK in this area is absolutely vital. The US and UK already work closely together in this area, and technical and research co-operation in areas such as vaccines is well established. The June agreement will provide more precise high level policy and strategic direction. A full range of activities will be addressed. This will ensure both nations benefit fully from military and technical expertise and understanding in responding to all chemical and biological warfare risks.

The detailed programme of co-operation has not yet been established.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what progress has been made in appointing an independent scientist to review the trial reports of the germ warfare trials in the south of England which took place between 1964 and 1977; and if he will make a statement; [54534]

(2) what is the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment's evaluation of whether short-term exposure to mustard gas causes (a) psychological disorders and (b) sexual dysfunction in the long term. [54533]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the library of the House.

Information Technology

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department spent on IT itemising (a) personal computers, (b) main-frame, (c) mini-computers and (d) file servers in the last year for which figures are available. [52884]

Mr. Spellar: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Defence Attachés

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how he plans to develop the role of defence attachés in providing training for armed forces from (a) Central and Eastern Europe and (b) the rest of the world with regard to the importance of democratic accountability and the use of civilians in defence management roles. [53243]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Reservists' Pensions

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many people have been awarded attributable benefits for reservist pensions in each of the last 18 years; [53190]

(2) how many applications from reservists and Territorial Army personnel for attributable benefits for reservists' pensions have been rejected by the War Pensions Agency in each of the last 18 years. [53189]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Merchant Navy Personnel (Arctic Medal)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will review the eligibility of the merchant navymen who served and died while on convoy to Russia for the Arctic Medal; and if he will make a statement. [53187]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Land Quality Assessments

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many land quality assessments of Ministry of Defence sites have been completed since April 1996; if the reports of the assessments and of land quality statements are available to the public; and if he will place a list of their titles in the Library specifying the dates on which they were produced and the locations concerned. [53377]

Mr. Spellar: This information is not readily available in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Ministry of Defence sites have been sold, or disposed of, by his Department since April 1996; how many of these sites have been the subject of land quality assessments and land quality statements; and if he will place a list of the titles of the assessments and statements in the Library specifying the dates on which they were produced and the locations concerned. [53379]

Mr. Spellar: The information is not readily available in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. I will write to the hon. Member.

AWE Aldermaston

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the Mathematical Physics Division at the Atomic Weapons Establishment, Aldermaston was set up; what is the purpose of this division; how many series of technical papers or reports are currently being produced by this division; and what are the names of each series. [53929]

Mr. Spellar: The Mathematical Physics Division at AWE Aldermaston has been in existence since the setting up of the then Atomic Weapons Research Establishment in the 1950s. Its purpose is to provide theoretical and computer models of nuclear weapons. The division produces two series of reports, which are:

Theoretical physics notes

Senior Superintendent Physics Division/USA.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 20 July 1998, Official Report, column 429, regarding AWE Aldermaston, if he will list the departments and divisions within the (a) assurance, (b) physics research, (c) programmes and (d) technology directorates. [53930]

Mr. Spellar: The departments and divisions within the (a) assurance, (b) physics research, (c) programmes and (d) technology directorates are respectively:

(a) Safety, Environment, Health, Quality, Security, Operations and Assurance Services.

(b) Hydrodynamics, Radiation Physics and Design Mathematics and Seismology.

(c) Research Co-ordination, Corporate Systems, Strategy Development and Strategy Co-ordination.

(d) The Technology Directorate has the following Business areas—Explosives, Chemistry, Nuclear Materials, Plutonium and Highly Enriched Uranium, Waste Management, Engineering Workshops and Metallic Materials, Burghfield Group Facility and Quality Control.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the progress being made towards completing the A91 liquid waste treatment plant at AWE Aldermaston. [54088]

Mr. Spellar: The A91 facility is currently in the final stages of inactive commissioning. The building is currently expected to become operational by the end of 1999.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the progress being made towards decontaminating the north ponds area of AWE Aldermaston. [54087]

Mr. Spellar: One of the North Ponds has been decontaminated and decommissioned. An extensive new water management system, which will allow the decontamination of the other ponds to be carried out, is currently being built on the site. The new water management system is now nearing completion and is expected to be in use in early 1999.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the stated running costs of the atomic weapons establishments of £302 million in 1997–98 includes all staff costs and management fees to Hunting-BRAE Ltd. [53762]

Mr. Spellar: Yes.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the amounts paid to Hunting-BRAE in each of the last five years for administering and managing the atomic weapons establishments. [53763]

Mr. George Robertson: Payments to Hunting-BRAE are commercially confidential and I am, therefore, withholding this information under Exemption 13 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information relating to Third Party commercial confidences. My hon. Friend will, however, find a general breakdown of costs for the nuclear warhead programme for financial year 1997–98 in the Strategic Defence Review White Paper Supporting Essay Five, Figure 5, which shows that the total running costs of AWE in 1997–98 were £302 million.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what reduction in radioactive emissions from AWE Aldermaston would follow from an end to production. [54448]

Mr. Spellar: Activities such as decommissioning and maintaining safety standards within facilities make up by far the largest proportion of discharges from AWE Aldermaston. Were production of nuclear warheads to cease, there would, therefore, be a minimal effect on emissions from the site.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what environmental assessment of toxic and radioactive contamination levels present in the soil at AWE (a) Aldermaston, (b) Burghfield, (c) Cardiff and (d) Foulness has been conducted; and if he will place a copy of each such assessment in the Library; [54086]

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of additional nuclear waste stores, and of what cubic capacity required at AWE Aldermaston up to 2020 (a) to meet future arisings and (b) to replace those stores which do not meet regulatory requirements; [54091]

(3) if he will list the amount spent meeting all the requirements of the Nuclear Installations Inspectorate at the Atomic Weapons Establishments at (a) Aldermaston and (b) Burghfield in each of the last five years; and how much he expects to spend at each in total; [54092]

(4) if he will place in the Library a copy of the Atomic Weapons Establishment's Waste Management and Decommissioning Strategy; and if he will make a statement; [54090]

(5) how many buildings are currently in use for storing radioactive waste at AWE Aldermaston. [54085]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Exercise Dimming Sun

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 29 June 1998, Official Report, column 14, regarding the Dimming Sun nuclear weapon exercise, how many people are expected to take part in this exercise; what will be its scenario; which other Government departments are expected to take part in it; and on which Government properties in Norfolk it will take place. [53931]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Air Force Board

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 7 May 1998, Official Report, column 437, if he will place in the Library a list of the items discussed at the meetings of the Air Force Board on (a) 17 June 1998 and (b) 17 July 1997. [53375]

Mr. George Robertson: I regret that in the answer of 7 May the date of the annual meeting of the Air Force Board in 1997 was wrong. The meeting took place on 16, not 17, July.

On that occasion, and again at this year's meeting on 17 June, the only item on the Board's agenda was the RAF's End of Year Performance Report 1996–97 and 1997–98 respectively.

Indonesian Army Officers

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 1 June 1998, Official Report, columns 102–03, on Indonesian army officers, if any Indonesian army officers being taught at non-military educational institutions in the UK as part of programmes provided on a private and commercial basis are being funded by United Kingdom defence companies. [54417]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 8 June 1998, Official Report, column 422 on defence exports, if he will list the fixed percentage rates referred to in his reply and the factors governing their application. [54404]

Mr. Spellar: The rates for Commercial Exploitation Levy will vary according to the type of equipment involved and whether the use of Government-funded jigs and tools is intended. Details of the individual rates, and the circumstances in which they might apply, are withheld under Exemption 13 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information relating to Third Party's commercial confidences. Higher values sales would normally employ profit sharing schemes rather than the application of rates of levy. The circumstances of individual sales may also permit some variation to the levy arrangements which are negotiated case by case.

Promotional Events

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many companies were involved in defence industry promotional events on board Her Majesty's ships engaged in Ocean Wave; what was the cost to his Department of defence industry promotional events staged during Ocean Wave; and what contributions towards these costs were provided by the defence companies involved. [54405]

Mr. Spellar: A total of 47 companies, including divisions of companies, took part in promotional events on board a variety of ships and submarines. The majority of this activity was in the form of eight single day "Defence Industry Days", where the costs of the event were met by a flat rate contribution of £588, including VAT, per company per event. An average of twelve companies attended each of the eight days generating a total of £57,624. In addition some companies made use of other ship visits on an individual basis; there were no additional costs to the MOD as a result of these activities.

Tornado Lease (Italy)

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the value of the countertrade and offset commitments entered into as part of the deal to lease Tornado aircraft to Italy; and what percentage of the value of the contract those commitments represent. [54169]

Mr. Spellar: The arrangements with Italy for the lease of Tornado aircraft provide for 100 per cent. offset of the lease value of £100 million.

Overseas Sales Demonstrations

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much has been charged to defence companies for the cost of overseas sales demonstrations by MoD teams in each of the last two years; and what percentage of the total cost of such demonstrations this represents. [54167]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Infantry Export Support Team

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the Infantry Export Support Team was created; what was its annual cost in each of the last two years; how much of this was funded by (a) DESO and (b) industry; and what other export support teams have been created. [54418]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Persistent Inquirers

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which of his Department's agencies have procedures to identify persistent inquirers for information. [53948]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Commercially Confidential Information

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what guidelines exist in his Department governing the publication of commercially confidential information; and what is his Department's definition of commercially confidential information. [54164]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Non-operational Warheads (Storage)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to store non-operational warheads. [54450]

Mr. George Robertson: Operationally available warheads are either deployed on Trident submarines or stored in secure facilities ashore. Warheads in the processing margin or required for technical surveillance purposes are also held at secure locations ashore. In addition, obsolete Chevaline warheads and a few WE177 weapons remain in storage awaiting dismantlement. Where Trident warheads are replaced rather than refurbished during their service life, those withdrawn will also be stored for periods pending dismantling. We plan to dismantle all surplus warheads as quickly as possible.

Sierra Leone

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the events which led to Sandline personnel being invited onto HMS Cornwall on 20 March. [54546]

Mr. George Robertson: HMS Cornwall sailed from Freetown on 20 March. No Sandline personnel were invited aboard on that day.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library the logs of HMS Monmouth for the period of its deployment off Sierra Leone in 1998; when that vessel departed from the United Kingdom for that deployment; if he will publish the orders that were issued to the captain on the issue of involvement in that country's civil war; and if he will make a statement on the bearing of restricted FCO Telegram 44 to Abuja in this context. [54545]

Mr. George Robertson: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the (i) position and (ii) orders of (a) HMS Cornwall, (b) HMS Monmouth and (c) RFA Orangeleaf at the time of ECOMOG initial military action against the Sierra Leone junta; and what was the date of issuing of those orders. [54473]

Mr. George Robertson: At the time of ECOMOG initial military action in February 1998, HMS Cornwall was alongside in Devonport, England, HMS Monmouth was alongside in Cape Verde Islands and RFA Orangeleaf was alongside in Gibraltar. These ships were under no specific orders at that time.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the nature of the land contact enjoyed by RFA 'Orangeleaf' during its stationing off Sierra Leone with HMS 'Monmouth' and HMS 'Cornwall'; what contact took place between that vessel and (i) ECOMOG and (ii) Sandline; and if any of its supplies were transferred to shore. [54549]

Mr. George Robertson: FRA Orangeleaf had no direct land contact during the period she was stationed off Sierra Leone. She did not go alongside. No supplies were transferreed ashore. There was no contact between Orangeleaf and ECOMAG or Sandline.

Trident

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects the production of the first Trident warheads to cease; and when replacement production will begin. [54451]

Mr. George Robertson: A programme of refurbishment or replacement of Trident warheads will continue throughout the service life of the Trident system, in order to maintain its safety and reliability. Those warheads which are replaced rather than refurbished will be dismantled.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the cost of (a) constructing and (b) equipping each of the four Trident nuclear submarines. [53759]

Mr. George Robertson: The latest estimate of the cost of constructing each of the four Vanguard Class Trident submarines, at 1997–87 prices, is:

	£ million
HMS Vanguard	[1]1,644
HMS Victorious	879
HMS Vigilant	891
HMS Vengeance	863

[1] Includes First of Class Costs

The estimated cost of their associated integrated strategic weapon system and tactical weapon system equipments is:

	£ million
HMS Vanguard	218
HMS Victorious	182
HMS Vengeance	166

Armed Service Personnel

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the five most common destinations as careers for armed services personnel following their departure from the services. [54932]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Departmental Publications

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many of his Department's publications have been made available in (a) Braille, (b) audio tape and (c) large print in 1997–98; and what percentage of the total number of publications this represents. [54269]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

HMS Vanguard

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the incident on board HMS Vanguard in June. [53758]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Chevaline Warhead Assembly

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects the Chevaline warhead assembly programme to be completed. [54446]

Mr. George Robertson: I assume that my hon. Friend is referring to the disassembly programme for Chevaline warheads, in which case I refer him to the answer given to the hon. Member for Truro and St. Austell (Mr. Taylor) on 7 May 1998, Official Report, columns 436–37, by my hon. Friend the then Minister for the Armed Forces.

Royal Hospital, Haslar

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of the Royal Hospital, Haslar. [54662]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Territorial Army

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to publish his Department's Spending Defence Review on the Territorial Army; and if he will make a statement. [54897]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

NIREX

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the amounts paid to NIREX by (a) his Department, (b) the Atomic Weapons Establishment, (c) Devonport Dockyard, and (d) Rosyth Dockyard in each of the last five years. [54093]

Mr. Spellar: Payments by the MOD to Nirex in respect of the development of a Deep Waste depository are made centrally. They began in financial year 1994–95 and the sums paid so far are:

FY 97–98: £2.7m.

I will write further to the hon. Member with information on other payments which may have been made to Nirex in respect of advice given on the packaging of waste material.

Departmental Property

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all properties (a) owned and (b) leased or rented by his Department outside the United Kingdom, the purposes for which they are designated and the annual running costs for each property. [54444]

Mr. Spellar: The information regarding properties owned, leased or rented is not readily available in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The annual running costs for each property are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Ion Exchange Resin

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on progress being made to construct building D151 to store ion exchange resin. [54089]

Mr. Spellar: The construction of the upgraded Nuclear Utilities Building at Devonport Royal Dockyard (Project D151) is complete.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many modified Magnox flasks and resin catch tanks are in use at Rosyth and Devonport to store ion exchange resin. [54081]

Mr. Spellar: There are 35 resin catch tanks currently in use at Rosyth Royal Dockyard, and 29 resin catch tanks and 9 modified magnox flasks currently in use at Devonport Royal Dockyard.

Sellafield

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to replace the spent nuclear submarine fuel ponds at BNFL Sellafield; and if he will make a statement. [53757]

Mr. Spellar: The current 'B27' store at BNFL Sellafield has a finite life. MOD has contracted BNFL to provide a replacement used fuel storage service for spent submarine reactor fuel for a period of forty years from 1 December 2001. Using their own funds, BNFL are currently designing and constructing the new facility and will transfer all submarine reactor fuel from the existing B27 store by 2011. The sums invested by BNFL will be recovered within the agreed charge for the storage service.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence under what budget headings costs directly related to nuclear weapons appear. [53761]

Mr. George Robertson: Costs of the nuclear warhead programme are contained in Vote 3 Subhead A which covers the Chief of Defence Procurement's Top Level Budget. Other costs associated with the acquisition, operation and support of the Trident deterrent are contained in Vote 3 Subhead D (Director General Submarines/Chief Strategic Systems Executive), Vote 1 Subhead A (Commander in Chief Fleet) and Vote 2 Subhead A (Chief of Fleet Support).

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if all WE177 warheads have been dismantled; and if the highly enriched uranium has been recycled. [54513]

Mr. George Robertson: 97 per cent. of WE177 warheads have now been dismantled and the dismantling programme will be complete by end of August 1998. Nuclear material will be retained for Defence purposes.

Green Transport

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 27 March 1998, Official Report, column 313, on departmental transport arrangements, what further changes he has made. [54013]

Mr. Spellar: To inform this process, arrangements are being made for travel surveys to be conducted amongst civilian and Service staff at several representative MOD sites.

Chemical Technology Division

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer on 29 January 1998, Official Report, column 345, of which directorate the Chemical Technology Division is now a part; what former AWE chemical plant it operates; and what is its purpose. [54195]

Mr. Spellar: The Chemical Technology Division has now been absorbed into the chemistry Business Area, which is in the Technology Directorate. Chemical plant continues to be operated for the treatment of radioactive effluents and the recovery of valuable materials from residues and wastes. Such plant is also available to provide adequately pure gases for use in work box atmospheres, where hazardous materials are handled. The purpose of the current chemical technology area includes research and development into a range of materials such as polymers, ceramics and component fabrication using these materials. The work supports research and development and stockpile stewardship of the UK nuclear deterrent.

MOD Police

Mrs. Gilroy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 29 June 1998, Official Report, columns 8–9, on MOD police, what estimate he has made of the cost of disciplinary cases whose procedures took (a) six to 12 months to conclusion and (b) 12 or more months to conclusion in each of the years. [54566]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Nuclear Transport

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will issue guidance on the containment of contaminated run-off water produced by the cooling jets which LAESI Guidelines require to be fixed in position and kept in operation in the event of a serious nuclear transport accident. [54447]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

RAF Manston

Dr. Ladyman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his plans for the disposal of RAF Manston. [54967]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I am pleased to be able to announce that following a marketing campaign and open competition conducted by my Department, the Wiggins Group plc has been selected as the preferred bidder for the airfield site at RAF Manston and exchange of contracts is expected shortly. The Wiggins Group's plans for the airfield include expanding civil aviation operations and substantial site development which will encompass airport related and general commercial uses together with hotel and leisure development. The company also intends to retain Manston's Spitfire and Hurricane Memorial Museum as a permanent reminder of the historic role of RAF Manston. The Wiggins Group's plans for the airfield are in line with the aspirations of local authorities' own planning objectives for the area. In this respect, maintaining a viable commercial airfield at Manston is considered key to the economic regeneration of Thanet. The Wiggins Group's proposals are good news for the people and business community of East Kent. The proposed development of Manston has the potential to generate increased employment opportunities and to bring long term benefits to the local economy as a whole.

My Department will continue to offer whatever practical support it can to the Wiggins Group to enable a smooth and uninterrupted transfer from military to civilian airfield operations to meet the RAF's planned withdrawal from Manston on 31 March 1999.

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will announce his preferred plans for the disposal of RAF Manston to the private sector as a civilian airfield; and if he will make a statement. [53002]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 28 July 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave today to my hon. Friend the Member for Thanet, South (Dr. Ladyman).

Catering and Mess Services

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if a decision on the outcome of the catering and mess services market test covering the provision of catering and mess services to the British Army in Germany has been reached. [54979]

Mr. Spellar: Following a rigorous competition it has been decided to award a contract for the provision of catering and mess services for the British Army in Germany, to NAAFI, with support from its sub-contractor EUREST. The award of the contract is expected to generate savings in the region of £18 million over the next five years, whilst continuing to deliver the required level of service.

BNFL Magnox Facility (Gloucestershire)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what work for his Department will be undertaken at the BNFL Magnox facility at Berkeley Centre in Gloucestershire; and if he will make a statement. [55133]

Mr. Spellar: A programme of work will be carried out at the Berkeley Centre on a small quantity of nuclear material owned by the Ministry of Defence and held outside international safeguards. The Berkeley centre has previously only worked with safeguarded material, as it has not been involved in military nuclear programmes, which are unsafeguarded. The work is essential to meet a clear requirement to provide assurance of the continued safe operation of submarine nuclear reactors, and it is not connected with the nuclear weapons programme. The facilities to be used are unique to the Berkeley centre. The work, which is a short study, will take about seven months to complete. Upon completion of the study and the removal of the unsafeguarded material the Berkeley Centre will return to its fully safeguarded status.

RAF St. Athan

Mr. John Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of RAF St. Athan. [54976]

Mr. Spellar: I indicated earlier this year in the context of the Strategic Defence Review that RAF St. Athan will become a part of the new Defence Aviation Repair Agency. This will form in April 1999 and move as soon as practicable thereafter to a Trading Fund. In the light of these recent decisions, I have now considered the outcome of the competition inaugurated in 1994 under the Competing for Quality programme for the management of the off-aircraft engineering and on-site support activities at RAF St. Athan. I have also taken into account that the competition did not meet all our financial objectives. I have therefore decided that the best value for money for Defence is most likely to be achieved by not proceeding any further with the competition. Challenging efficiency targets will be given to RAF St. Athan, and these will be carried forward within the context of the Defence Aviation Repair Agency. These decisions mean that RAF St. Athan can look forward to a clear future which builds upon its important contribution to our defence effort.

Helicopters

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date the Lynx of HMS "Cornwall" was replaced by a Sea King; where that helicopter is normally based; and what instructions were issued to the crew on embarkation concerning planned humanitarian or other activities. [54472]

Mr. George Robertson: HMS "Cornwall" has operated with a Sea King helicopter since at least February 1996. The Sea King on board HMS "Cornwall" during her deployment to West Africa was previously based at RNAS Culdrose. The Flight Commander attended a brief which covered a wide range of operational issues. The flight did not, however, receive specific instructions on humanitarian activities prior to their embarkation.

Hunting-BRAE

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how the savings achieved by Hunting-BRAE plc from meeting incentive targets of his Department are allocated. [54449]

Mr. George Robertson: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Ottawa Convention

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what action he is taking to implement the Government's obligations under the Ottawa Convention. [54970]

Mr. George Robertson: As of today, the moratorium we have had in place on the use of anti-personnel landmines, has become a total ban, without exception. Instructions to this effect have been issued to all Command Headquarters and training establishments. We intend this to be an international example to others. Other actions the Ministry of Defence is taking to implement the Convention, such as the destruction of stockpiles and assistance to humanitarian demining, are well known to hon. Members.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Hunt Kennels

Mr. Michael J. Foster: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, if he will list those hunt kennels which have been reported to his Department as having unsatisfactory SRM surveillance audits during (a) 1997 and (b) 1998; and if he will make a statement on the resultant health risk to animals. [44795]

Mr. Rooker [pursuant to the reply, 15 June 1998, c. 20–26]: In the list of hunt kennels given for 1997 the following should also have been included:

Teifiside Hunt
Cefn Lodge Kennels
Cilgerran
Cardigan
Dyfed.

The following was included in error and should be deleted:

1998

Enfield Chase Hunt
Birch Farm
White Stubbs Lane
Broxbourne
Hertfordshire.

My officials are writing to the Master of Foxhounds at the Hunt to apologise for the incorrect inclusion of it on the list.

Live Animal Exports

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish the number of live horses exported for slaughter within the EU by country of destination in each of the last three years. [51378]

Mr. Morley: I am in a position to answer only in relation to exports from Great Britain. None of the live equines exported from Great Britain in the years concerned was declared as being moved for the purpose of immediate slaughter.

Offal and Greaves

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will take measures to prevent the export of fresh offal and greaves. [53571]

Mr. Rooker: The export from the UK of meat meal, bone meal and meat and bone meal of mammalian origin is prohibited by virtue of Commission Decision 98/256 concerning measures to protect against BSE. This Decision also prohibits the export of offals derived from bovine animals slaughtered in the UK, except for uses other than in food, animal feed, cosmetics, medical or pharmaceutical products. In addition, certain offals from cattle, sheep and goats are covered by national controls on specified risk material which require their destruction. Provided the conditions laid down in national or Community rules, or by the authorities in the countries to which they are dispatched, are respected, exports of other types of greaves or offal are permitted.

Eggs

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will ensure eggs originating from a battery system are clearly labelled as such; and if he will make a statement. [53784]

Mr. Morley: The Commission's Communication of 11 March 1998 on the protection of laying hens kept in various systems of rearing envisages the possibility of mandatory labelling of table eggs and packs by type of production. This would require a formal Commission proposal adopted via the Management Committee procedure. I strongly support the principle of mandatory labelling of egg packs and look forward to the eventual adoption of Commission proposals on this matter in the context of wider proposals on improved welfare for laying hens.

Under 10 Metre Licences

Mr. Michael Jabez Foster: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will make under-10m licences area specific; [53602]

(2) if he will adjust the allocation of the quota between under-10m and over-10m vessels to take account of former over-10m registered vessels that have been re-registered as under-10m vessels without reducing their catching potential; [53604]

(3) what estimate he has made of the number of under-10m licence holders now fishing in Area 7D which have no historic connection with the area; [53601]

(4) what estimate he has made of the extent of the practice of selling former over-10m licences together with the track records the vessels being temporarily shortened, and then re-registered as under-10m vessels; and how many prosecutions there have been in respect of this practice. [53603]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 30 July 1998]: A restrictive licensing scheme has operated for vessels of 10m and under since May 1993. Any one who wishes to bring a vessel into the under-10m fleet, including a vessel which has been reduced in length from over-10m, must acquire a licence from an existing under-10m vessel. Moreover the tonnage, engine power and vessel capacity units (VCUs) of the incoming vessel must not be greater than that of the vessel that is being replaced. The aggregation of licences is permitted up to a maximum of 100 VCUs per transaction.

Within the UK there are currently some 5,200 under-10m fishing vessels licensed by the Fisheries Departments including 978 vessels licensed by the Ministry's fisheries office at Hastings and its sub office at Poole covering the coastline from Dartford in Kent to Lyme Regis in Dorset. There has not been an overall increase in the number of vessels licensed by the Hastings fisheries office since the introduction of restrictive licensing.

Examination of licensing transactions in 1996 and 1997 has indicated that some 50 vessels over-10m in overall length were shortened, re-registered and re-licensed as vessels under-10m in overall length. Twelve of the vessels were based within the area administered by the Hastings fisheries office. There have been no prosecutions against such vessels.

The quota allocations made to the under-10m fleet are based on the proportion of fish caught in the reference period 1994 to 1996. Most allocations are underpinned so that the proportion of fish allocated to the under-10m fleet is not less than the average proportion made available in the period 1991 to 1993. In 1998 nine out of twelve of the whitefish allocations made to the under-10m fleet in the English Channel have benefited from underpinning.

These arrangements, and the need for changes to them, are kept under review.

Port of Hastings

Mr. Michael Jabez Foster: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the total catch at the port of Hastings in each quarter in the past four years. [53605]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 30 July 1998]: The information on the total catch landed at Hastings is set out in the table.

Brown Shrimp Catch (The Wash)

Dr. George Turner: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what offers of compensation have been made to (a) Wash fishermen and (b) those directly involved in processing brown shrimp, for loss of earnings as a result of his decision not to postpone the dredging and beach replenishment programme at Mablethorpe in 1997. [53747]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 30 July 1998]: This is entirely a matter for the Environment Agency, but I understand an offer of £21,783 has been made to fishermen by the Agency in respect of disturbance in the area where beach replenishment took place in 1997.

Dr. George Turner: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what evidence he has assessed on the stock level of brown shrimp in the North Sea in (a) 1997 and (b) the period 1993 to 1996; and if he will place such evidence in the Library. [53743]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 30 July 1998]: An international study group is collecting data on brown shrimp but has not yet made an assessment of the stock in the North Sea as a whole.

So far as the Wash and adjacent areas are concerned, an index of abundance has been prepared using landings of brown shrimp per unit effort. The data are as follows.

Landings, effort and index of abundance (landings per unit effort) for brown shrimps from The Wash and adjacent areas 1986 to 1997

Year	Landings in tonnes	Effort in 1000s hours fished	LPUE in kg/hour
1986	497	15	32.7
1988	561	19	29.8
1989	653	25	25.8
1990	399	27	14.9
1991	344	19	18.1
1992	401	11	35.0
1993	923	23	40.0
1994	967	33	29.6
1995	869	38	22.8

Dr. George Turner: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what by weight was (a) the actual catch of brown shrimp by Wash fishermen, in The Wash or off the Lincolnshire coast during the months August to December 1997 and (b) his estimate of the catch which would have been possible in the absence of the dredging and beach replenishment programme at Mablethorpe; [53745]

(2) what estimate was made of the shortfall in income to (a) Wash fishermen and (b) those directly involved in processing the catch, which resulted from the difference in catch of brown shrimp in September to December 1997 and the average catch made in the years 1993 to 1996 when the difference is valued using relevant prices for (i) grade A and (ii) grade B brown shrimp; [53746]

(3) if he will tabulate the catch of brown shrimp by (i) weight and (ii) monetary value made by Wash fishermen in the Wash or off the Lincolnshire coast, during the months August to December for each of the years 1993 to 1996 and the corresponding average data for these years. [53744]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 30 July 1998]: The following table shows total landings of brown shrimp into the Wash ports by volume and value.

I have made no estimate of the catch which would have been possible in the absence of dredging in 1997. Variations in catch from year to year reflect a number of factors including stock levels, fishing effort, type of gear employed and market price.

I have made no estimate of the effect on the incomes of fishermen or processors of variations in catch.

Ministerial Visit (Cambridgeshire)

Sir Brian Mawhinney: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on what date and by what means the Parliamentary Secretary, the hon. Member for Scunthorpe (Mr. Morley),informed the right hon. Member for North West Cambridgeshire (Sir B. Mawhinney) that he would be in the North-West Cambridgeshire constituency on ministerial business. [53452]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 30 July 1998]: I was in the North West Cambridgeshire constituency on ministerial business on 22 July when I visited the East of England Agricultural Show.

It is usual practice for my Office to inform hon. Members in writing when their constituencies are included in itineraries for my visits. My office did so on this occasion also, but regrettably, were incorrectly advised that the East of England show ground was located in the adjacent constituency of Peterborough. The letter was therefore incorrectly addressed.

Steps have been taken to ensure that such errors do not recur.

Healthy Eating

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are his Department's priorities in respect of the promotion of healthy eating. [53589]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 30 July 1998]: The Government's role is to provide accurate, unbiased, up-to-date and understandable information on the basis of which people can make their own informed choices about what they eat. This Department will continue to provide such information, and in doing so will emphasise the importance of a varied and balanced diet.

Meat Imports

Mr. Walter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what the volume of poultry meat imports from Italy has been in the last three years; and if all imports were processed at establishments approved by the Italian authorities under EC Directive 92/116. [53712]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 30 July 1998]: Official Trade Statistics record that poultry meat imports into the UK from Italy amounted to 7,210 tonnes, 7,352 tonnes and 5,929 tonnes in 1995, 1996 and 1997 respectively. These figures remain provisional and subject to amendment. We have no reason to believe that any of the poultry meat imported from Italy in the last 3 years was produced in premises not operating in accordance with the conditions laid down in Directive 92/116.

Mr. Walter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in which EU member states it is permitted to feed pigs meat and bone meal. [53715]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 30 July 1998]: As far as we are aware, the feeding of mammalian meat and bone meal (MBM) to pigs is permitted in all European Union countries except the United Kingdom.

UK controls prohibit the feeding of mammalian MBM to all farmed livestock, including pigs. This extension of the EU-wide ban was introduced on the specific advice of the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee (SEAC), to prevent cross contamination between ruminant and non ruminant feed. Our controls go further in this way than other Member States because we have had to cope with a much higher background level of infectivity.

Whaling

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures the United Kingdom will table at the next meeting of the International Whaling Commission in respect of the preservation of whale species. [53617]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 30 July 1998]: At the meeting of the Consultative Forum on Whaling on 15 July, which I chaired, possible issues that the United Kingdom might raise at the next annual meeting of the IWC in June 1999, were discussed. The Forum agreed to give further consideration to the matter at its next meeting in December, and I look forward to receiving its advice.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the (a) promotion and (b) the implementation to date of a whale sanctuary in the South Atlantic. [53618]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 30 July 1998]: At the annual meeting of the International Whaling Commission, which took place in Oman from 16 to 21 June, Brazil indicated that it was considering proposing a whale sanctuary in the South Atlantic. The United Kingdom made clear its support in principle for this idea. However, Brazil did not put forward a formal proposal for such a sanctuary; I understand that the Brazilian delegation felt that more discussion with the range states was needed.

Non-Departmental Public Bodies

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the non-departmental public bodies in existence on 1 May 1997 that (a) have been disbanded, (b) will be disbanded in the next 12 months, (c) have had their functions transferred to (i) another non-departmental public body and (ii) a democratically elected body, (d) have been renamed but continue to perform a similar role and (e) have been unchanged; if he will indicate in (c) (ii) the relevant successor body; what new non-departmental public bodies have been established since 1 May 1997; and how many non-departmental public bodies his Department currently is responsible for. [53853]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 30 July 1998]: (a) In a News Release on 28 May 1997 my right hon. Friend, the previous Minister, announced the disbanding of the Ministry's nine advisory Regional Panels;

(b) None.

(c) None of the MAFF non-departmental public bodies have had their functions transferred to:

(i) another non-departmental public body;

(ii) a democratically elected body.

(d) None of the MAFF non-departmental public bodies have been renamed but continue to perform a similar role.

(e) Details of all other non-departmental public bodies in existence on 1 May 1997 sponsored by this department are listed in "Public Bodies 1997".

The Potato Industry Development Council (known as the British Potato Council) was established on 1 July 1997. The council is funded by a levy on the industry.

My right hon. Friend is currently responsible for 33, including multiple bodies.

The Government are committed to keeping the number of non-departmental public bodies to a minimum and to ensuring that those which remain are open, accountable and effective. Many of the new non-departmental public bodies established since 1 May 1997 will be essential in helping the Government deliver their Manifesto commitments.

Employees Over 60

Mr. Chope: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many (a) men and (b) women aged over 60 years were employed by (i) his Department and (ii) his Department's agencies on 1 January. [53073]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 31 July 1998]: In the core Department, there were 89 men and 72 women aged over 60 years employed on 1 January. Chief Executives of the Department's Agencies will be replying direct to the hon. Member with information on their staff.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many (a) men and (b) women employed by (1) his Department and (2) his Department's agencies have contracts of employment which permit them to retire after their 60 birthday. [53050]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 30 July 1998]: In the core Department, the normal retirement age for staff is 60 years. However, staff in non-mobile grades (i.e. administrative assistant, administrative officer level), secretarial and office support grades, industrial grades and farm workers are permitted to remain in service until the age of 65. Staff in mobile grades (i.e. executive officer level and above) with less than 20 years pensionable service may also remain in service beyond the age of 60. Service beyond the age of 60 has to be authorised and is subject to efficiency, fitness and the Ministry's needs.

In the core Department, there are currently 1,485 men and 2,216 women in non-mobile grades where retirement after 60 years of age is permissible.

Chief Executives of the Department's Agencies will be replying direct to the hon. Member with information on their staff.

Letter from Sarah Nason to Mr. Christopher Chope, dated 31 July 1998:

Mr. Nick Brown has asked me to reply, in respect of the Farming and Rural Conservation Agency (FRCA), to your question about how many men and women, aged over 60 years, were employed on 1 January.

In FRCA there were 3 men and 1 woman employed on 1 January.

Letter from Sarah Nason. to Mr. Christopher Chope, dated 31 July 1998:

Mr. Nick Brown has asked me to reply, in respect of the Farming and Rural Conservation Agency (FRCA), to your question about how many men and women employed have contracts of employment which permit them to retire after their 60th birthday.

In FRCA, which has the same retirement arrangements as core MAFF, there are currently 40 men and 99 women in grades where retirement after 60 years of age is permissible.

Letter from G. K. Bruce to Mr. Christopher Chope, dated 31 July 1998:

The Parliamentary Secretary of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, has asked me to reply to your question concerning the number of men and women employed by the Pesticides Safety Directorate (PSD) who have contracts of employment which permit them to retire after their 60th birthday.

The rules which apply in PSD are the same as those applied in the parent Department. The normal retirement age for staff is 60 years. However, staff in non-mobile grades, ie Administrative Assistants, Administrative Officers and their scientific equivalents and secretarial grades are permitted to remain in service until the age of 65. Staff in more senior grades, ie Executive Officers and above and their scientific equivalents, with less than 20 years pensionable service may also remain in service beyond the age of 60. Service beyond the age of 60 has to be authorised and is subject to efficiency, fitness and the needs of the Agency.

In the Pesticides Safety Directorate, there are currently 16 men and 34 women in grades where retirement after 60 years of age is permissible.

Letter from G. K. Bruce to Mr. Christopher Chope, dated 31 July 1998:

The Parliamentary Secretary of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply to your question concerning the number of men and women employed by the Pesticides Safety Directorate aged 60 years and over on 1 January.

In the Pesticides Safety Directorate, there were no men or women aged over 60 years employed on 1 January.

Letter from J. M. Rutter to Mr. Christopher Chope, dated 31 July 1998:

The Minister has asked me to reply to your question about the number of a) men and b) women in the Veterinary Medicines Directorate (VMD) with contracts of employment which allow them to retire after their 60th birthday, as this is an operational matter for which I have responsibility.

The normal retirement age for staff in the VMD is 60 years. However, staff in administrative, secretarial and office support grades are permitted to remain in service until the age of 65. Staff in more senior grades with less than 20 years pensionable service may also remain in service beyond the age of 60. Service beyond the age of 60 for all staff has to be authorised and is subject to efficiency, fitness and the VMD's needs.

In VMD there are currently 7 men and 32 women in grades where retirement after 60 years of age is permissible.

Letter from J. M. Rutter to Mr. Christopher Chope, dated 31 July 1998:

The Minister has asked me to reply to your question about the number of a) men and b) women aged over 60 employed in the Veterinary Medicines Directorate on 1 January, as this is an operational matter for which I am responsible.

On 1 January 1998 there were 3 men and no women aged over 60 employed in the Veterinary Medicines Directorate.

Letter from P. I. Stanley to Mr. Christopher Chope, dated 31 July 1998:

The Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply, in respect of the Central Science Laboratory (CSL), to your questions concerning the number of staff aged over 60 years and those who have contracts that permit them to retire after their 60th birthday.

On 1 January 1998, CSL employed 5 staff who were over the age of 60. All of these were men.

The normal retirement age for the majority of staff employed by CSL is 60. However, there are 71 staff working in administrative, secretarial and support posts who, by virtue of their grade, are permitted to continue in post beyond the age of 60. 14 of these are men and 57 are women.

In addition, staff in more senior grades with less than 20 years pensionable service may also remain in post beyond the age of 60, subject to work, efficiency and fitness requirements.

The normal retirement age for staff employed by CEFAS is 60 years. However, staff in administrative, secretarial, office support and industrial grades and Assistant Scientific Officers are permitted to remain in service until the age of 65. Staff in more senior grades with less than 20 years service may also remain in service beyond the age of 60. Service beyond the age of 60 is subject to efficiency, fitness and the Ministry's needs.

At CEFAS, there are currently 101 men and 101 women in grades where retirement after 60 years of age is permissible.

Letter from T. W. A. Little to Mr. Christopher Chope, dated 31 July 1998:

Letter from T. W. A. Little to Mr. Christopher Chope, dated 31 July 1998:

The Minister has asked me to reply to your question on how many men/women employed by his Department's Agencies have contracts of employment which permit them to retire after their 60th birthday.

In the Veterinary Laboratories Agency (VLA) the normal retirement age for staff is 60 years. However, staff in VLA Pay Bands F, F(1) and G, including administrative, secretarial and scientific support staff and animal technicians are permitted to remain in service until the age of 65. Staff in higher Pay Bands with less than 20 years pensionable service may also remain in service beyond the age of 60. Service beyond the age of 60 has to be authorised and is subject to efficiency, fitness and Agency's needs. In the VLA there are currently 210 men and 453 women in Pay Bands F, F(1) and G where retirement after 60 years of age is permissible.

Letter from Johnston McNeil to Mr. Christopher Chope, dated 31 July 1998:

As Chief Executive of the Meat Hygiene Service, your question to the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food regarding the number of men and women employed who have contracts of employment which permit them to retire after their 60th birthday has been passed to me to respond on behalf of this Executive Agency.

The Meat Hygiene Service was established on 1 April 1995 as an Executive Agency of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (MAFF). It took over from local authorities the responsibility for enforcing meat hygiene, inspection and animal welfare at slaughter legislation in licensed fresh meat premises in Great Britain. The majority of MHS staff transferred from local authorities with their existing contractual benefits under the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Act 1981. As a consequence the majority of MHS employees are members of the Local Government Pension Scheme which has a retirement age of 65.

In the MHS, 1308 men and 164 women have contracts of employment with a retirement age of 65.

Letter from Johnston McNeil to Mr. Christopher Chope, dated 31 July 1998:

As Chief Executive of the Meat Hygiene Service (MHS), your question to the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (MAFF) regarding the number of men and women employed who are aged over 60 has been passed to me to reply on behalf of this Executive Agency.

The MHS employs 84 men and 1 woman who are aged over 60.

Animal Welfare Survey

Mr. Drew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he plans to publish the Animal Welfare Survey report of the Meat Hygiene Service. [55192]

Mr. Morley: I am pleased to announce that the Animal Welfare Survey Report was published by the Meat Hygiene Service today. Copies are available in the Library of the House.

Veterinary Laboratories Agency

Mr. Drew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he will publish the 1997–98 Annual report and Accounts for the Veterinary Laboratories Agency. [55193]

Mr. Rooker: I am pleased to announce that the 1997–98 Annual Report and Accounts for the Veterinary Laboratories Agency were laid before Parliament on 30 July. Copies are available in the Library of the House.

I should like to congratulate all staff at VLA on their achievements during the year.

Fisheries

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many staff and what financial resources were devoted to fisheries protection and monitoring in Scotland and Northern Ireland in each of the past five years; and if he will estimate the financial resources in each year as a proportion of the value of fish landed. [54459]

Mr. Morley: Responsibility for providing detailed information on the staff and financial resources devoted to fisheries enforcement and protection in Scotland and Northern Ireland rests respectively with my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Northern Ireland.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the proposal by the National Federation of Fishermen's Organisations and the Scottish Fishermen's Federation for coastal zone management; and what definition of coastal fisheries limits he has used in assessing the proposal. [54579]

Mr. Morley: I have welcomed the joint position paper of the National Federation of Fishermen's Organisations and Scottish Fishermen's Federation as a good basis for discussion. Their paper contains a number of ideas including the concept of coastal state management whereby coastal states would be responsible for determining conservation rules within their 200 mile fisheries limits, subject to criteria established in zonal management committees whose proposals would be ratified by the Council of Ministers.

Rendering Industry

Mr. Evans: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the saving from the phasing out of the support to the rendering industry introduced in March 1996. [54079]

Mr. Rooker: Since the previous Government made no financial provision for the support of the rendering industry after March 1998, the present Government made no savings by discontinuing that support when it did.

Set-aside Land (Staffordshire)

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list (a) the hectarage of set-aside land in Staffordshire, (b) the location of the land and (c) the set-aside payments made in respect of the land. [53074]

Mr. Rooker: For the 1997 Arable Area Payments Scheme, the latest year for which statistics are available, the information requested is:

(a) the area of land set-aside in Staffordshire was 3,251 hectares;

(b) the land would mostly have been situated in Staffordshire although if a holding is located on the border then some may have been allocated to a neighbouring county;

(c) the amount paid in respect of land set-aside where the main holding is situated in Staffordshire was £1,023,728. The payment rate per hectare were £325.83 for normal set-aside and £228.65 for additional voluntary set-aside.

Green Transport

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 31 March 1998, Official Report, column 503, on departmental transport arrangements, what further changes he has made. [53993]

Mr. Morley: The Department is working towards the target announced in the White Paper "A New Deal for Transport", that all headquarters buildings and main buildings occupied by Executive Agencies should have green transport plans by March 1999 and all other key buildings by March 2000.

A new, small unit is being set up specifically to deal with the co-ordination of the Department's greening operations, which will include the preparation of a Green Transport Plan. Work has already started on the plan for the Department's London offices.

Bovine TB

Mrs. Dean: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress has been made in considering the issue of Bovine TB. [55185]

Mr. Nick Brown: I am concerned about the rising incidence of tuberculosis in cattle. We cannot stand by while the disease spreads. I intend to consult my colleagues and hope that we will soon be able to make an announcement with details of our plans.

We need to have a co-ordinated strategy. It must put public health first.

The Krebs report published last December recommended that in the long term we should look for a cattle vaccine. This is now built into my department's research requirements and we want to draw on the best expertise in the country. Some of the necessary preliminary work has already been undertaken.

The traditional way of dealing with tuberculosis in cattle has been through testing, removal of reactors and movement controls. We will maintain this policy, which is in any event required under EU legislation. I have asked officials to tell me whether these controls need to be strengthened.

The Krebs report found that there was indirect but compelling evidence that badgers were a significant source of infection in cattle. It made recommendations that we should have a culling trial. We have now also received detailed recommendations on the design of such a trial from Professor Bourne's Expert Group. I have asked my Department to prepare their report for publication, while we consider the best way forward. Any measures taken will take full account of the Government's established commitment to animal welfare.

Genetically Modified Organisms

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proposals he has for the arrangements for the forthcoming consultation exercise on genetically modified organisms; and when it will take place. [53385]

Mr. Battle: I have been asked to reply.

A consultation exercise will explore public views on the wider, including ethical, issues raised by recent developments in the biosciences. The exercise will be managed by the Office of Science and Technology, drawing on expertise from other Government Departments and interested parties. A small advisory group of practitioners in the fields of consultation and science communication has been established to advise on appropriate techniques and the development of a detailed workplan. I expect that the exercise will start in the autumn.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Pensioners

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the estimated number of (a) single pensioners and (b) pensioner couples receiving income support in each year for which estimates are available from 1999–2000 assuming that income support is uprated in line with (i) prices and (ii) earnings, respectively. [50862]

Mr. Denham: The increases to Income Support for pensioners from April 1999, announced as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review (CSR), are more generous than if current rates were to be uprated in line with either estimated prices or earnings.

The table therefore estimates for 2000–01 and 2001–02 the numbers of pensioner benefit units on Income Support (IS) if the higher rates announced for 1999–2000 in the CSR were uprated under (i) prices and (ii) average earnings uprating.

IS pensioner benefit units	2000–01	2001–02
(i) Uprating by prices
(a) singles	1,385,000	1,475,000
(b) couples	305,000	330,000
(ii) Uprating by average earnings
(a) singles	1,435,000	1,595,000
(b) couples	325,000	385,000

Notes:

1. All estimates exclude cases in residential care and nursing homes as insufficient information is available on these cases to be able to model the additional cases who may float-on under (ii)
2. Estimates have been based upon latest Income Support forecasts, following the changes announced as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review, and information from the 1995–96 Family Resources Survey
3. Average earnings assumptions are consistent with the latest data on GB earnings growth
4. Under Income Support rules, only one partner in a couple need be aged over 60 years to be classed as a couple pensioner benefit unit
5. Estimates have been rounded to the nearest 5,000 cases

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 27 July 1998, Official Report, column 70, for what reason the poverty rate for single female pensioners aged 80 years or above is significantly lower than that for pensioners aged 75 to 79 years when income is measured after housing costs. [54221]

Mr. Denham: On the after-housing costs measure, 38 per cent. of single female pensioners aged 75 to 79, and 28 per cent. of single female pensioners aged 80 or over, have incomes below half the national average

Roughly one third of the difference in the proportion of people with below half average income between the two age groups can be explained by differences in receipt of Attendance Allowance. Attendance Allowance is intended to help to meet the additional costs of disability, the risk of which increases with age. The higher income of recipients does not necessarily imply that they have higher relative living standards than comparable non-recipients as they may have additional disability related costs. If Attendance Allowance is excluded from the definition of income, 38 per cent. of single female pensioners aged 75 to 79 and 31 per cent. of single female pensioners aged 80 or over have incomes below half the national average after housing costs. Other factors may also be important but it has not been possible to isolate them.

A substantial proportion of pensioners have incomes which are close to half average income. Therefore, small variations in income between different groups of low income pensioners can lead to large differences in the proportion designated as having low incomes. For example, if 60 per cent. of average income is used rather than half average income, 56 per cent. of single female pensioners aged 75 to 79, and 52 per cent. of single female pensioners aged 80 or over, have incomes below the threshold on the after housing costs measure.

All figures come from the Department's Households Below Average Income (HBAI) dataset based on the Family Resources Survey (FRS) for the financial year 1995–6.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will list the categories of pensioners who will not have a guaranteed income after the introduction of his proposed pensioner income guarantee; and if he will identify the number of pensioners in each category; [54098]

(2) how many pensioners have more than £8,000 in savings and also a lower income than the income support rates applicable from April (a) 1999 and (b) 1998; [54173]

(3) how many pensioners have savings of between £3,000 and £8,000 and a lower income, excluding income from savings, than the income support rates applicable from April (a) 1999 and (b) 1998. [54174]

Mr. Denham: I will write to the hon. Member.

Income Support

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to increase the capital limits for income support. [54176]

Mr. Denham: We have no current plans to do so.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate how many pensioners will become entitled to (a) council tax benefit and (b) housing benefit as a result of the increases in the income support rates applicable from April 1999. [54177]

Mr. Denham: The information is in the table:

Thousand

Year	Housing Benefit	Council Tax Benefit
1999–00	5	10
2000–01	5	10
2001–02	5	10

Notes:

1. All estimates exclude cases in residential care and nursing homes as insufficient information is available on these cases to be able to accurately model the additional cases who may float-on under the increases

2. Estimates have been based upon latest benefit forecasts, following the changes announced as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review, and information form the 1995–96 Family Resources Survey

3. Cases may gain in more than one benefit, so an overall total cannot be summed across benefits

4. Estimates have been rounded to the nearest 5,000 cases

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate how many pensioners will become entitled to income support as a result of the increases in the income support rates applicable from April 1999. [54175]

Mr. Denham: It is estimated that 65,000 pensioners will become entitled to Income Support in each of the three years covered by the Comprehensive Spending Review as a result of the increases in the rates from April 1999.

Notes:

1. The estimates exclude cases in residential care and nursing homes as insufficient information is available on these cases to be able to accurately model the additional cases who may "float on" as a result of the increases.

2. Estimates have been based on latest Income Support forecasts, following the changes announced as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review, and information from the 1995–96 Family Resources Survey.

3. Estimates have been rounded to the nearest 5,000 cases.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the amount of unclaimed income support by pensioners in the latest year for which figures are available; what would be the amount unclaimed if the expenditure-based take-up rate was applied to the current financial year; and what is his estimate of the additional cost of his proposed income guarantee for pensioners in each of the next three financial years. [54099]

Mr. Denham: The amount of unclaimed Income Support by pensioners in 1995–96 (the latest year for which figures are available) was estimated at between £670 million and £890 million. If the current expenditure-based take up rate (of between 72 per cent. and 78 per cent.) was applied to forecast expenditure for the current financial year, the estimated amount unclaimed would be between £720 million and £990 million. The additional estimated cost of the benefit measures announced on 17 July is in the table:

CSR total expenditure	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02
Income Support expenditure	325	475	610
Total for Income-Related Benefits	495	670	840

Notes:

1. All estimates exclude cases in residential care and nursing homes as insufficient information is available on these cases to be able to accurately model the additional cases who may float-on under the increases
2. Estimates have been based upon latest benefit forecasts, following the changes announced as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review, and information from the 1995–6 Family Resources Survey and the publication Income-related benefits—Estimates of take-up in 1995–96
3. Estimates have been rounded to the nearest £5 million

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will set targets for the rate of take-up of income support by pensioners to reach (a) 70 per cent., (b) 80 per cent., (c) 90 per cent. and (d) 100 per cent. [54172]

Mr. Denham: The Government are committed to tackling the problem of pensioners living below Income Support levels. This is why we will begin a national programme from next April to identify these pensioners and encourage them to claim.

Attendance Allowance

Dr. George Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish by local social services authority the number of recipients of attendance allowance aged (i) 65 years and over and (ii) 75 years and over for the most recent available date, (a) in total and (b) as a proportion of the resident population aged respectively 65 and 75 years and over. [54204]

Mr. Denham: The figures are set out in the table entitled "Recipients of Attendance Allowance at 31 May 1998, by local authority and population" a copy of which has been placed in the library.

Elderly People (Extra Payments)

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to increase the extra payment to those aged 80 years or over. [54059]

Mr. Denham: We believe that all pensioners should share fairly in rising national prosperity and are committed to examine the means of delivering more help to the poorest pensioners—many of whom are over 80. The Pensions Review is considering all aspects of basic State pension and its value, including the 25p age addition.

We have already taken action to help the poorest of those pensioners who are aged 80 or over. From April 1999, these older pensioners who are on Income Support and receive the Higher Pensioner Premium will be entitled to £82.25 a week (up from £77.55) if they are single and £125.30 (up from £117.90) for a couple.

Departmental Publications

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many of his Department's publications have been made available in (a) Braille, (b) audio tape and (c) large print in 1997–98; and what percentage of the total number of publications this represents. [54266]

Mr. Denham: I refer the hon. Member to the Written Answer given to him on 2 July 1997, Official Report, column 209. Publications available in (a) Braille, (b) audio tape and (c) large print in 1997–98 and the percentage of the total number of publications this represents is given in the table.

	Total number of publications	Percentage of total publications

Notes:
1. The Department does not collate information relating to the accuracy of Housing Benefit or Council Tax Benefit
2. Accuracy levels of Income Support, Jobseeker's Allowance, Incapacity benefit, Severe Disablement Allowance, Maternity Allowance, Retirement Pensions and Widows Benefits are based on a statistically valid sample selected at random and changes of circumstance in a relevant period. This methodology has been approved by the National Audit Office. The samples are sufficiently large for the results at a national level to be within a margin of error of less than 0.25 per cent.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to the Green Paper page 84, Cm 3805, New Ambitions for Our Country: A New Contract for Welfare, what is the proportion of parents meeting their financial obligations to their children after separation at present; and what it was in April 1997 and March 1998. Child Support Agency Quarterly Summary of Statistics

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to the Green Paper Cm 3805, New Ambitions for our Country: A New Contract for Welfare, (p84) what is the amount of money lost in fraudulent payments at present, and what it was in April 1997 and March 1998. [54589]

Mr. Denham: The information is not available. Since fraud involves deception, it is not possible to state with great precision the amount lost through benefit fraud or to provide meaningful estimates for losses at particular points in time.

In the Green Paper "Beating Fraud is Everyone's Business: Securing the Future", we have said that, on a conservative estimate, fraud costs some £2 billion a year but that, if all suspected fraud is included in the estimate, losses could be up to around £7 billion. This is based on the results of a number of studies in which samples of cases were investigated. A key element of our new anti-fraud strategy is the development of better measures of the amount of losses from fraud, and the savings which flow from particular preventive and detective activities. This will, over time, allow us to refine our estimates of losses and savings as well as to direct anti-fraud resources to where they are most effective.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to the Green Paper, Cm 3805, New Ambitions for our Country: A New Contract for Welfare, page 83, what are (a) the level of literacy and numeracy skills among 11 year olds, and (b) the number of school leavers with no recognised qualifications at present; and what each was in April 1997 and March 1998. [54604]

Ms Estelle Morris: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

National Minimum Wage

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the savings on the welfare budget from the introduction of the minimum wage. [54058]

Mr. Denham: I refer the hon. Member to the reply the then Under-Secretary, my hon. Friend the Member for Manchester, Withington (Mr. Bradley), gave the right hon. Member for Wokingham (Mr. Redwood) on 25 June 1998, Official Report, column 620.

Child Support

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how (a) current over and under-payments and (b) outstanding arrears are planned to be dealt with under the proposals outlined in the Green Paper on the Child Support Agency. [54117]

Mr. Denham: Non-resident parents have a responsibility to support their children, including paying for their upkeep.

We are not proposing any reassessment of arrears due under the current formula on the introduction of a new child support scheme, as outlined in the Green Paper "Children First: a new approach to child support" (Cm 3992). Non-resident parents will be expected to pay the amounts calculated under the present arrangements and appropriate collection and enforcement action will be taken if there are outstanding underpayments or arrears.

Where child support has been overpaid, we propose to continue the existing arrangements. Non-resident parents will receive full reimbursement for any child support paid over and above their actual liability either through a reduction in the amount of their child support payments or as a lump sum repayment.

Disability Living Allowance

Dr. George Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish by local social services authority, the total numbers of recipients of disability living allowance for the most recent available date (a) in total and (b) as a proportion of the population of the authority and, (c) the numbers of pensionable age who retain their eligibility for the care component beyond pensionable age. [54196]

Mr. Denham: The figures are set out in the table entitled "Recipients of Disability Living Allowance at 31 May 1998, by local authority and population" a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claimants of disability living allowance in Scotland have had their benefit reduced or stopped under the Benefit Integrity Project; and how much money was saved as a result. [53729]

Mr. Denham: The administration of Disability Living Allowance and the Benefits Integrity Project is a matter for Peter Mathison, the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. David Rendel, dated 30 July 1998

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many claimants of Disability Living Allowance (DLA) in Scotland have had their benefit reduced or stopped as a result of a decision taken as part of the Benefits Integrity Project (BIP) and how much money was saved as a result.

Information on the BIP is not available in the format requested. To provide geographical information routinely would incur high costs and disrupt the processing of ongoing casework.

As at 31 May 1998, a total of 217,839 cases, including 34,164 renewal cases, have been selected routinely would incur high costs and disrupt the processing of ongoing casework.

At the same date a total of 94,634 cases have been examined. Of the total cases dealt with 2,191 have resulted in an increase in benefit. 73,035 have remained unchanged, 12,101 have resulted in a reduction in benefit and 7,307 have resulted in benefit being stopped.

The total includes 20,054 renewal cases, of which 623 have resulted in an increase in benefit, 10,121 have remained unchanged, 5,539 have resulted in a reduction in benefit and 3,771 have resulted in benefit being stopped.

The BIP is looking again at some awards of Disability Living Allowance (DLA) to collect up to date information about the care and mobility needs of some disabled people and to make sure that the correct amount of benefit is being paid. It is expected that the Project will realise benefit savings of £8 million in the first year, £36 million in the second year and £40 million in the third.

A monthly statistical report can be found in the House of Commons Library.

I hope that this is helpful.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of those decisions on the payment of disability living allowance which have been reviewed by the Benefit Integrity Project have been incurred on the basis of calculations (a) including exempt categories, (b) excluding renewals and (c) including exempt categories and excluding renewals. [54906]

Mr. Denham: The administration of Disability Living Allowance is a matter for Peter Mathison, the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mrs. Theresa May, dated 31 July 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what proportion of those decisions on the payment of Disability Living Allowance (DLA) which have been reviewed by the Benefits Integrity Project (BIP) have been incurred on the following basis of calculations (a) including exempt categories, (b) excluding renewals and (c) including exempt categories and excluding renewals.

The information is not available in the format requested.

Customers who are in the categories to be looked at by the BIP are those in receipt of Mobility component at the higher rate with either the middle or highest rate of the Care component.

The customers included in the BIP are selected by means of computer scans. The names of customers who are in the exemption categories for action by the BIP will not appear on the scans and therefore cannot be identified.

Some cases input onto the system during the conversion from Mobility Allowance to the Mobility component of DLA in 1992 may appear on the scans but are identified under a separate code. This does not show which disability the customer is suffering from and as a result the customer's papers are checked individually by the BIP Operational Teams. Any customers found to be exempt from the BIP are then removed from the work. New disability codes are then entered onto the system and the remaining cases appropriate to be included are actioned by the BIP Teams.

The total payload of customers in receipt of Disability Living Allowance is 2,018,619 at 31 May 1998. Of these, 561,100 were in receipt of DLA in the categories for inclusion in the BIP.

As at the 31 May 1998, a total of 217,839 cases, including 34,164 renewal cases were selected for action under the BIP nationally. This does not include 13,725 cases which were found to be exempt and therefore excluded from selection.

A monthly statistical report can be found in the House of Commons Library.

I hope you find this helpful.

Green Transport

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 27 March 1998, Official Report, column 317, on departmental transport arrangements, what further changes he has made. [54010]

Mr. Denham: This Department is working towards the target announced in the White Paper, 'A New Deal for Transport', that all headquarters buildings and main buildings occupied by Executive Agencies and Government Offices for the Regions should have green transport plans by March 1999 and all other key buildings by March 2000.

Green Transport Plans and Commuting Action Plans are currently being drafted for 20 DSS sites, including headquarter buildings and the major sites in the northwest of the country. These will be in place by 1 April 1999.

For official journeys revised guidance on the usage of motor vehicles will be published in the new version of the Departments 'Green Guide'.

Official vehicles that have reached the end of their life with the department will be replaced, where necessary, with dual fuelled vehicles, particularly in environmental 'hot spots' such as inner cities.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total cost to the Social Security budget of claims by asylum seekers in the years (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98. [53585]

Mr. Denham: [holding answer 30 July 1998]: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the table.

Asylum seekers—estimated income support, housing benefit and council tax benefit annual expenditure

Year	Total estimated annual expenditure
1995–96	300
1996–97	310
1997–98	340

Notes:
1. Estimated annual expenditure figures are rounded to the nearest five million pounds
2. Estimates for February 1997 onwards will include a number of non-asylum seekers which receive Urgent Case Payments for other reasons
3. Annual expenditure figures for Income Support have been based on an average of four quarters for the relevant financial year, using number of cases and average weekly amounts. Income Support figures are not available for the years 1997–98, data are therefore provided for May 1997 for the year 1997–98
4. Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit estimates have been calculated using the Housing Benefit Management 1 per cent. sample and Departmental Reports, and exclude asylum seekers receiving Housing Benefit who are not receiving Income Support
5. Information on the other non-contributory benefits is not available

Women's Issues

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security following the changed responsibilities of Ministers in his Department in relation to women's issues, what will happen to the Women's Unit; and to which Department it will be attached. [54194]

Mr. Denham: As announced on 28 July, the Women's Unit will continue its work and will be part of the Cabinet Office.

Industrial Injuries Benefits

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on his plans to reform (a) industrial injuries benefits and (b) widow's benefits. [54900]

Mr. Denham: Modernising the Social Security system is a key priority for the Government. We are, therefore, reviewing major components of the Social Security system, in line with the principles set out in the Welfare Reform Green Paper. We will make announcements in due course.

Hepple Case

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the current position with regard to the Hepple case. [54034]

Mr. Denham: The Hepple case is currently being litigated before the Social Security Commissioner and concerns whether the Reduced Earnings Allowance provisions comply with European Community law on grounds of gender. The Commissioner has referred the case to the European Court of Justice for a ruling. We maintain that the Reduced Earnings Allowance provisions are in accordance with our obligations under Community law.

Child Support Agency (Telephone Helplines)

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if the CSA telephone helplines are accessible by hearing-impaired and speech-impaired people through the BT Typetalk relay service. [54061]

Mr. Denham: We expect the Child Support Agency to provide an efficient and effective service to all its clients throughout the child support assessment process.

The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Faith Boardman to Mr. Tom Levitt, dated 31 July 1998:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the Child Support Agency telephone helplines.

BT Typetalk is a service which allows members of the public using text phones to make contact with organisations who do not have similar equipment.

The Agency's telephone helplines are equipped with text phones, therefore we do not require the BT service. If a customer contacts a complete action service team direct, arrangements are made to call them back using aline with text phone.

The equipment we have enables the hearing-impaired and speech-impaired to make access direct to the Agency and avoid the necessity of having to disclose personal information to a third party.

Additionally customers are able to take advantage of the Agency's use of local call rate numbers.

I hope this is helpful.

Child Support Agency

Miss Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what action the Government are taking to ensure that self-employed persons are fairly assessed under the CSA and that their ex-partners receive full payments owing to them; and if he will make a statement. [54060]

Mr. Denham: The Government are consulting on their proposals for reforming the Child Support scheme set out in the Green Paper "Children First: a new approach to child support" (Cm 3992). We are considering assessing the income of self-employed parents on the basis of the most recent year's taxable profit in line with the approach used by the Inland Revenue. We will also be looking into the possibility of using information supplied for tax purposes so as to reduce the delay in collecting maintenance.

The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Faith Boardman to Miss Geraldine Smith, dated 31 July 1998:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about how the Child Support Agency deals with the self employed.

The Agency acknowledges that cases where the non-resident parent is self employed can be more difficult to progress, especially where the non-resident parent does not wish to comply. However, once all the required evidence has been collected, the income of a self employed person is assessed in line with the regulations to ensure that the maintenance assessment accurately reflects that income.

The key to securing early compliance is by personal contact with our customers. By contacting customers by phone at the initial stages of their assessment we aim to build a better relationship with them, address their concerns promptly and provide an improved level of service.

We have recently completed a pilot study in the South Western Business Unit, looking at how best to process self employed cases. Trials using dedicated staff dealing exclusively with the self employed have shown a marked reduction in processing time and an increase in the collection of maintenance. We intend to have specific sections, supported by accountants where necessary, in each Business Unit to deal exclusively with self employed customers.

Additionally, to assist us to trace the whereabouts of self employed non-resident parents, we are exploring the possibility of sharing information with other Agencies and Government Departments. We have also revised staff training and raised staff awareness of the Agency's self employed powers, working practices and related issues.

If all voluntary methods to secure maintenance from a self employed non-resident parent fail, a liability order is applied for. It is hoped that the threat of such action will be enough to ensure compliance. The majority do agree to make an arrangement and only in a very small minority of cases is legal action actually taken.

We will use any and all enforcement methods legally available but we experience the same difficulties as other litigants in enforcing a civil debt. During 1997/98 we have been successful in registering debt by County Court Judgment in 522 cases. Where all other action has failed, the Agency has pursued cases for prosecution; between October 1997 and March 1998 a total of 15 suspended custodial sentences were imposed. A self employed non-resident parent was recently committed to prison, as a result of non payment of maintenance.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Woolas: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total wastage rate of staff in the Child Support Agency for the period 1 January to 30 June; and if he intends to take measures to reduce this rate. [54035]

Mr. Denham: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Faith Boardman to Mr. Phil Woolas, dated 31 July 1998

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the total wastage rate of staff in the Child Support Agency.

When calculating a wastage rate we take into account all leavers from the Agency, including retirements (including voluntary early retirments), and staff transferring to other parts of DSS or to other Government Departments as well as those leaving the Civil Service. The calculation also includes a proportion of short term appointed staff whose contracts have expired, some of whom have rejoined as permanent staff.

The total wastage rate of staff in the Agency from 1 January 1998 to 30 June 1998 was 15.5 per cent. This includes permanent, fixed term appointed and casual staff.

We are examining the trends and recurring reasons for resignations, we are also looking at geographical influences and how job rotation may be introduced to develop and retain staff. We are currently undertaking a review of our recruitment policy which will look at all areas from human resources planning to retention strategies.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Healey: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many compensation payments from the Child Support Agency have been awarded in each of the last four years of (a) under £250, (b) £251 to £500, (c) £501 to £1,000, (d) £1,001 to £2,000, (e) £2,001 to £3,000 and (f) £3,001 to £5,000; [51140]

(2) what was the number of compensation payments from the Child Support Agency for each of the last four years; and what were the total amounts paid. [51139]

Mr. Denham: All children have a right to the emotional and financial support of both their parents wherever they live. We have set out proposals for radical reform in our Green Paper "Children First: a new approach to child support" (Cm 3992).

The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Mrs. Faith Boardman to Mr. John Healey, dated 30 July 1998:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the Child Support Agency compensation payments.

Compensation payments are normally referred to as special payments. A special payment is considered where a clear and unambiguous error by the Agency has resulted in distress or in actual financial loss to the customer which is not recoverable through other means.

A detailed breakdown of payments made for each of the last four years is shown in the attached table.

The numbers of payments have risen as a result of our actions over the past year to increase the number of cleared backlog maintenance applications (which had accumulated in the Agency during its first 2–3 years). Where the Agency has taken-on cases, the length of time taken to complete a maintenance assessment is measured, and cases which exceed 52 weeks are considered to be a backlog; this backlog currently stands at approximately 110,000 down from 225,000 at 31 March 1997. In 1997/98 the Agency cleared 595,000 maintenance applications compared with 357,000 in 1996/97.

Additionally, we have increased our customers' awareness of special payments by advising them, where appropriate, how to apply. This will also have an impact on the number of special payments made.

I am conscious that there are still far too many complaints about the standards of basic customer contact and the service we provide, and we recognise that doing things right first time is the key to preventing complaints. We are aware that as we further tackle our backlog of cases from the Agency's first 2–3 years, there is potential for the volume of complaints to rise in the short term.

During 1997/98 we developed a series of measures to improve our customer service over the next four years. Our plans are to improve performance standards; improve significantly, computer generated letters; deal with more of our business by telephone forms review; focus on courtesy and helpfulness; cut down delays and improve the way we handle complaints.

We expect customers to see some real improvements by the end of 1998/99.

I hope this is helpful.

Widow's Pensions

Sir Brian Mawhinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what plans he has to pay interest to widows who have not received their full pension entitlement on time as a result of computer problems; [53450]

(2) for how long the computer which regulates the payment of widow's pensions has been operating at less than 100 per cent. efficiency; and if he will estimate for how long this is likely to continue; [53447]

(3) how many widows have not received their full pension entitlement (a) at all and (b) on time as a result of computer problems; and if he will estimate in each case how many more are likely to be resolved. [53449]

Mr. Denham: The administration of Widow's Benefit is a matter for Peter Mathison, the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the right hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Sir Brian Mawhinney, dated 30 July 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions concerning computer problems and the payment of Widow's Pensions (WP).

As a result of the modernisation of the Contributions Agency (CA)'s National Insurance Recording System (NIRS) it was necessary to switch off the existing system to enable the transfer of information to the new one to take place. Payable rates of Widows Benefits (WB) are calculated by the NIRS.

The special payments scheme includes provision for compensation where the payment of benefit is exceptionally delayed due to official error. Compensation is considered where the amount owed to the widow exceeds £100; payment of WB is delayed by more than 4 months and the potential compensation is £10 or more (compensation is calculated using the Average Shares rate supplied by the Building Societies Commission). Compensation is automatically considered where these criteria are satisfied therefore the widow does not need to apply for it.

The computer migration began on 19 June 1998 and it is planned that NIRS will resume providing WB calculations from 1 September 1998. All claims will be looked at retrospectively once calculations are available. The correct rate of WB will be put into payment and any arrears which are due will be paid.

The exact number of widows who have not received their full entitlement to WB as a result of not being able to obtain the payable rates from the NIRS computer is not known. Approximately 48,000 women a year qualify for WB and of these it is estimated about 38,000 (730 a week) qualify for WP or Widowed Mother's Allowance (WMA) in addition to the widows payment.

Between 6 April 1998 and 19 June 1998, NIRS was not able to supply the full payable rates in respect of all the estimated 300 new claims a week entitled to WP or WMA. Payment on these claims is being made on the 'safe' information provided by NIRS. Where appropriate clerical calculations of the widow's entitlement can be made and to date 208 calculations have been performed.

Since 20 June 1998 NIRS has not provided any payable rates. For women widowed after this date arrangements are in force to make emergency payments at a basic rate plus increases for children. There will be very few, if indeed any, women who are entitled to WB but who do not receive emergency payments. This includes the £1,000 lump sum widows payment.

The CA and the Benefits Agency are committed to minimising the impact on customers.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Child Benefit Payments

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what delays were involved in (a) administering and (b) issuing child benefit payment books; how many child benefit payments due were not received as a result of the delays; and if these payments have now been made. [53708]

Mr. Denham: The administration of Child Benefit is a matter for Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. David Rendel, dated 30 July 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what delays were involved in (a) administering and (b) issuing Child Benefit (ChB) payment books; how many ChB payments due were not received as a result of the delays; and if these payments have now been made.

The information is not available in the format requested. The ChB Centre (CBC) in Washington has, in general encountered no delays in the administering and the issuing of ChB order books.

I am aware that there were two minor problems in the administration of ChB recently; the first followed changes to the criteria for ChB (Lone Parent) rate and the second followed the transfer of computer records to a different system. The incidents had an impact on only a very small number of customers as a result of corrective action taken by the CBC.

I hope this information is useful.

Winter Fuel Payments

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many pensioner households in Scotland (a) were entitled to receive the winter fuel payment, (b) received their winter fuel payment by (i) January,

(ii) February and (iii) March 1998, (c) received incorrect winter fuel payments and (d) received duplicate winter fuel payments. [53709]

Mr. Denham: Winter fuel payments are one of a number of initiatives the Government has taken to help vulnerable people, especially the elderly, keep warm this winter. Originally a total of £400 million was committed for two years (97–98 and 98–99), to help pensioners with fuel bills to pay.

As announced during the statement to the House on 17 July 1998, Official Report, columns 703–15, a further £0.5 billion has been allocated to extend the scheme beyond next winter. This will provide each eligible pensioner household with an annual £20 winter fuel payment.

The administration of Winter Fuel Payments is a matter for Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. David Rendel dated 30 July 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many pensioner households in Scotland (a) were entitled to receive the winter fuel payment, (b) received their winter fuel payment by (i) January, (ii) February and (iii) March 1998, (c) received incorrect winter fuel payments and (d) received duplicate winter fuel payments.

The information is not available in the format requested and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The making of Winter Fuel Payments to almost ten million eligible pensioners, in over seven million households, before the end of March 1998 was a challenging task for the Benefits Agency. This was achieved whilst maintaining normal business.

We issued 1,441,614 £50 payments to the poorest pensioners, those receiving Income Support (IS) or income-based Jobseeker's Allowance (JSA), by 31 January. Other eligible pensioners were entitled to a payment of £20 or £10. Where they lived alone, were the only eligible pensioner in a household, or were of no fixed abode, they were entitled to £20; otherwise, they were entitled to £10.

In order to establish other eligible pensioners, correctly identify pensioner households, and determine the amount each should receive, it was necessary to correlate data. This involved around fifteen million computer records, fifteen qualifying benefits, across nine computer systems. Where only one eligible person was identified as living at an address a payment of £20 was made and if more than one eligible person was identified as living at an address a payment of £10 was made. By the end of March we issued a further 8,326,715 payments to these eligible customers.

Where official Departmental records were not correct or incomplete, it was possible that the amount of some payments may not have corresponded with the actual circumstances. For example, there were cases where two eligible pensioners lived at the same address and in the same household, but the address details held on the relevant benefit computer records were incorrect or incomplete for either or both of them. In such cases, the data correlation exercise may not have identified more than one eligible person at an address and in accordance with the provisions of the legislation each were entitled to a payment of £20. There is no overprovision in such instances, but any voluntary offer to repay any amount would be accepted.

Of payments made to IS and income-based JSA pensioners in January we are aware that some payments were incorrectly made or duplicated. We know that 9,357 payments were made where information held within official records indicated payment was inappropriate. A further 211 duplicate payments were made to those pensioners who transferred from IS to income-based JSA during the qualifying week of 5 January 1998. Of the relevant payments this represents a 0.68 per cent. error rate. In financial terms the total cost of these errors amounts to £488,400, and against this represents 0.68 per cent. of the total sum issued of £72,080,700.

In addition we also know that due to a computer operator error, 40,801 IS payments were sent out with an incorrect issue date on them. All these girocheques were replaced automatically within 72 hours. To date we are aware that in 438 cases both the original and replacement payments have been cashed.

I hope you find this information helpful.

Benefit Fraud

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many of confirmed cases of benefit fraud among residents of care homes there were in 1997–98; [53818]

(2) to what extent care homes are targeted in his Department's measures to combat benefit fraud; [53820]

(3) what measures his Department is taking to combat benefit fraud among residents of care homes. [53819]

Mr. Denham: Tackling fraud and abuse is a top priority for the Government. Operational issues are the responsibility of Peter Mathison, the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Mark Oaten, dated 30 July 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions concerning benefit fraud among residents of care homes.

The information is not available in the format requested. In 1997/98 Benefits Agency Security Investigation Service (BASIS) who concentrate on serious attacks on the benefit system by organised criminals carried out 1,742 successful investigations. In the same period Benefit Fraud Investigation Service (BFIS) who deal with locally based fraud investigations carried out 547,000 successful investigations. Figures are not broken down to collate by type of benefit claimant such as by resident of care home.

The BFIS investigates fraud within the benefit system. Investigation takes place when a suspicion of fraud exists, for example following receipt information that a benefit claimant has not disclosed employment or where a benefit recipient's circumstances change (for example going into care) and the BA is not informed. Enquiries are also made of employers including those of care homes where there is suspicion that employees may be committing benefit fraud. Care homes are not specifically targeted in these types of enquiries.

The BA is undertaking a range of projects and initiatives all of which are designed to achieve a sustained reduction in the level of fraud across the benefit system. Suspicion of fraud by residents of care homes would be investigated by the BA professionally and sensitively. The Government's recent Green Paper "Beating Fraud is Everyone's Business: Securing the Future" sets out a comprehensive strategy for tackling fraud in the wider context of welfare reform.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Departmental Vehicles

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much his Department expects to spend in each year from 1998–99 to 2000–01 on vehicle replacements. [54993]

Mr. Denham: I will write to the hon. Member.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Best: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many claimants of incapacity benefit who have been required to undertake the all work test; [53961]

(2) how many claimants of incapacity benefit have not satisfied the requirements of the all work test in the opinion of the Benefits Agency Medical Services Medical Officer; [53966]

(3) how many claimants of incapacity benefit who have appealed against decisions of the Benefits Agency Medical Services Medical Officer that they did not satisfy the requirements of the all work test have had their appeals upheld after (a) an oral and (b) a paper hearing. [53967]

Mr. Denham: The information is not available in the form requested. The information which is available is as follows.

Decisions on entitlement to Incapacity Benefit are made by independent Adjudication Officers in the light of all the evidence, including medical advice from the claimant's GP, other medical practitioners where relevant, and the Benefits Agency Medical Services Medical Officer.

The All Work Test is a functional assessment of a person's ability to carry out a range of work-related activities: in some but not all cases a medical examination by the Benefits Agency Medical Services is required.

From 13 April 1995 to 30 June 1998, a total of 2,920,202[1] All Work Test decisions were made and a total of 565,583[2] claims were disallowed.

Details of appeals outcomes split between oral and paper hearings are only available from July 1997. From July 1997 to April 1998 the Independent Tribunal Service heard 26,778 appeals on Incapacity Benefit (All Work Test). Of these 19,691 were oral hearings with 9,803 being found in favour of the appellant. The remaining 7,087 were paper hearings with 853 found in the appellant's favour.

Appellants are asked if they want to attend the hearing of their appeal. The Department's appeals leaflet makes it clear that appellants who attend or are represented at hearings have a higher success rate and encourages people to attend the hearing.

[2] Includes claimants disallowed for failure to return the IB50 questionnaire or to attend a medical examination, without good cause

Benefits (Savings)

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate his Department has made of the average savings in benefit expenditure for each unemployed claimant of benefits who gains full-time employment. [53959]

Mr. Denham: The cost of unemployment-related benefits per unemployed person per year, is estimated at 1998–99 benefit levels at £3,850[1]. The extent of any savings arising from individuals moving from benefits into work would depend on their entitlement to in-work benefits such as Family Credit, Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit.

Note:

[1] For the purposes of calculating this figure, unemployment related benefits are defined as Jobseeker's Allowance, and Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit payments to people in receipt of Jobseeker's Allowance.

Chief Adjudication Officer

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he will publish the 14th annual report of the Chief Adjudication Officer; and if he will make a statement. [54885]

Angela Eagle: The report is being published today. The Chief Adjudication Officer's findings record a continuing improvement in the majority of decisions made by both the Benefits Agency and the Employment Service.

It is encouraging to read about the numerous initiatives that have been introduced to tackle weaknesses and improve overall performance. The initiatives are already helping to improve decision making. This is particularly good news as we approach 1999 when the provisions of the Social Security Act 1998 come into force. These provisions will build on current improvements and ensure that the way decisions are made and appealed is straightforward for both customers and decision-makers alike. The changes are a further step in the transformation of the Social Security system into an Active Modern Service. The Act also introduces important changes to the monitoring of decisions. Responsibility for monitoring the standards of decision-making within the Agencies will transfer to the relevant Chief Executives.

War Pensions

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many veterans who have been awarded war pensions for illnesses arising out of their service in the 1991 Gulf War are suffering from (a) post-traumatic stress disorder, (b) irritable bowel syndrome, (c) chronic fatigue syndrome, (d) irritable bladder, (e) asthma, (f) respiratory disorders and (g) signs and symptoms of ill-defined conditions; and how many of these have been awarded pensions for suffering two or more of these conditions; [54536]

(2) how many veterans to date have been awarded war pensions for illnesses arising out of their service in the 1991 Gulf War; [54535]

(3) how many veterans diagnosed with Gulf War syndrome have been refused war pensions. [54537]

Mr. Denham: One of our key aims is that delivery of service should be simpler and more efficient. The administration of the War Pensions Agency is a matter for its Chief Executive, Mr. Gordon Hextall. I have asked him to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Gordon Hextall to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 30 July 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about the number of War Pensions awarded for medical conditions relating to the Gulf Conflict.

I regret that the information is not available in the format requested. The War Pensions Agency does record statistics on claims from Gulf War veterans. However, such claims may relate to injuries etc received at any time whilst serving, not just during service in the Gulf Conflict. A War Pension may be awarded for any disablement which can be causally linked to service. At the end of June 1998, a total of 2315 claims had been identified for medical conditions relating to ex-servicemen whose service included the Gulf Conflict. 1610 awards of War Pension have been made.

Of the 2315 claims, 537 have been received where a Gulf Veteran had made reference to a "Gulf War related illness". Of these, 283 have been awarded a pension, 44 have been rejected and 22 claims were withdrawn or lapsed. However, I am advised that medical research carried out to date has not identified a specific "Gulf Related illness". Consequently, no claims have been awarded or rejected for "Gulf War Syndrome".

Information on the number of Gulf Veterans receiving pension payments for the conditions Post Traumatic Stress Disorder, Irritable Bowel Syndrome, Chronic Fatigue Syndrome, Irritable Bladder, Asthma, Respiratory Disorders and Signs and Symptoms of Ill Defined Conditions is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

I hope you find my reply helpful.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Gas Exploration Industry

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she expects to meet representatives of the gas exploration industry to discuss proposals set out in the Review of Energy Sources for Power Generation consultation document. [49635]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 9 July 1998]: The Minister for Science, Energy and Industry met representatives of the UK Offshore Operators Association on 16 July, and of Shell on 27 July to discuss the Review.

Motor Dealers

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment she has made of the introduction of the licensing of motor dealers in some Scottish regions; and what plans she has to extend the scheme to other regions. [51206]

Dr. Howells: No assessment has been made of the introduction of licensing of second-hand motor dealers which is at the discretion of individual local authorities in Scotland under powers in the Civic Government (Scotland) Act 1982 which enables them to license all second-hand dealers for the purposes of preserving public order and safety and the prevention of crime. There are no plans to extend the scheme to other regions beyond Scotland.

Export Credits (Sri Lanka)

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what amount of export credits were available for Sri Lanka for each of the years 1994 to 1997; and in each year what amount was cover for military exports. [51797]

Mr. Mandelson: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to the hon. Member for Moray (Mrs. Ewing) on 9 June 1998, Official Report, columns 504–05, which will provide the full details requested.

My hon. Friend will see from this that during these years ECGD issued guarantees for export credits to Sri Lanka totalling £257 million. None of these related to defence business.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Stunell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what plans she has to increase the target percentage of electricity to be generated from renewable sources of energy by 2010; [52444]

(2) if she will increase in real terms Government spending on direct research and development of renewable sources of energy; and if she will make a statement; [52433]

(3) how much money she plans to allocate to research into renewable energy technologies in each of the years covered by the Comprehensive Spending Review; [52439]

(4) what is the current level of Government funding of research into (a) offshore wind farms, (b) onshore wind farms, (c) tidal wave power schemes and (d) photovoltaic panels; and what was the value of departmental spending for each in real terms for each of the last four years. [52452]

Mr. Battle: The Government are committed to a new and strong drive to develop renewable energy sources in line with our manifesto commitment. To this end, I am reviewing policy towards new and renewable sources of energy, including consideration of what would be necessary and practicable to achieve 10 per cent. of UK electricity needs from renewables by the year 2010 and how renewables can make an effective contribution to meeting requirements for future greenhouse gas reductions. The review, which is nearing completion, is examining the status of all the new and renewable energy technologies and the UK industry and their future prospects in both home and export markets. It is also considering what further research, development, and demonstration is needed in the longer term. I expect to announce the outcome of the review later this year.

Expenditure on the New and Renewable Energy Programme was cut significantly by the previous Government in the years following publication of their policy and strategy in Energy Paper Number 62, entitled "New and Renewable Energy Technology: Future Prospects for the UK", and further cuts were planned. Expenditure under the Wind sub-programme was reduced from £2.7 million in 1994–95 to £1.2 million (net) in 1997–98. Similarly the expenditure under the Solar sub-programme fell from £2.1 million in 1994–95 to £1.6 million (net) in 1997–98.

Since coming into office, I have reversed the planned cuts in the overall programme budget set by the previous Government, increasing provision for 1998–99 by £2 million to £11.1 million (net). For Wind and Solar energy, expenditure in 1998–99 can be expected to remain broadly in line with that in 1997–98, subject to project recruitment and progress. No expenditure on Tidal energy is expected in 1998–99 following the previous Government's earlier decision to close that programme. Beyond 1998–99 expenditure will depend on the outcome of the current policy review.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will make a statement on Government policy on renewable energy; [54109]

(2) what plans he has to remove the special treatment offered to renewable energy. [54656]

Mr. Mandelson: The Government are committed to a new and strong drive to develop renewable energy sources in line with our manifesto commitment. To this end, I am reviewing policy towards new and renewable sources of energy, including consideration of what would be necessary and practicable to achieve 10 per cent. of UK electricity needs from renewables by the year 2010 and how renewables can make an effective contribution to meeting requirements for future greenhouse gas reductions. The review, which is nearing completion, is examining the status of all the new and renewable energy technologies and the UK industry and their future prospects in both home and export markets. It is also considering what further research, development, and demonstration is needed for the longer term. I expect to announce the outcome of the review later this year.

Office Hours

Mr. Bercow: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the normal office hours of senior civil servants in her Department. [52565]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 27 July 1998]: Senior civil servants in my Department are required to sign a personal contract which states (for those with a full time contract):

"You are required to work a minimum (over a 5 day week) of 41 hours elsewhere, including daily meal breaks of one hour. As a senior civil servant, you will be required to work such additional hours as may from time to time be reasonable and necessary for the efficient performance of your duties."

The hours worked by part-time senior civil servants are subject to individual arrangements.

Milk Marque

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to refer the consequences of the major dairy companies' refusal to submit bids in the July 1998 Milk Marque selling round to the MMC; and if she will make a statement. [52555]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 27 June 1998]: The Director General of Fair Trading (DGFT) asked the Monopolies and Mergers Commission (MMC) to investigate the supply of raw milk in Great Britain on 27 January 1998, under the monopoly provisions of the Fair Trading Act 1973.

This is now a matter for the MMC. The reference enables the MMC to look at all relevant aspects of the supply of raw milk in England, Scotland and Wales, and it will take on board the actions of the parties to the latest selling round in its inquiry.

Any evidence that the dairy companies may have colluded in refusing to submit bids in Milk Marque's latest selling round may be a matter to be considered by the DGFT under the Restrictive Trade Practices Act 1976. If the hon. Member has evidence of such collusion he should bring it to the attention of the DGFT at the following address:

Mr. John Bridgeman

Asbestos

Mr. Cox: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what guidance her Department issues to those constructing buildings for which it is responsible on the use of materials containing asbestos. [52308]

Dr. Howells: My Department does not undertake the construction of new buildings. However, in the refurbishment of existing buildings the Department meets all its statutory duties related to the removal of asbestos, and the Department's overriding policy is not to use asbestos based materials during the construction phase of the works and not to specify the use of such materials.

Research Establishments

Mr. Singh: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment the Government have taken on the previous Administration's Prior Options reviews of the public sector research establishments. [52149]

Mr. Battle: During December 1996 the previous Administration completed "prior options" reviews of 38 Public Sector Research Establishments (PSREs), the results of which were announced in January 1997. The outcome for the majority of the establishments was retention in the public sector.

Over the last few months, I and my Ministerial colleagues have been considering our joint approach to the specific outcomes of these reviews. The majority of these proposed a range of measures to ensure the establishments were managed as effectively and efficiently as possible, most of which are already being implemented. The Government have concluded that the implementation of these measures should continue, since they improve value-for-money and the provision of high quality services. This was taken forward in the context of the Government's Comprehensive Spending Review.

The following PSREs were involved in the reviews:

National Weights and Measures Laboratory
Central Laboratory for the Research Councils
Babraham Institute
Institute for Animal Health
Institute of Arable Crops Research Institute of Food Research Institute of Grassland and Environmental Research
John Innes Centre
Roslin Institute
Silsoe Research Institute
British Geological Survey

Centre for Coastal and Marine Science
Centre for Ecology and Hydrology
Dunn Nutrition Unit
Radiobiological Mechanisms Unit[1]
Radiobiological Biology Unit
Toxicology Unit
Virology Unit[2]
Central Science Laboratory
Directorate of Fisheries Research[3]
Horticulture Research International
Veterinary Laboratories Agency
Health and Safety Laboratory
National Institute of Biological Standards and Control
National Radiological Protection Board
Public Health Laboratory Service
Police Scientific Development Branch
Fisheries Research Services
Forestry Commission Research Division
Hannah Research Institute
Macaulay Land Use Research Institute
Moredun Research Institute
Rowett Research Institute
Scottish Agriculture Science Agency
Scottish Crop Research Institute

[1] Comprising the former Mammalian Genetics Unit and the Radiation and Genome Stability Unit

[2] Under the previous Administration, it was agreed to transfer the Virology Unit to the University of Glasgow. However, it has since been decided not to transfer the Unit, since the complex practical issues flagged in the original announcement have proved insurmountable, and the benefits are uncertain. Closer scientific links will be pursued in other ways. Staff at the Institute have already been informed

[3] Now named the Centre for Environment, Fisheries and Aquaculture Science.

We shall examine opportunities for commercial exploitation of research ideas originating in these establishments.

ADAS and the Building Research Establishment were privatised by the previous Administration.

Funeral Industry

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received concerning the regulation of the United Kingdom funeral industry; and if he will make a statement. [53040]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 28 July 1998]: During the course of discussions with interested parties on the measures to regulate pre-payment funeral plans, the Department has received representations concerning regulation of the "at need" funeral industry. We have called upon the industry to raise standards of consumer services. I do not believe that registration of funeral directors is warranted or justified. I have every confidence that funeral directors are, on the whole, offering high standards of service and believe that it would be unfair to burden them with the additional costs of regulation.

Credit Interest Rates

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to protect consumers from retailers who charge excessive interest for credit. [53693]

Mr. Mandelson: The extortionate credit provisions of the Consumer Credit Act 1974 already apply to retailers and other lenders. The Director General of Fair Trading is consulting on the adequacy of these provisions. Before considering further action I will study the evidence this exercise produces and his proposals.

Departmental Research

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the cost of all research undertaken by his Department since May 1997, excluding the cost of green papers and other public consultation documents drafted by his officials; and if he will list in each case the organisations which undertook that research. [52699]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 29 July 1998]: Disaggregated information in the form requested, which is not held centrally within the Department, could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Airports

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will refer the issue of the ownership of Edinburgh, Glasgow and Aberdeen airports by the same company to the MMC. [54519]

Dr. Howells: Any competition concerns arising from the common ownership of these airports should be made to the Director General of Fair Trading, who will investigate.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list those organisations that (i) opposed and (ii) supported the ownership of the three south-east of England airports by the same company during the last MMC investigation of this issue. [54518]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I have been asked to reply.

The question of the continued ownership of the three airports by BAA plc was not part of the references by the CAA to the MMC initiating the 1996 quinquennial review. The MMC's consideration of whether there should be a change in the structure of ownership was instead based on whether the three airports had been pursuing a course of conduct for which this would be an appropriate remedy. The CAA references did ask whether there had been courses of conduct which operated or might have been expected to operate against the public interest, and this question was the focus of comment from most of the 87 parties which expressed views. The MMC found that there was no such course of conduct for which a change in the structure of ownership would be an appropriate remedy.

Persistent Inquirers

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which of his Department's agencies have procedures to identify persistent inquirers for information. [53954]

Mr. Mandelson: DTI's executive agencies provide a considerable amount of information to their customers and to the general public in pursuit of their objectives. None has particular procedures for identifying persistent inquiries for information.

Sellafield

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make it his policy to ensure no additional financial resources are provided to BNFL to subsidise the programme of liquid radioactive waste treatment required at Sellafield following decisions agreed at the Ministerial meeting of the Ospar Convention in Sintra. [54400]

Mr. Battle: The Government will continue to set financial targets for BNFL which take into account the cost of dealing with the nuclear liabilities for which they are responsible.

Vanity Publishers

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to regulate vanity publishers. [53429]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 30 July 1998]: I have no plans to introduce specific legislation on vanity publishing. I believe that existing consumer protection legislation is adequate to deal with those unscrupulous companies who may seek to exploit authors. This includes the Trade Descriptions Act 1968, the Misrepresentation Act 1967, the Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982 and the Control of Misleading Advertisements Regulations 1988.

Political Advisers

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he has taken to ensure that conflicts of interest do not arise in cases where political advisers are not paid out of public funds. [53600]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 30 July 1998]: I do not have any political advisers who are not paid out of public funds.

Bookmakers' Odds

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he proposes to include the display of odds by on-course bookmakers within the scope of legislation implementing the EC Directive 98/6/EC on Consumer Protection in the Indication of Prices of Products Offered to Consumers. [53717]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 30 July 1998]: No. EC Directive 98/6/EC (in common with previous UK and EU legislation in this area) relates specifically to the prices of products and does not cover betting odds.

Neither my Department, nor the Home Office, which is responsible for betting policy, has received any representations that the UK's implementing legislation should be extended in this way.

Policy Agenda Meeting

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he accepted the invitation to speak to a meeting, organised by GPC Market Access, on the policy agenda of the Labour Party Conference, the European Union and other matters. [53609]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 30 July 1998]: No formal invitation was issued.

Welsh Language Scheme

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on what date his Department received notification from the Welsh Language Board in relation to the need to prepare a Welsh language scheme; on what date his Department and the Board held consultations on such a scheme; when a scheme was formally submitted to the Board; and if it has been approved. [53354]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 30 July 1998]: My Department has not received any such notification.

Executive Agencies

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what reviews are currently being carried out in respect of (a) the Radiocommunications Agency, (b) Companies House, (c) the Patent Office, (d) Employment Tribunals Service and (e) ACAS; and if he will indicate their remit. [53276]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 30 July 1998]: No reviews are currently being carried out in respect of these bodies.

Departmental Policies (Scientific Advice)

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the implementation of the Office of Science and Technology's guidelines on the use of Scientific Advice in Policy Making by Government Departments. [55236]

Mr. Mandelson: The Government place great importance on the implementation of the guidelines as a way of ensuring the highest standards of integrity and openness in their use of scientific advice. The Government's Chief Scientific Adviser, Sir Robert May, has recently compiled a report in conjunction with departmental Chief Scientists on how the guidelines are being implemented by Departments. The main conclusions from this work are set out in a report, a copy of which has been today placed in the Library of the House.

The guidelines were prepared only a year ago but it is encouraging to see that there is already a high level of compliance across Departments. The report contains a number of examples of good practice, but it is also clear that there is a good deal of scope for further action. There is a considerable amount which Departments can learn from each other and we look forward to further progress in the next twelve months.

New Millennium Experience Company

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on what date the Accounts and Annual Report for the New Millennium Experience Company will be published. [54393]

Mr. Mandelson: They were published yesterday.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proportion of his working week he intends to allocate to the Millennium Experience. [54441]

Mr. Mandelson: I will spend as much time as is necessary on matters relating to the New Millennium Experience Company.

Electricity Industry

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the implications for the supply of electricity following the decision to close eight nuclear power stations within 10 years; and which sectors of the electricity generation market he expects to develop further capacity to account for any shortfall. [53314]

Mr. Battle: There has been no decision to close eight nuclear power stations within the next 10 years.

The Government are currently considering responses to the consultation document on their Review of Energy Sources for Power Generation and will announce their policy when the review is complete.

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry by what proportion carbon dioxide emissions are increased per unit of electricity generated by the fitting of FGD technology to an average coal-fired power station. [53311]

Mr. Battle: The increase in the production of carbon dioxide emissions per unit of electricity from a coal-fired power station fitted with Flue Gas Desulphurisation (FGD) of the wet limestone type fitted in the UK varies with a number of factors such as the sulphur and chlorine content of the coal and the electrical load, but would be typically in the range 3.5–7 per cent. This would be derived from the sulphur dioxide neutralisation process and from the corresponding drop in thermal efficiency of the power station arising from the electricity needed to power the FGD plant.

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of whether the United Kingdom policy of discriminating against new gas-fired power stations will conflict with European Commission competition rules. [53323]

Mr. Battle: The Government's proposals arising from the Review of Energy Sources for Power Generation, announced for consultation on 25 June, are considered to be fully consistent with European law.

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the (a) current and (b) forthcoming rounds of coal contracts for electricity generation involve subsidy from (i) public funds or (ii) the generators; and what the levels of subsidy are likely to be. [53325]

Mr. Battle: In the preliminary conclusions of its Review of Energy Sources for Power Generation, the Government made it clear that coal purchase decisions, including price and other terms of supply, were a commercial matter for the generators. They also made it clear that they did not propose to subsidise any part of the UK coal industry.

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to ensure that the gas-fired electricity generating industry is not damaged by unfair competition. [53324]

Mr. Battle: The government's proposals arising from the Review of Energy Sources for Power Generation were published for consultation on 25 June. We are now considering the responses and will announce our final conclusions shortly, once the material has been assessed.

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the percentage contribution to United Kingdom energy needs of clean coal technology in (a) 2000, (b) 2005, (c) 2010, (d) 2015 and (e) 2020. [53327]

Mr. Battle: No estimates have been made on the percentage contribution cleaner coal technology will eventually make to UK energy supply or when existing coal capacity will be replaced. The timing for investment in cleaner coal technology is a matter for the generating companies.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the coal-fired electricity generation plant in the United Kingdom, together with the expected operational life of each plant. [54251]

Mr. Battle: Electricity generators are private sector companies and the operational life of their plant is a commercial matter for them.

According to the Electricity Association, the trade association for the electricity industry, there are 24 coal fired power stations in the United Kingdom:

National Power: Aberthaw B, Blyth A, Blyth B, Didcot A, Drax, Eggborough, Willington B, Tilbury B

PowerGen: Cottam, Ferrybridge C, Fiddlers Ferry, Ratcliffe, Kingsnorth

Eastern Group: Drakelow C, High Marnham, Ironbridge, Rugely B, West Burton

Scottish Power: Cockenzie, Longannet, Methil (coal slurry)

Alcan: Lynemouth

Nigen: Belfast West, Kilroot.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will set out for each United Kingdom planning region the estimated capital investment represented by all current outstanding applications for sections 14 and 36 Electricity Act consents; [54252]

(2) if he will list for each United Kingdom planning region the estimated employment in (a) construction, (b) manufacturing and (c) operation if all current application for sections 14 and 36 Electricity Act consents were granted. [54253]

Mr. Battle: No such estimates are available. This is not information collected for the purposes of section 36 of the Electricity Act 1989 and section 14 of the Energy Act 1976.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what contribution to the Government's target of a 20 per cent reduction in Carbon Dioxide emissions will be made by the electricity industry. [53986]

Mr. Mandelson: The Government will publish shortly a consultation paper on the policy options for achieving their climate change targets. This will focus on their legally binding target to reduce greenhouse gas emissions by 12.5 per cent. as well as looking at measures for moving beyond that to its domestic goal of a 20 per cent. reduction in CO_2. The paper will look at the scope for emission reductions in all sectors, including the electricity industry.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the Government's policy of building (a) gas-fired and (b) coal-fired power stations. [53980]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 31 July 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to paragraph 2 of chapter 5 of the consultation document on the Review of Energy Sources for Power Generation, published on 25 June 1998.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what priority he accords to obtaining cheaper electricity for consumers in determining his energy policy. [53984]

Mr. Mandelson: The consultation document of 25 June 1998 proposed the continuation of the existing energy policy objective of secure, diverse and sustainable supplies of energy at competitive prices.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what international agreements cover the operation of the electricity interconnector between the United Kingdom and France; what principal obligations they impose on the parties; and when they are subject to renegotiation. [54672]

Mr. Battle: The operation of the electricity interconnector between the United Kingdom and France is covered by a private commercial agreement between the National Grid Company plc and Electricité de France signed in 1993, the terms of which are confidential. I understand that this agreement expires in 2001.

Gas-fired Power Stations

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the impact on investment of the extended moratorium on the construction of gas-fired power stations. [54003]

Mr. Battle: In relation to gas-fired power stations, if, as a result of a stricter consents policy, plant does not proceed which otherwise would have done, then the corresponding investment will obviously not take place. It is not possible to quantify the overall effect precisely, because both the number of applications which would be made, and whether they would have actually gone ahead, are uncertain.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry until what date he proposes to continue the moratorium on the building of new gas-fired power stations. [54237]

Mr. Battle: I refer the hon. Member to paragraph 2 of chapter 5 of the consultation document on the Review of Energy Sources for Power Generation, published on 25 June 1998.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the arrangements under which companies with consent to build or run gas power stations may buy gas on long-term contract. [54120]

Mr. Mandelson: This is a matter upon which views were sought in the consultation on the preliminary conclusions of the Review of Energy Sources for Power Generation. We shall be announcing our conclusions shortly, once the responses to the consultation have been assessed.

Parcelforce

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the future of Parcelforce. [54243]

Mr. Mandelson: As my right hon. Friend the President of the Council announced on 6 April 1998, Official Report, column 63, the Government are committed to the Post Office remaining in the public sector. Against that background, the Government are reviewing the Post Office's organisation, structure and financing with a view to ensuring that the Post Office can be given greater commercial freedom to enable it to compete effectively in the UK and overseas. The review includes consideration of the future status of Parcelforce, and the potential for its return to profitability

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the impact of the minimum wage on inflation levels. [54108]

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with the Chancellor of the Exchequer regarding the wage inflation implications of the minimum wage. [54454]

Mr. Mandelson: The Government do not believe that the decisions they have taken on the National Minimum Wage will have an adverse effect on inflation.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if his Department will publish forecasts on employment levels of the impact of the introduction of the minimum wage. [54453]

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if his Department will now publish forecasts of the jobs impact of the minimum wage; [54245]

(2) what assessment his Department has made of the different employment impacts in different regions of the United Kingdom of the introduction of the minimum wage. [54936]

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish his Department's forecasts of the effect on jobs of the minimum wage. [54514]

Mr. Ian McCartney: I refer the hon. Members to the reply given to the hon. Member for Banbury (Mr. Baldry) on 23 June 1998, Official Report, column 473.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the timetable for the planned implementation of the national minimum wage legislation. [54032]

Mr. Ian McCartney: In her statement announcing the Government's response to the Low Pay Commission's recommendations on 18 June 1998, Official Report, column 507, the then President of the Board of Trade announced that the National Minimum Wage would be implemented from April 1999.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what studies he has carried out into the indirect impact of implementation of the national minimum wage on wage differentials. [54670]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Government share the view of the Low Pay Commission that at the rate it is proposed to set the National Minimum Wage any impact on pay differentials should be limited. There is little empirical evidence to suggest that a minimum wage set at a sensible level, as we have done, should cause workers to press for restoration of differentials.

Millennium Dome (Sponsors)

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will place in the Library a copy of the standard terms and conditions of a corporate sponsorship agreement with the New Millennium Experience Company Limited. [54398]

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to the answer of 27 July 1998, Official Report, column 82, if he will list the range of benefits offered to sponsors by the NMEC. [54578]

Mr. Mandelson: The uniqueness of the Millennium Experience has required the New Millennium Experience company (NMEC) to develop policies, strategies, and standards across many aspects of the project for which there are no templates, precedents, or off-the-shelf solutions. This has applied to the sponsorship arrangements in particular. The Company's strategy is to deliver its testing sponsorship target through a range of sponsorship categories, each with terms and conditions and benefits commensurate with the level of sponsorship involved. During the first phase the Company has concentrated on the Founding Partner category at a sponsorship value of at least £12 million. The standard terms, conditions, and benefits applying to each category of sponsorship are being documented formally, and I will ensure that copies are placed in the Library of the House as soon as they are completed.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what inducements are offered to companies to sponsor zones in the Millennium Experience; and what advertising is permitted in these zones; [51275]

(2) what rules will govern the promotion by firms sponsoring zones in the Millennium Dome of themselves and their products and services in the zones sponsored; [52524]

(3) what advertising by commercial sponsors is to be allowed in the Millennium Experience brochures. [52525]

Mr. Mandelson: The New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) retains overall editorial control of all exhibit zones and other features within the Millennium Experience Dome. This enables the company to protect the integrity of the Experience as the focus for the nation's Millennium celebrations and to protect its educational, inspirational and enjoyment values. There are no "inducements" offered to companies to sponsor exhibit zones; each company takes its own commercial decision as to the benefits of being involved and associated with this unique, once-in-lifetime project. The broad terms, conditions and benefits applying to the different categories of sponsorship are being formally documented by the NMEC and copies will be placed in the Library of the House as soon as they are completed.

Community Pharmacies

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assurances his Department gave to the Community Pharmacy Action Group in relation to resale price maintenance. [54242]

Dr. Howells: We have made it clear to the Community Pharmacy Action Group, as we did to the House, that we recognise the important role that community pharmacies play and that we would expect the Restrictive Practices Court to consider fully the issues relating to the retention and abolition of resale price maintenance for over-the-counter medicines, including the effect on local communities of possible pharmacy closures. We have also said that we would wish to take a robust line with the European Commission if, following a decision by the Restrictive Practices Court with respect to the continuation of the exemption for over-the-counter medicines under the Resale Prices Act, the Commission took action which flew in the face of that decision.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the number of community pharmacies which will close as a result of the ending of resale price maintenance. [54241]

Mr. Ian McCartney: My Department has not made an estimate.

The Director General of Fair Trading has considered the impact upon community pharmacies of the removal of resale price maintenance in his January 1998 report "Material Changes in the Medicaments Market since 1970". A copy of his report has been placed in the Library of the House.

Emission Targets

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the impact of projected increases in the quantity of coal to be burned on the UK's emission targets. [54002]

Mr. Battle: I refer the hon. Member to paragraph 19 of chapter 5 of the consultation document published on 25 June.

Energy Prices

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the impact of the measures contained in the Government's recent statement on energy policy on prices to consumers. [53999]

Mr. Battle: I refer the hon. Member to paragraphs 17 and 18 of Chapter 5 of the consultation document published on 25 June.

Leave Entitlements

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if an annual leave entitlement of three weeks under the Working Time Directive will be applicable in those industries which have not normally offered such leave; and what would be the cost to business of this entitlement. [54033]

Mr. Ian McCartney: All workers under the scope of the working time regulations will have an entitlement to paid annual leave. Workers involved in transport, sea fishing, other work at sea and doctors in training are excluded from the Working Time Directive. An estimate of the costs and benefits are set out in the regulatory appraisal included in the consultation document. A copy is available in the Library of the House.

Competition Bill

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will announce the fee to be charged to businesses seeking advice from the Director General of Fair Trading under the provision of the Competition Bill [Lords]. [54095]

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to announce the fee which will be charged to businesses under the Competition Bill proposals. [54239]

Mr. Ian McCartney: Clauses 51 and 53 of the Competition Bill [Lords] currently before Parliament provide for the Director General of Fair Trading to make rules about procedural matters including the charging of fees. In preparing such rules the Director General must consult such persons as he considers appropriate. Such consultation on fees will take place after Royal Assent, either as part of the general consultation or separately.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if his Department has revised its estimates of the compliance costs to business arising from the Competition Bill [Lords] to reflect changes during the Bill's passage. [54240]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Department published a revised estimate of compliance costs to business arising from the Competition Bill when the Bill was introduced into the House to reflect such changes made in another place.

Millennium Dome (Power)

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he has taken to promote efficient use of power within the Millennium Dome. [54465]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 31 July 1998]: The Dome structure was conceived and developed as an energy and resource-efficient means of housing a range of exhibits and attractions appropriate to the conditions of the Greenwich peninsular site. The Dome does not provide a conventionally controlled environment; it is not air conditioned, and heating and cooling provisions have been minimised to reflect the fact that visitors will be wearing clothing appropriate to "outdoor" conditions. In addition, the translucency of the Dome cladding material allows the interior to be naturally lit for much of the year. It is inevitable that operating a large-scale visitor attraction requires a significant quantity of power, but the New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) will seek to minimise this requirement where it is practical to do so.

Poverty Pay

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will define poverty pay; and what are his plans to eliminate it. [54470]

Mr. Ian McCartney: Poverty pay is where an individual has to work excessive hours at low rates of pay to ensure a decent standard of living for themselves and their families. The National Minimum Wage, along with other measures such as the Working Families Tax Credit, forms part of the Government's strategy to make work pay and put an end to such exploitation.

Employment Law Reform

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proposals he has for employment law reform; and in which areas of employment practice. [54471]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Government's proposals to reform employment law and to encourage good employment practices based on partnership were published in the Fairness at Work White Paper on 21 May.

Working Time Directive

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how long he will give companies to adjust their employment systems once the regulations are passed that will bring into effect the Working Time Directive and the requirement to give three weeks paid holiday. [54466]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Working Time Regulations, which implement the Working Time Directive, come into force on 1 October.

Tech Stars Steering Group

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the current membership of the Tech Stars Steering Group; when it last met and what matters were discussed; and when it will next meet. [54511]

Mr. Battle: The current membership of the Tech Stars Steering Group is:

Ronald Cohen (Chair): Apax Partners and Co.
Peter Agar: CBI
Sue Birley: Imperial College
Hermann Hauser: Amadeus Capital Partners Ltd.
Guy Herrington: DTI SME Policy Directorate
Alistair Keddie: DTI Innovation Unit
Craig Pickering: HM Treasury
Adrian Piper: Bank of England.

The last meeting was 3 July 1998 (Dr. Hauser was unable to attend) at which the Group discussed progress on current actions in the areas of commercialisation of university research and corporate venturing. It also discussed what actions the Group might take in the area of European risk capital markets, and an interest was shown in understanding more about the US Small Business Innovation Research scheme.

The next meeting will be in late September, although a date has yet to be fixed.

Competitiveness Working Party

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the current membership of the competitiveness working party on maximising competitiveness in Europe; when it last met; what matters were discussed; and when it will next meet. [54507]

Mr. Mandelson: Membership of the competitiveness working party on maximising competitiveness in Europe, chaired by Lord Simon of Highbury, is as follows:

Peter Agar, Deputy Director-General, Confederation of British Industry

Keith Bogg, Divisional Director, Marks & Spencer plc

Sir John Carter, Chief Executive, Commercial Union plc

C. K. Chow, Chief Executive, GKN plc

Iain Evans, Chairman, The LEK Partnership

Donald Hepburn, Senior Business Economist, Unilever plc

John Langston, Chief Executive Officer—Automotive, TI Group plc

Peter Lehmann, Commercial Director, Centrica plc

Christopher King, Chairman, Avon Rubber plc

Henry Manisty, Head of Government and Regulatory Affairs, Reuters Ltd.

Keith McCullagh, Chief Executive Officer, British Biotech plc

John Mellon, Director, Reed Elsevier plc.

The group last met on 22 April and the agenda comprised four topics: the development of the future White Paper on competitiveness; the current Government campaign to prepare business for the introduction of a single currency in Europe; the Social Chapter and European employment legislation; and standards and mutual recognition within the European Single Market.

A date has not yet been fixed for the meeting of the group.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the current membership of the Competitiveness Working Party on enhancing business performance through developing individuals; when it last met and what matters were discussed; and when it will next meet. [54510]

Mr. Mandelson: The Competitiveness Working Party on enhancing business performance through developing individuals last met under the chairmanship of the Minister of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Makerfield (Mr. McCartney) on 10 March to discuss employability and the first draft of the report to the Secretary of State. No further meetings are currently planned. Coal Industry

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the number of redundancies in the coal mining industry in the next three years. [53985]

Mr. Mandelson: Levels of employment in the coal-mining industry will depend upon commercial decisions taken by the private sector coal companies.

International Space Station

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his predecessor's letter of 27 May, what was the result of the review by the Manned Space Board and the International Relations Committee of ESA of the policy and financial implications of changes to the International Space Station schedule. [54056]

Mr. Battle: The Manned Space Board and the International Relations Committee of ESA are continuing to keep these issues under review. There have been no developments affecting the UK since the letter by the then President of the Board of Trade, now President of the Council, of 27 May 1998.

Coral-Ladbrokes Merger

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has received the report of the Monopolies and Mergers Commission on the proposed sale of Coral to Ladbrokes; and if he will make a statement. [54668]

Dr. Howells: The Monopolies and Mergers Commission (MMC) have delivered their report on the acquisition by Ladbrokes of the Coral betting business to the Secretary of State. The report will be published as soon as practicable.

New Environmental Technologies

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the potential market for British manufacturers of new environmental technologies. [54849]

Mr. Battle: Research suggests that the total global environmental market is worth $280 billion now and likely to grow to over $640 billion by 2010. More details can be found in "Global Environmental Markets: An Update", published by the Government's Joint Environmental Markets Unit.

Post Office

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the future of the (a) the Post Office and (b) Parcelforce. [54655]

Mr. Mandelson: As announced by my right hon. Friend the President of the Council when President of the Board of Trade, on 6 April 1998, Official Report, column 63, the Government plan to give the Post Office greater commercial freedom so that it can meet the challenges of the domestic and international markets, and deliver improved efficiency, effectiveness and service standards. The Government commissioned a review of public sector options for achieving this. It encompasses consideration of Parcelforce. The review is proceeding apace and I hope to announce our proposals in the Autumn.

Nuclear Reprocessing Industry

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Bury, North (Mr. Chaytor) of 9 July 1998, Official Report, column 631, when he expects the transport of spent fuel from Germany to Sellafield will resume. [54419]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I have been asked to reply.

My Department has responsibilities for the safe transport of radioactive materials. My German counterpart with these responsibilities announced, on 25 May, a ten point plan which, when fully implemented, would allow shipments to resume. At present I am unaware of any established timetable for this implementation. My officials are in contact with their German counterparts and will give any help possible to enable them to bring this matter to a satisfactory conclusion. I must emphasise that the resumption of shipments of spent fuel within Germany is a matter for the German Authorities.

Overseas Visits

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the total cost to public funds of his recent visit to Brazil including the cost incurred by accompanying officials broken down by (a) travel costs and (b) accommodation and subsistence. [52840]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 28 July 1998]: The cost of my trip to Brazil, as Minister without Portfolio, was approximately £6,400 for travel and £328 for accommodation. I was not accompanied by officials from the UK.

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the purpose of his recent visit to Brazil; and how many officials accompanied him on the visit. [52839]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 28 July 1998]: As Minister without Portfolio I undertook an official programme of meetings and visits in Brazil to cement the close personal relations between my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister and President Cardoso, and to deepen ties between the two governments and countries so as to strengthen our economic partnership. This programme included meetings with President Cardoso and Government Ministers and speeches at the University of Brasilia and the British Chamber of Commerce in Sao Paulo. I was not accompanied by officials from the UK but received excellent support from the British Embassy and the Consulate General in Sao Paulo and Rio de Janeiro.

HEALTH

Departmental Research

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the cost of all research undertaken by his Department since May 1997, excluding the cost of green papers and other public consultation documents drafted by his officials; and if he will list in each case the organisations which undertook that research. [52703]

Ms Jowell [holding answer 29 July 1998]: The term research covers a wide range of activities from scientific and engineering research through to consultancies and public opinion surveys. The information requested is not held centrally.

Invalid Vehicle Service

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the consultants' report following their review of the invalid vehicle service. [54618]

Mr. Boateng: We have considered this report carefully and decided to accept the consultants' recommendations that the Invalid Vehicle Service (IVS) should close on 31 March 2003, with help being given to drivers to take up alternative forms of transport. The scheme was closed to new drivers in 1976 and with around 720 invalid three-wheeler vehicles left on the road, it is becoming increasingly difficult to maintain this service. We now need to plan ahead and safeguard the interests of the remaining drivers. The long lead-in period before closure will give drivers the time to look at all the options available. Those leaving the scheme will be eligible for the higher rate mobility component of the Disability Living Allowance and drivers will be able to use this to switch to modern four-wheeler cars, scooters, and powered wheelchairs, possibly taking advantage of the Motability scheme. Help with driving lessons and adaptations to vehicles will be given.

Tobacco

Mr. Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will publish the Eleventh Annual report of the Committee for Monitoring Agreements on Tobacco Advertising and Sponsorship. [54619]

Mr. Dobson: Shortly. Copies will be placed in the Library.

NHS Trust (Debts)

Angela Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he plans to change the debt structure of NHS trusts; and if he will make a statement. [55194]

Mr. Milburn: The New NHS White Paper made clear the Government's intention to abolish the internal market in the National Health Service and amend the NHS trust financial regime to make it more transparent and more suitable for a public service based partnership. As part of our programme to achieve this aim, we are changing the debt structure of NHS trusts. We have already taken steps to stop issuing long-term interest-bearing loans to NHS trusts to finance their capital expenditure. Instead, we are issuing Public Dividend Capital (PDC). The NHS Executive will now be making arrangements to replace existing interest-bearing debt with PDC without the application of premiums or discounts because the Exchequer funds NHS trusts' normal debt servicing costs. This will supersede the present, market driven financial structure, reduce bureaucracy and provide a simpler, clearer and more understandable arrangements, in tune with NHS trusts' status as part of the public sector.

Clinical Oncologists

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to address shortages of clinical oncologists. [54933]

Ms Jowell: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the right hon. Member for Maidstone and The Weald (Miss Widdecombe) on 29 July 1998, Official Report, column 380. Clinical oncology is also known as radiotherapy.

Green Transport

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 31 March 1998, Official Report, column 510, on departmental transport arrangements, what further changes he has made. [53994]

Ms Jowell: The Department is working towards the target announced in the White paper, "A New Deal for Transport", that all headquarters buildings and main buildings occupied by executive offices and government offices for the regions should have green transport plans by March 1999 and all other key buildings by March 2000. Work has started on preparing green transport plans but no changes have yet been made to departmental transport arrangements.

NHS Computers

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many networked computers are currently in use in the National Health Service. [54130]

Mr. Boateng: This information requested is not available centrally.

Specialist Workforce Advisory Group

Mr. Best: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the effect of the advice and practices of the Specialist Workforce Advisory Group on (a) waiting list numbers and (b) the provision of services in smaller hospitals. [54036]

Mr. Boateng: The Specialty Workforce Advisory Group (SWAG) advises Government about the numbers of doctors in higher specialist training needed to meet estimated requirements for consultants four to six years ahead. SWAG's first set of recommendations was for the year 1996–97. The effect, in terms of the numbers of doctors completing training and taking up consultant posts, and thus contributing to the reduction of waiting lists, is beginning to be felt. SWAG's planning process takes account of the views of the National Health Service and the medical profession about service needs. The deployment of consultants supplied through national workforce planning is for trusts and health authorities to determine.

Radiotherapy

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the variation by region in waiting time for cancer patients awaiting radiotherapy in the NHS; and in what percentage of cases this exceeds clinical guidelines. [54115]

Mr. Boateng: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Eye and Dental Checks

Dr. Brand: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the amount of money that (a) eye tests and (b) dental checks save the NHS each year by identifying conditions early in those eligible. [53752]

Mr. Milburn: The information on which to base these estimates is not available centrally.

Dr. Brand: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) NHS eye tests and (b) NHS dental checks were performed in England and Wales, by year, from 1992 to 1998; and how many he estimates will be performed in 1998–99. [53753]

Mr. Milburn: The information available is in the table. We do not yet have estimates for 1998/99.

England and Wales

million

Year	National Health Service sight tests	Adult dental examinations carried out by General Dental Service dentists
1991–92	5.31	20.6
1992–93	5.90	21.1
1993–94	6.33	20.6
1994–95	6.80	20.4
1995–96	6.95	20.3
1996–97	7.27	20.0
1997–98	7.47	20.6

Eye Tests

Dr. Brand: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the number of pensioners who (a) will be eligible to and (b) will actually take up the Government's extension of free eye tests; what are the estimated costs of this scheme; and what assessment he has made of the potential savings arising from the early diagnosis of eye conditions. [53751]

Mr. Milburn: We estimate that between 6 million and 7 million additional people aged 60 or over will become eligible for free National Health Service sight tests from 1 April 1999. Assuming this results in about 2 million more sight tests per annum, additional costs of some £30 million will be incurred over current annual expenditure on sight tests of £110 million. Optometrists regularly identify signs of eye diseases such as glaucoma during sight tests but we cannot yet assess the health gains which result.

Accolate

Dr. Brand: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimates his Department has made of (a) the potential cost to the NHS of the drug accolate, (b) the number of people who currently use inhalers to control asthma, (c) the cost per dose of the drug and (d) the date when accolate will be available on prescription. [53750]

Mr. Milburn: Accolate (Zafirlukast 20mg tablets) was launched by Zeneca on 20 July 1998. It is therefore already available on National Health Service prescription. It is licensed for the treatment of asthma. The dose is 20mg twice daily and costs £25.69 for 56 tablets. No estimate of the potential cost to the National Health Service has been made. The number of people in England with asthma sufficiently severe to require regular medical supervision is estimated to be around 2 million, of whom the majority will be using inhaler treatment for some part of the time.

Residential Care

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 27 July 1998, Official Report, column 93, concerning his Department's guidance LAC (98), what evidence he has submitted to the Royal Commission on topping-up payments. [54128]

Mr. Boateng: A factual note on topping-up has been prepared for the Royal Commission and copies are available in the Library.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he intends to issue his Department's forthcoming White Paper on the registration and inspection of residential care homes. [54038]

Mr. Boateng: The Department's Social Services White Paper will be published when Parliament returns after the summer recess.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 21 July 1998, Official Report, column 531, concerning his Department's guidance, LAC (98)9, if he will place in the Library the legal advice that led Ministers to issue the revised guidance. [54477]

Mr. Boateng: The answer of 21 July 1998 concerned the Department's guidance LAC(98)8, not LAC(98)9. Its purpose was to clarify the legal position which has existed since 1948. The Department's view of the legal provisions is set out in chapter 6 of the publication A New Partnership for Care in Old Age which is available as a command paper 3242 in the Library.

Trust Mergers

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to have concluded his evaluation of the expression of interest submitted by Merton and Sutton, Wandsworth and Roehampton, Twickenham and Richmond community health care trusts in relation to trust mergers. [54019]

Ms Jowell: We shall consider the merits of the proposal carefully before deciding whether public consultation should take place. We hope to be able to reach a decision shortly.

National Service Frameworks

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what timescale his Department is working to in drawing up national service frameworks. [53996]

Mr. Boateng: Each National Service Framework is being developed with the assistance of an expert reference group. The reference groups for coronary heart disease and mental health have begun their work. Their emerging findings will be available in autumn 1998, prior to publication of the National Service Frameworks in Spring 1999. This will enable health authorities, together with their partners, including local authorities, to begin to plan their Health Improvement Programmes for implementation from April 1999.

Departmental Publications

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many of his Department's publications have been made available in (a) Braille, (b) audio tape and (c) large print in 1997–98; and what percentage of the total number of publications this represents. [54268]

Ms Jowell: Publications made available in Braille, audio tape and large print by this Department for 1997–98 are given in the table.

Information on the percentage of the total number of publications this represents in each case could be provided only at a disproportionate cost. The Department does not have a central record of all publications produced.

Purchasing Pilots

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements his Department has made for evaluating the experience and outcomes of total purchasing pilots; and when the findings will be published. [53995]

Mr. Boateng: The total purchasing pilot project has been independently evaluated by a research consortium led by Professor Nick Mays of the King's Fund. An interim report covering the period October 1995 to March 1997 was published by the King's Fund on 7 July 1998 and a final report covering the period up to March 1998 is expected to be published by January 1999.

Continence Services

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 27 July 1998, Official Report, column 94, concerning continence services if he will publish the terms of reference of the review; and if he will make a statement. [54178]

Mr. Boateng: An announcement will be made shortly.

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if his Department will issue interim instructions to health authorities on the provision of continence services before the new guidance is issued; [54833]

(2) if he will ensure that there are no reductions in existing continence services before his Department issues new guidance; [54842]

(3) if he will make a statement on the delays in the review of continence services and the issue of new guidance. [54841]

Ms Jowell: I will be making an announcement about the review of continence services shortly.

Nottingham Health Authority

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he proposes to appoint a new chairman of the Nottingham Health Authority; for how long the post has been left vacant; and for what reasons it has been left vacant since the retirement of Sir David White. [54218]

Mr. Milburn: The regional chairman will shortly be making further recommendations to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the chairmanship of Nottingham Health Authority. This post has been vacant since 1 April 1998 while suitable candidates were identified and interviewed.

Health Authority Board Members

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the health authorities in England and Wales which do not have a general practitioner as a non-executive member of their board. [54895]

Ms Jowell: The 58 health authorities in England which do not have a general medical practitioner as a chairman or non-executive member are listed in the table.

Appointments to Welsh health authorities are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 21 July 1998, Official Report, column 526, on the cost of ensuring millennium compliance throughout the NHS, what factors underlie the discrepancy between the figure given and his Department's earlier estimate of £5.7 million. [54504]

Mr. Boateng: The reason for the discrepancy between the figure given in my Answer of 21 July and the Department's earlier estimate of £5.7 million is that the latter refers only to planned expenditure by the central Department, whereas the former is the total cost to the wider National Health Service of ensuring millennium compliance.

Central Department plans and costs are reported to my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on a quarterly basis. He has arranged for completed questionnaires and a summary to be placed in the Library and published on the internet. A further update by the Department will be available in September.

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 27 July 1998, Official Report, columns 94–99, on millennium compliance, what checks he carried out to ensure that the data provided by trusts and health authorities as at 31 March were accurate; and how those checks accounted for the delays in his answer. [54576]

Mr. Milburn: Further advice was requested from officials on the figures from trusts and health authorities. When this had been provided and considered, a reply was given directly.

Beta-interferon

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the availability of beta-interferon for treatment of people suffering from multiple sclerosis by health authority, indicating for each health authority the budget for beta-interferon expressed in terms of amount per patient with relapsing remitting MS fulfilling the criteria defined in the relevant Department of Health executive letter. [54938]

Mr. Boateng: The information requested is not available. It is not our policy to allocate resources centrally for particular treatments. The costs of prescribing all drugs are met from within health authority allocations, taking account of local priorities. The National Institute for Clinical Effectiveness will in due course provide advice to health authorities to enable more consistent availability across the country.

Sandwell Healthcare NHS Trust

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the relative position of Sandwell Healthcare NHS Trust in England and Wales in terms of (a) management costs as a percentage of total budget, (b) percentage of surgical cases handled as day cases and (c) costs per completed consultant episode. [53735]

Mr. Boateng: In 1997–98, the planned management costs for Sandwell Healthcare National Health Service Trust were £3.7 million, 5.2 per cent. of their trust income. Total trust management costs for England were planned to be £1.2 billion, 5.1 per cent. of total trust income in England.

In 1996–97 (latest available figures), the Trust treated 69.1 per cent. of its elective surgical admissions as day cases, compared to 53.7 per cent. nationally.

In 1996–97 (latest available) the average cost per Finished Consultant Episode was £850 for the trust. Nationally the average was £1,120.

Rough Sleepers Initiatives

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which health authorities in England have dedicated resources for initiatives relating to the problem of rough sleeping; how much they spent in the last year for which figures are available; and on what projects. [52428]

Mr. Boateng: The information requested is not available centrally.

However, since 1994–95, funding for five of the six multi-disciplinary community psychiatric outreach teams which form one strand of the Government's Homeless Mentally Ill Initiative (HMII) has been included in the Thames health authorities' regional allocations. In 1994–95, this funding amounted to some £1.76 million. Additionally, in 1998–99, the East London and City Health Authority is allocating £10,000 towards the costs of the HART HMII outreach team. City and Hackney Community Services NHS Trust also contributes some £5,000 towards HART's costs.

The Department has approved non cash-limited funding of £558,000 in 1998–99 for twenty eight primary care projects for homeless people. These projects are designed to help meet the health care needs of the entire range of homeless people, including rough sleepers.

Staff Turnover

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the staff turnover rates for each NHS trust for people employed in posts (a) ancillary and maintenance, (b) medical and dental, (c) nursing and midwifery, (d) professional and technical and (e) administrative, clerical and managerial posts; and what were the equivalent figures for each of the last five years. [54615]

Ms Jowell: The information requested is not collected centrally. For the information that is available on turnover of staff in the National Health Service, I refer the hon. Member to the reports of the Review Body for Nursing staff, Midwives and Health Visitors, copies of which are in the Library.

Sickness Absence

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the current rates of sickness absence in each health trust for people employed in (a) ancillary and maintenance, (b) medical and dental, (c) nursing and midwifery, (d) professional and technical and (e) administrative, clerical and managerial posts; and what were the equivalent figures for each of the last five years. [54612]

Ms Jowell: Statistics of the incidence of ill-health among the National Health Service workforce are not collected centrally. Guidance has been issued to help NHS managers locally to collect and act upon sickness absence data.

Hearing Aids

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will take steps to (a) monitor the level of NHS hearing aids that go unused after being provided by adult audiology and hearing aid services and (b) increase the level of use of NHS hearing aids amongst current owners; [54426]

(2) what assessment he has made of the level of customer satisfaction from users of NHS adult audiology and hearing aid services; [54425]

(3) what assessment his Department has made of the level of awareness amongst NHS hearing aid users of the role and benefits of the T switch on hearing aids. [54427]

Mr. Boateng: The type of hearing aid provided under the National Health Service is a matter for the clinician concerned, in consultation with the patient. A central unit of the NHS Supplies Authority negotiates contracts with manufacturers for the supply of a standard range of NHS hearing aids which meet the needs of the majority of patients. It is for hearing aid centres to purchase and supply an alternative model if the clinician considers that it is clinically necessary for an individual patient. The NHS does not directly monitor the number of hearing aids that are not used, but independent research suggests that a significant number of hearing aids may not be used or are not used effectively.

We do not have any plans to commission research into customer satisfaction of audiology services at the moment.

The Departmental publication "How to use your hearing aid" which is extremely popular with audiology service users, includes a chapter on using the T position on the control switch of hearing aids.

Hospital Discharges

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department is taking to reduce the number of delayed discharges from hospitals of patients who are awaiting social services funding or assessment. [54638]

Mr. Boateng: The Department is undertaking a number of relevant activities. Part of the £269 million additional funding for the National Health Service in England which was announced last October is aimed at reducing delayed discharges and some of the money was transferred to social services for this purpose. For 1998–99, the special transitional grant for community care services has a condition attached to it that some funds should be invested in services with the objective of improving procedures for needs assessment, hospital discharge arrangements and preventing unnecessary admission to hospital or residential or nursing home care.

Part of the £417 million additional funding announced in the budget is aimed at tackling NHS waiting lists by improving primary, community, mental health and social services. The Department's inspectors are routinely involved in an active programme of monitoring local authorities' hospital discharge arrangements and will be publishing a report shortly. Our Better Services for Vulnerable People initiative requires health and local authorities to develop joint investment plans, recuperation and rehabilitation services for older people and improved procedures for multidisciplinary assessment of older people. Our review of hospital discharge guidance will include consideration of how we can resolve the difficulties around delayed discharge.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list by region the number of delayed discharge patients currently occupying hospital beds who are awaiting social services funding or assessment. [54637]

Ms Jowell: Information is not available in the format requested. However, information is available on the number of people aged 75 and over ready for discharge, but still occupying an acute hospital bed because they are awaiting completion of assessment or local authority funding. The most recent information is provided in the table.

Hospital Maintenance

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list by NHS region the hospital maintenance backlog on 1 July. [53295]

Mr. Milburn: Information about backlog maintenance as at 1 July 1998 is not available. The latest available figures relate to the year ended March 1997, and are as follows:

Northern and Yorkshire	389,804

2. Condition B is broadly defined as 'sound, operationally safe, and exhibits only minor deterioration'
3. The figures for the year 1997–98 will be available in November 1998

Waiting Lists

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what changes his Department has made to the criteria for assessing numbers of patients on (a) in-patient and (b) out-patient waiting lists; and if he will publish the (i) current and (ii) previous criteria. [53316]

Mr. Milburn: No changes have been made to the criteria for the assessment of numbers on National Health Service in-patient and out-patient waiting lists. Guidance is set out in the NHS Executive's Data Manual (published in January 1997), the NHS Waiting Times Good Practice Guide and Guidelines for Good Administrative Practice (both published in January 1996). Copies of which are available in the Library.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the validity and accuracy of the waiting list initiative results submitted to the NHS Executive for the last three quarters. [53317]

Mr. Milburn: Waiting list data are subject to well established validation and checking processes.

Operations (Cancellation)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library figures (a) by health authority and (b) overall on the number of operations cancelled on the day of, or the day after, admission to a hospital, and the numbers of those patients not readmitted within a month, by quarter, for each of the last three years. [53318]

Mr. Milburn: Copies of Quarterly Statistics on Cancelled Operations by Health Authorities for 1997/98 and information for earlier years are available in the Library.

NHS Staff

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total number of (a) NHS clerical, administrative and management staff, (b) NHS hospital doctors and GPs and (c) NHS nurses and midwives in each year since 1995. [53299]

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total number of (a) NHS clerical, administrative and management staff, (b) NHS hospital doctors and general practitioners and (c) NHS nurses and midwives in each year since 1995. [53291]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested can be found in the Department's statistical bulletins: "Hospital, Public Health Medicine and Community Health Service Medical and Dental Staff in England: 1986 to 1996" (the latest year for which information is available), "Statistics for General Medical Practitioners in England: 1987 to 1997" and "NHS Hospital and Community Health Services Non-medical Staff in England: 1987 to 1997", copies of which are available in the Library.

NHS Salaries

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the amount spent on salaries and wages costs for (a) general and senior managers,

(b) nurses and midwives and (c) administrative and clerical staff by NHS region for each financial year from 1991–92 to 1997–98. [53296]

Mr. Milburn: Copies of the information requested have been placed in the Library. Figures for 1997–98 are not yet available.

NHS Consultants

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much (a) his Department, (b) the NHS and (c) his Department's agencies spent on external consultants in each year since 1995. [53330]

Ms Jowell: Expenditure by the Department of Health, its agencies, and the National Health Service[1] since 1995 is as follows:

Year	DH £ million	NHS trusts £ million	Health Authorities £000	Agencies £ million
1994–95	18.469	68.326	[2]59.302	2.331
1995–96	18.504	89.369	[2]77.982	2.096
1996–97	[3]14.518	107.152	21.698	1.582
1997–98	[3]11.848	[4]—	[4]—	1.632

[1] Information on consultants is not collected separately for the NHS but is included in information on external contract staffing and consultancy

[2] Includes figures for Regional Health Authorities

[3] Includes figures for Regional Offices of the NHS Executive, which became part of the Department of Health in April 1996

[4] Not yet available

Note:

Part of the explanation for the apparently decreasing trend in Departmental and agency expenditure is the adoption of a new definition of consultancy, agreed by Ministers during 1997–98 and implemented in-year

Hospital Output Measures

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what financial penalties will be imposed on hospitals which fail to meet their target output measures. [54950]

Mr. Boateng: We expect health authorities (and in due course Primary Care Groups) increasingly to develop service agreements with National Health Service trusts which include appropriate incentives and sanctions to reward good performance and support improvement where necessary.

Health Statistics

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the Green Paper, Cm 3805, "New Ambitions for our Country: A New Contract for Welfare", page 83, what assessment he has made of the health of the population as a whole in terms of (a) longevity and (b) years free of illness, at present and as at April 1997 and March 1998. [54605]

Ms Jowell: No data on longevity or on years free of illness are available for the present moment in time or for April 1997 or March 1998. The most recent data on expectation of life at birth in England and Wales are based on an average of 1994, 1995 and 1996 and are 74.4 years for males and 79.6 years for females. The most recent estimates available for the average expectation of life free of self-reported limiting long-standing illness are for 1994 and are 59.2 years in males and 62.2 years in females. The latter figures were presented in the "Our Healthier Nation" Green Paper published in February 1998.

Ambulance Ages

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 27 July 1998, Official Report, column 98, if he will provide a breakdown of the estimated cost of his informal assessment of ambulance ages. [54223]

Mr. Boateng: The breakdown of the estimated costs of the informal assessment is £2,245 for staff time and £22 for fax and telephone charges.

Ambulance Services

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many ambulance services are currently meeting the standard that life threatening emergencies receive a response in less than eight minutes on 75 per cent. of all occasions; and if he will list those services which currently (a) meet, and (b) fail to meet this standard. [53076]

Mr. Boateng: At present ambulance services are expected to reach 95 per cent. of all emergency calls within 14 minutes (urban services) and 19 minutes (rural services). In 1997–98 27 out of 37 ambulance services in England reached this standard. Full details are in the Departmental publication, Ambulance Services, England 1997–98, copies of which are available in the Library.

By the year 2000–01 ambulance services in England will also be expected to reach 75 per cent. of life-threatening calls within eight minutes. In 1997–98 only Staffordshire Ambulance Service achieved this standard.

Public Register

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the public registers which his Department have responsibility for. [47352]

Mr. Milburn [holding answer 29 June 1998]: The Department does not have responsibility for any registers which it is required to make public.

Health Services Accreditation

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what is the time scale for the disposal of Health Services Accreditation; [48680]

(2) what criteria will be used to judge the best offer for Health Services Accreditation; [48685]

(3) how many expressions of interest in Health Services Accreditation had been received by the closing date for application; [48683]

(4) what is the process to be used for the disposal of Health Services Accreditation. [48684]

Mr. Boateng: Health Service Guidelines "NHS Trading Agencies: Future Arrangements" HSG 94/54, copies of which are available in the Library, are being applied to judge the best offer and to dispose of Health Services Accreditation. This says "the objective should be to ensure the best long-term value for money for the NHS".

The date for the receipt of formal proposals from interested organisations was 30 June 1998. The evaluation panel met for the first time in mid-July to consider these proposals and agree a timetable for the disposal of Health Services Accreditation. Prior to the closing date, 32 expressions of interest had been received of which 5 have proceeded to formal proposals.

Correspondence

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many letters per day his office receives; how many staff are employed to answer these; what targets are set in respect of such letters; and what is the current performance against targets. [50688]

Ms Jowell: Currently 11 members of staff are employed solely to deal with correspondence addressed to Ministers, although others provide draft replies as part of their normal duties. With regard to the volume of correspondence received and targets met in respect of that correspondence, I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary on 20 July 1998, Official Record, column 363.

Women's Issues

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the answer of 24 June 1998, Official Report, column 557–58, prior to 18 May, what mechanisms were used to determine how legislation passed in the current session would affect women; what consultation he had with women's organisations; and if he will make a statement. [49085]

Ms Jowell: We actively consult a wide variety of stakeholders including those who have particular expertise on gender related issues, as legislative proposals for health and social services are developed.

Furthermore, the Cabinet sub committee on women's issues, of which I am a member, reviews and develops the Government's policy and strategy on issues of special concern to women.

Carers

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the number of people in the United Kingdom who will be caring for parents and children or parents and grandchildren in 2015 by gender, age and employment status of carer; and if he will make a statement. [54161]

Mr. Boateng: As part of my work on the National Carers Strategy, I shall be considering whether, and if so on what basis, to make projections of future numbers of informal carers.

Asylum Seekers

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the special grants made to each London borough in 1997–98 for the reimbursement of costs incurred in the support of adult asylum seekers, their children and families and unaccompanied asylum seekers, stating in each case the amounts of grant (a) paid, (b) claimed and (c) paid as a percentage of the total claimed in England and Wales. [49438]

Ms Jowell: The following tables show the amount of special grants paid to each London Borough in 1997/98 and the percentage of the total claimed as a percentage of the total claimed in England. The figures requested for Wales are a matter for my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Wales.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Degree Courses

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the progress of the Government's policy on increasing the proportion of the population taking a first degree. [54503]

Mr. Mudie: The Government have demonstrated their commitment to the principle that anyone who has the capability for higher education should have the opportunity to benefit from it through the expenditure plans announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 15 July 1998, Official Report, column 411–13. These will allow for some 35,000 extra full-time and part-time students in higher education in England in the academic year 1999–2000 and will give scope for widening access to higher education and increasing the proportion of the population taking a first degree or other undergraduate course. Further details will be announced in due course.

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is his estimate of how many United Kingdom students will start degree courses in England and Wales in September; and how many started in (a) 1997 and (b) 1996. [54502]

Mr. Mudie: The information for 1996 and 1997 is given in the table:

Home entrants[1] to undergraduate courses in Higher Education Institutions
England and Wales

	Full-time	Part-time	Total

[1] Figures exclude the Open University because changes to the way their data are reported between the two years would otherwise distort the comparisons
[2] Provisional

The Department does not publish forecasts of entrants to higher education. It is therefore too early to say how many students will start a degree course in September 1998.

School Inspectors

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many HM school inspectors were appointed in the years (a) 1996, (b) 1997 and (c) 1998 to date; and how many of those appointed were previously (i) headteachers, (ii) deputy head teachers and (iii) teachers. [54934]

Ms Estelle Morris: This is a matter for HM Chief Inspector of Schools. I have asked him to write to the hon. Member and to place a copy of his letter in the Library.

Nansfield School, Brierfield

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the anticipated cost of the Ofsted inspection of Nansfield school, Brierfield, to be carried out in August; and how many inspectors will be involved. [54436]

Ms Estelle Morris: That is a matter for HM Chief Inspector, Chris Woodhead. I have asked him to write to my hon. Friend and to place a copy of his letter in the Library.

Teachers

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the minimum pay of a newly qualified teacher relative to the average salary for newly qualified graduates. [54501]

Ms Estelle Morris: The minimum starting pay of a newly qualified teacher with a good honours degree as at 1 December 1998 will be £15,012 (£17,178 in Inner London). The median salary in 1998 for newly qualified graduates covered by the latest survey of the Association of Graduate Recruiters is £16,500.

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many teachers are currently employed in England; and how many were in each of the last five years. [54560]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The full time equivalent number of teachers employed in maintained nursery, primary, secondary, and special schools, pupil referral units and education elsewhere in England in January 1998, and in January in each of the previous five years, is shown in the following table.

thousand

Year	Number
1993[1]	415.6
1994	409.3
1995	411.8
1996	412.4
1997	412.8
1998[2]	411.4

[2] 1998 data are provisional

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the reasons given by teachers for leaving their profession prior to normal retirement age; and if he will publish them. [54486]

Mr. Charles Clarke: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has made no such assessment.

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the availability of trained teachers to meet the planned expansion of education provision. [54485]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The supply of an adequate number of well-trained and well-motivated teachers is central to our aim to raise standards in schools.

We set each year targets for the number of trainees who need to enter initial teacher training courses in order to meet the future demand for newly qualified teachers. The calculations take account of the likely demand in future years—including any changes resulting from current education initiatives, such as measures to reduce infant class sizes or improve the provision for under-fives. Details of the process by which targets are set may be found in the recent DfEE publication "Teacher Supply and Demand Modelling: A technical description", a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

Policies are expected to have a greater effect upon the demand for primary teachers than upon that for secondary teachers. The targets for recruitment to primary training courses have been exceeded in each of the last 10 years.

We will be reviewing recruitment targets in the autumn and will issue targets for courses starting in 1999/2000.

Schools (Computers)

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement about the availability of computers in schools ; and what plans he has (a) to replace obsolete machines and (b) to increase the number of computers in schools. [54495]

Mr. Mudie: Over £100m of additional financial support is being provided to schools through the Standards Fund in 1998–99 to help improve information and communications technology. This will contribute substantially to the replacement of obsolete equipment and increasing the numbers of computers in schools.

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to provide funds for additional staff to assist teachers to maintain and operate schools' computers. [54496]

Mr. Mudie: Schools are currently free to enter maintenance contracts with their specialist suppliers. Schools may also deploy some of the £100 million of expenditure being made available in 1998–99 for the National Grid for Learning to provide teachers with basic technical training on the use of computers. In addition, an Initial Teacher Training National Curriculum in Information and Communications Technology will commence this September, and some £230 million pounds will be allocated from National Lottery sources over the next four years for the retraining of serving teachers in these new technologies. Advice on maintenance and other aspects of schools' Information and Communication Technology will be available from Local Authority subject advisers and the British Educational Communications and Technology agency.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many networked computers are currently in use in schools in England and Wales. [54129]

Mr. Mudie: Evidence of the number of computers in schools in England which are connected to an internal network will be published later this year as part of the Department's statistical survey of ICT in schools. Educational matters in Wales are the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Ministerial Meetings

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many meetings Ministers have had with Manpower since 1 February; and on what matters. [54492]

Mr. Mudie: Ministers, their Special Advisers and other civil servants meet many people in the course of their work. This properly includes meetings with interest groups outside Government. This liaison is intended to help Ministers draw upon outside contributions—from academics, think-tanks, trade and industry associations, private sector organisations, trade unions and others, as well as relevant experience from other countries—during the process of policy analysis and development. But they must observe the requirements of propriety: for instance they must not provide confidential information without authorisation, or allow improper influence on policy. It is not our policy to make information on meetings or their content public.

University Students (Computers)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he is taking to ensure that all university students have relevant computer skills before they commence their course. [54688]

Mr. Mudie: The requirements for university entry are a matter for the individual institutions to decide.

The Government recognise however the importance of key skills, including IT skills, and want to move as soon as possible to a position where they are a normal part of everyone's post-16 education and training. The Qualifications and Curriculum Authority is currently piloting a single key skills qualification in schools which includes IT as a constituent element.

The Department has also been encouraging universities and their admission tutors to consider a wider set of qualifications and skills, such as IT, than those traditionally considered for entry. One such initiative is the UCAS Tarif Project, which has received substantial Government funding and whose proposals have been considered and supported by Minsters in principle.

In addition, the Department is funding a number of development projects working with universities to explore and promote the acquisition of key skills (including IT) as part of university study.

Green Transport

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his answer of 27 March 1998, Official Report, column 343, on departmental transport arrangements, what further changes he has made. [54006]

Mr. Mudie: The Department is working towards the target announced in the White Paper 'A New Deal for Transport', that all headquarters buildings and main buildings occupied by Executive Agencies and Government Offices for the Regions should have green transport plans by March 1999 and all other key buildings by March 2000.

The DfEE expect to have a green transport plan in place for its main buildings by late autumn 1998.

The DfEE is currently investigating alternative fuels for use in its official vehicles. A liquefied petroleum gas (LPG) car has been ordered for use by the Secretary of State.

All DfEE main sites took part in the National Cycle Week as part of the programme to raise staff awareness.

School Sports

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what guidelines his Department has issued on the minimum number of sports which schools should offer. [54654]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Physical education must be taught to all children throughout their compulsory schooling. The National Curriculum for physical education consists of six areas of activity and schools have a degree of freedom in deciding which activities to teach.

The Department does not issue guidelines on which sports schools should offer. However, primary schools are required to teach swimming; and secondary schools must teach competitive team and individual games.

Pre-school Education

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the number of pre-school education places in Gloucestershire to be commissioned by local authorities from registered partner providers in the voluntary and private sectors in the academic year 1998–99. [54646]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Gloucestershire's Early Years Development Plan for 1998–99, which was approved by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State in March, offers a free place for every eligible four-year-old in the local authority area. The Plan estimates that 273 places will be in the private, independent and voluntary sectors in the autumn term 1998, 2,109 in the spring term 1999, and 4,394 in the summer term 1999.

Employment Service

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people are currently employed by the Employment Service; how many there were two years ago; and what is his forecast of the number that will be employed in two years' time. [54497]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Ian Bruce, dated 31 July 1998:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State for Education and Employment has asked me to reply direct to your question which asks the number of people currently employed by the Employment Service, how many there were two years ago and what the forecast number will be in two years time. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

On 1 July the Employment Service employed 33,607 people; on 1 July 1996 the number employed was 41,820. Staffing for future years will be determined nearer the time according to our business needs.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much his Department spent on training Employment Service staff in cash terms and as a percentage of the costs of running the service in 1997–98; and what are his plans for 1998–99. [54498]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Ian Bruce, dated 31 July 1998:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State has asked me to reply direct to your questions concerning the costs of training Employment Service staff. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

In 1997–98, the Employment Service invested £12.8 million in the delivery and support of training for its staff. This represented 1.4 per cent. of the Agency's total running costs.

These costs do not include the salary, travel and subsistence costs of staff while receiving training. These are estimated at a further £11.8 million.

For 1998–99, we plan to invest approximately £12 million in the training and development of our staff. This is likely, again to represent 1.4 per cent. of the Agency's total running costs. We project that a further £10.7 million will be spent on the salary, travel and subsistence costs of staff while receiving training.

I hope this is helpful.

Grammar Schools

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations he has received on the proposed balloting arrangements for grammar schools; and if he will raise the threshold to trigger a ballot to 25 per cent. of school registered parents. [54935]

Ms Estelle Morris: The deadline for responses on the draft grammar school ballot regulations is today. As at 30 July, 196 responses had been received. All responses will be analysed and we will be considering carefully the points raised before laying the regulations before Parliament. This includes determining the appropriate threshold for petitions.

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many United Kingdom pupils were in (a) private education, (b) state education and (c) funded under the assisted places scheme in each of the last five years. [54484]

Ms Estelle Morris: The available information for pupils in the United Kingdom is shown in the table.

thousand

	Private education	State education	Assisted places scheme[1]
1992–93	612.9	8,900.3	32.4
1993–94	607.7	8,963.3	33.0
1994–95	607.5	9,106.1	33.5
1995–96	609.4	9,207.0	33.7
1996–97	615.9	9,291.0	37.6

Advanced Skills Teachers

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) if he will list the procedures for the assessment and identification of advanced skills teachers; [52990]

(2) who will be responsible for identifying teachers to be appointed as advanced skills teachers. [52991]

Ms Estelle Morris: It is for schools to create Advanced Skills Teacher posts and identify candidates to fill those posts. Before a candidate can be appointed to an AST post, he or she must undergo an assessment against national standards appropriate to the best teachers. The assessors are suitably qualified persons employed by Westminster Education Consultants. The assessors are responsible for confirming that candidates are suitable for AST status; the schools may then appoint such candidates to AST posts.

Local Government Finance, Dorset

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much Dorset County Council spent on education relative to the Government's standard spending assessment level in 1997–98; and if he will revise the standard spending assessment to reflect this. [54499]

Ms Estelle Morris: Dorset's financial returns indicate that it spent some £14.5 million (12.4 per cent.) above the level of its education SSA in 1997–98. We are reviewing the education SSA formula to make it fairer for 1999–2000, but it would be wrong to use individual LEA patterns of spending directly in the formula, since they are not independent of local authority policies.

Special Needs

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what date has been set for publication of the Government's proposals on special educational needs following the recent consultation exercise on the Government's paper, "Excellence for All Children". [54040]

Mr. Charles Clarke: A date has not yet been set. Taking account of the many thoughtful comments on "Excellence for all Children", and of advice from the National Advisory Group on special educational needs, we expect to publish an action programme in the early autumn.

School Finances

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many head teachers have been (a) suspended and then reinstated and (b) dismissed following investigations of financial irregularities concerning their school's finances in each year since 1987; and how many were subsequently convicted of a criminal offence. [54435]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Of the information requested (a) is not collected centrally, and (b) could be provided only at disproportionate cost, since manual searches through individual records would be required.

University Research

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what recent representations he has received concerning the system of dual funding for research in universities; and what plans he has to change the system; [47048]

(2) what assessment he has made of the efficiency and effectiveness of the dual funding system for university research; and if he will make a statement. [47049]

Mr. Mudie: The outcome of the Comprehensive Spending Review has demonstrated the Government's commitment to invest in strengthening the science base and modernise the UK's research performance through the dual support system, while ensuring that the Higher Education Funding Councils and the Research Councils work closely together to deliver better value for money and transparency in the use of research funds. Over the three years up to 2001–02, an additional £1.4 billion will be provided for research, including £1.1 billion through the science budget and the Wellcome Trust and a further £0.3 billion to support universities' research through the Higher Education Funding Council for England. This additional investment responds to the concerns expressed by the National Committee of Inquiry into Higher Education (the Dearing Committee) about research infrastructure in universities and to the conclusion by that Committee, which was endorsed in the responses to consultation on the Committee's report and more recently by the House of Commons Science and Technology Committee, that the dual support system should remain in place.

Miners' Retraining

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the training programmes to support miners to retrain for employment in other industries since 1979. [49354]

Mr. Battle: I have been asked to reply.

Between 1979 and 1984, training programmes were not offered to miners because many of those affected by colliery closures either took early redundancy or were relocated at another colliery. From 1984 to 1988, miners who left the industry and wished to receive training for alternative employment received funding for such training from the British Coal Corporation. From 1988 to 1994, miners were able to attend centres run by British Coal Enterprise (BCE), a subsidiary company of the British Coal Corporation and discuss their training needs with qualified job consultants.

In cases where there was a reasonable chance of job-specific or skills enhancement training resulting in successful employment, then such training was funded by BCE. There was no definitive list of training courses available. At privatisation at the end of 1994, training programmes for miners seeking employment in other industries are the responsibility of the private coal companies. However, this Government will provide assistance to mining communities through Welfare to Work and other schemes, and to specific projects through the Single Regeneration Budget. EU funding is also available through EU Structural Funds which provide financial assistance that supports training and retraining in coalfield areas via RECHAR programmes. Moreover, training programmes are provided through the Department for Education and Employment, and are available to ex-miners who satisfy the eligibility criteria. These programmes include Employment Training and Training for Work. Support is also available under the New Deal. In addition, the Government have recently received the report of the Coalfields Taskforce. They have warmly welcomed the report and have promised positive action to follow up the recommendations. The Government wish to see regeneration in all areas of need, regardless of the date of collier closures.

New Deal

Mr. Healey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people his Department is committed to employing during 1998 under (a) the subsidised job option and (b) the unsubsidised job option of the New Deal programme. [52589]

Mr. Mudie: During this year the wider Education and Employment Department comprising the DfEE Headquarters and the Employment Service aim to recruit up to 320 subsidised New Deal Participants.

In addition we expect that a number of unsubsidised participants will be recruited during or after the Gateway stage through the normal recruitment channels via fair and open competition.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people, by Employment Service region, are (a) refusing to participate in the New Deal and (b) have had their jobseeker's allowance sanctioned as a consequence of refusal. [52549]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The total number of sanctions to be included in the quarterly analysis of Adjudication Office decisions for the period 30 June 1998 is 68, for:

failing to attend a place on a New Deal opportunity, giving up a place on a New Deal opportunity without good cause, or losing a place on a New Deal opportunity through misconduct,

as follows:

Employment Service Region	Number of Sanctions
London and South East	6
East Midlands and Eastern	3
South West	3
West Midlands	8
Yorkshire and the Humber	12
North West	8
Northern	12
Wales	9
Scotland	7
Great Britain Total	68

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many young people to date have been sanctioned under the New Deal for the young unemployed. [54122]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The total number of sanctions to be included in the quarterly analysis of Adjudication Office decisions for the period 30 June 1998 is 68, for:

failing to attend a place on a New Deal opportunity, giving up a place on a New Deal opportunity without good cause, or losing a place on a New Deal opportunity through misconduct.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he expects the first figures and results of the New Deal 25 Plus to be available; and if he will publish them. [54123]

Mr. Andrew Smith: We are only a month into the New Deal 25+ and it is too soon to report on actual or likely take-up of opportunities. The Government Statistical Service will publish the first robust and reliable statistics, covering the period July-September, in December. I am considering whether it will be possible to make provisional management information available earlier than that; and will do so if I can.

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what has been to date the unit cost for each trainee in the New Deal Gateway. [54191]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The amount spent on each participant in the Gateway depends on their individual needs and the amount of time they spend on the Gateway. It is too early to give an accurate average cost for participants.

Asbestos

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what guidance his Department issues to those constructing buildings for which it is responsible on the use of materials containing asbestos. [52313]

Mr. Mudie: Any construction contracts let by DfEE prohibit the use of asbestos. The most recent such contract for Castle View House, Runcorn ensured that no asbestos was used in the construction.

Guidance on use of asbestos in buildings is contained in the PACE property management guidance. Health and Safety Executive publications and the Control of Asbestos at Work Regulations 1987.

Domestic Violence

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will evaluate the cost to his Department arising from violence within families; and if he will make a statement. [52441]

Mr. Mudie: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Home Department on 29 July 1998, Official Report, column 258.

Grants and Loans

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the names of the non-statutory organisations or bodies in receipt of section 17 grants or loans from his Department in 1997–98 and 1998–99, stating in each case (a) the amount, (b) whether a grant or loan, and (c) the purpose of making the grant or loan. [48645]

Ms Estelle Morris: Regulation 17 of the Education (Grant) Regulations 1983 has been superseded by Regulation 15 of the Education (Grant) Regulation 1990. Grants made under the Education (Grant) Regulations 1990 in 1997–98 and 1998–99 and their purpose, are shown in a table, copies of which have been placed in the Library.

Departmental Vehicles

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list for (a) the Department and (b) bodies listed in the National Asset Register how many vehicles are currently (i) owned and (ii) leased; if he will indicate their (1) fuel types and (2) engine cubic capacities; and how many vehicles are expected to fall due for replacement in each of the years 1998–99, 1999–2000 and 2000–01. [49222]

Mr. Mudie: The information provided below is in respect of vehicles owned and leased by the DfEE, its Non Departmental Public Bodies (NDPBs) and the Employment Service Agency (ES).

Currently 1,316 vehicles owned and 493 vehicles leased, 900 of which are petrol and 909 diesel.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his answer of 28 July 1998, Official Report, column 143, concerning vehicle replacement, what guidance he has issued concerning the replacement policy for the vehicle fleet. [54480]

Teachers' Pay

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much money has been provided in the budget for his Department set out in the Comprehensive Spending Review for performance related pay for teachers in (a) 2000–01 and (b) 2001–02. [52254]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 27 July 1998]: The £19 billion additional resources for education announced by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 12 June to allow for an investment in modernisation. A Green Paper will be published before the end of the year on the Future of the Teaching Profession. Decisions on teachers pay which may result from those consultations will be taken at a later stage.

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what advice he will give to the independent review body on teachers' salaries. [54500]

Ms Estelle Morris: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will write in the near future to give the School Teachers' Review Body its remit for the 1999–2000 pay round, and will follow this up with detailed evidence and representations in September. The Review Body's terms of reference will be consistent with those published in paragraph 4.23 of the White Paper Modern Public Services for Britain (Cm 4011).

School Standards and Framework Bill

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) when he intends to publish the regulations provided for in Clauses (a) 9 , (b) 12, (c) 1 and 3, (d) 23, (e) 21, (f) 26, (g) 25, (h) 27, (i) 32, (j) 37, (k) 40, (l) 41, (m) 42, (n) 43 and (o) 64 of the School Standards and Framework Bill (HL 94); [52568]

(2) when he intends to publish the regulations provided in Clauses (a) 68, (b) 69, (c) 84, (d) 85, (e) 86, (f) 87, (g) 88, (h) 93, (i) 99, (j) 100, (k) 102, (l) 107 and (m) 120 of the School Standards and Framework Bill. [52570]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answers 27 July 1998]: It is not possible to give precise details of the timing of publication of regulations at this stage. The Government will make sure that all relevant parties are kept fully informed of how and when they will be affected by the various sets of regulations.

Information Technology

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much his Department spent on IT itemising (a) personal computers, (b) main-frame, (c) mini-computers and (d) file servers in the last year for which figure are available. [52880]

Mr. Mudie: My Department has spent the following amounts on buying new IT products in the 1997–98 financial year:

Department For Education and Employment Head Office: £5.06 million made up of Personal Computers (including portable computers): £4.08 million

Mainframe: £0.03 million

Servers (including mini-computers): £0.95 million

Employment Service

The majority of purchases of these items were as part of projects which also included the purchase of other products and services, such as printers and installation or configuration. It is not possible to isolate the spend on these items. The Employment Service total capital spend on buying IT was £11 million for 1997–98.

Accountancy Qualifications

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment for what reasons funds are made available to further and higher education institutions to support students studying towards AAT, CIMA, ACCA and ACA qualifications. [52243]

Mr. Mudie [holding answer 28 July 1998]: Funds are made available to support students studying for accountancy qualifications on the same basis as for other professional qualifications.

LEAs (Performance Results)

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will ensure that the publication of performance results for local education authorities includes information about the number of schools covered and indicates clearly when schools covered have changed because of a temporary closure. [52993]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 28 July 1998]: There are no plans to list in school performance tables, schools which may have closed since the previous year's tables were published. However, where a secondary school opens during the academic year in question, this is made clear in that year's tables.

Teachers (Time Off)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what guidance his Department has issued to schools and local education authorities on the granting of time off to school teachers who are also local councillors in respect of their council duties. [52975]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 28 July 1998]: Guidance in the Department's Circular 13/89 (paragraph 36) makes clear that this is one of the activities for which teachers must be allowed to take reasonable time off work.

Personal, Social and Health Education Advisory Group

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what resources his Department has given to the Advisory Group on Personal, Social and Health Education in Schools. [52742]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 28 July 1998]: The Department has provided the National Advisory Group on Personal, Social and Health Education in Schools with accommodation and administrative support for their meetings. The members of the Advisory Group and those of its Expert Panel of Advisers have been reimbursed for the travel and other expenses they have incurred in attending meetings.

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the work of the Advisory Group on Personal, Social and Health Education in Schools since its inception. [52743]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 28 July 1998]: The National Advisory Group on Personal, Social and Health Education in Schools has met four times since it was established in May. It will provide initial advice in September on a national framework for Personal, Social and Health Education in schools. The curriculum aspects of this advice will be considered by the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority in the context of the review of the National Curriculum.

Parent Education

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) if he will list the schools which (a) he has visited and (b) plans to visit which have parent education programmes to develop relationship skills and improve children's behaviour and achievements in the classroom; and if he will make a statement; [52739]

(2) if he will list the parent education programmes receiving Government financial support and the amounts of the awards since 1 May 1997; [52740]

(3) what funding priority is given to supporting parent education programmes that have been established for four years or more; [52741]

(4) what assessment he has made of the value of extending parent education to (a) all families and (b) families with recognised difficulties. [52745]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 28 July 1998]: In the Education White Paper "Excellence in schools" (Cm 3681), my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State emphasises the important role parents have in helping their children learn. There are many exemplary local projects aimed at developing parenting skills and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is always eager to learn about these whenever he visits schools.

Since May 1997, the Department has contributed some £84,000 to the Community Education and Development Centre Share project which supports parents in helping their children at home with early reading, writing and maths. In addition, we are funding a joint National Stepfamily Association/Parentline project to provide training courses for their helpers on ways in which parents and the wider extended family can support and promote children's learning.

The Government are also committed to extending the Family Literacy Initiative and are giving £4 million to support it in this financial year. This Initiative enables parents and their children to learn literacy skills in small, intensive courses run in co-operation with local schools. There are currently 600 courses in 126 LEAs reaching around 6,000 parents and their children. An independent evaluation by the National Foundation for Educational Research has shown the Initiative to be effective in assisting both children and parents to improve their literacy skills.

The Sure Start programme, announced on 15 July by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, will include the provision of parent education, among other services, to all families in areas of deprivation. Some of the pilot phase of Early Excellence Centres also offers parent education.

My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State will be closely involved in the establishment of the new Family and Parenting Institute announced on 23 July by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Home Department. This Institute will be funded by Government to increase the profile of parenting and encourage the development of support for all parents.

Bedfordshire County Council

Ms Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will assess the level of education provision made by Bedfordshire County Council. [53003]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 28 July 1998]: A recent Ofsted/Audit Commission inspection of Bedfordshire LEA found that overall the LEA provided effective support in contributing to improvements in the quality of education. The report also confirmed that the authority had a high level of surplus school places. The LEA is currently undertaking a review to identify the scope for reducing surplus capacity.

School Closures

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assistance his Department makes available to schools which have to accommodate increased numbers as a result of the temporary closure of a nearby school. [52992]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 28 July 1998]: The Department has no specific programme of assistance to schools in the general circumstances described. Where proposals are published to close a school and fall to the Secretary of State for decision, the effects on other schools are among the factors taken into account by the Department before a decision is made. However, funding for those other schools depends on the terms of the local management of schools scheme for the LEA concerned. Where capital building work is the issue, LEAs can apply to this Department for support in the form of Supplementary Credit Approvals. However, resources are very limited and all requests are considered alongside other competing claims.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the Government's policy on temporary school closures; and what advice his Department has given to local education authorities on such closures. [52995]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 28 July 1998]: Where proposals to close schools and establish new schools in the premises fall to the Secretary of State to decide under current legislation, they are considered on their individual merits, in the light of the circumstances of each case and of objections received. The Department has not given any specific advice to local education authorities on such closures.

Christ's School

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he has received a proposal from the London Borough of Richmond to close Christ's School in the Borough and reopen it after a 12 month period. [52994]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 28 July 1998]: No proposal has been received from the London Borough of Richmond in respect of Christ's School.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list for Christ's School in the London Borough of Richmond (a) the number of pupils on roll at the beginning of the summer term 1998, (b) the boroughs of residence of the pupils and (c) the ethnic minority communities from which pupils are drawn. [52997]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 28 July 1998]: Information on pupils in schools at the beginning of the summer term is not collected centrally. The 1997 Secondary School Performance Tables contain the latest available information on the number of pupils at Christ's School. They show that there were 546 pupils at Christ's School in January 1997. Information on the ethnicity of pupils at individual schools is not published centrally.

Information on the residence of pupils is not collected centrally.

Standards and Effectiveness Unit

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many staff are employed in the Standards and Effectiveness Unit of his Department; and what is the budgeted cost of the unit for (a) the current year and (b) the next three years. [52989]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 28 July 1998]: The number of staff is 117. The projected salary cost for these staff is £3.4 million in financial year 1998–99. Decisions about the level of funding for the next three years have not yet been determined.

Jobs (East London)

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the (a) jobs created and (b) jobs secured by the (i) East London and (ii) Lea Valley Objective 2 Area in each year since its creation, broken down into (1) manufacturing, (2) service and (3) distribution sectors; and if he will make a statement. [53254]

Mr. Mudie: Since its introduction in 1994 the East London and Lea Valley Objective 2 programme has received support from the European Regional Development Fund (ERDF) and the European Social Fund (ESF). Over this period 32,637 jobs have been created or retained (tables 1 and 2).

We do not hold information on the number of jobs created broken down by sector and we can only provide calendar year information for ESF because this is based on annual approvals. We do not hold information in this way for ERDF.

Table 1: ESF

1996	4,256	539	4,795
1997	n/a	n/a	1,777

Statistics

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list, for each education authority area, the percentage of the school population which has been permanently excluded from school, by ethnic origin. [53566]

Ms Estelle Morris: Information on the percentage of the school population who were permanently excluded from school in the 1996–97 school year, by ethnic group, will be published in a Statistical Press Notice in September.

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list, for each local authority area, the number and percentage of pupils categorised as being in each of the categories of ethnic origin for which data are collected. [53565]

Ms Estelle Morris: Information on the number and percentage of pupils in each ethnic group in each local education authority area in England in January 1997 was published in the Department's Statistical Press Notice 341/97, which is available in the Library.

Additional Funding

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what additional funds have been allocated to the Bradford area since 1 May 1997 over and above previous plans listed by (i) capital and (ii) revenue, indicating for each whether they were subject to a bidding process. [53212]

Ms Estelle Morris: Nationally, the Government have provided an additional £835 million for revenue purposes in 1998–99 over and above the previous Administration's plans and an additional £423 million for capital purposes. The table shows the capital and revenue allocations for 1997–98 and 1998–99 for Bradford. The allocations were wholly or partly subject to a bidding process except the education standard spending assessment.

	1997–98	1998–99
Revenue Funding
Education SSA	215.6	225.1
GEST/Standards Fund	3.8	5.9
Capital Funding

New Deal for Schools 1	1.1	—
New Deal for Schools 2	—	1.4
Class size reduction	—	0.2
Outside toilets	—	0.1
Energy efficiency	—	0.2

Notes:

1. The 1997–98 Education SSA figure has been adjusted to take account of nursery vouchers
2. The specific grant programme was known as Grants for Education Support and Training (GEST) in 1997–98 and the Standards Fund in 1998–99. The figures relate to the size of the programme and therefore include the LEA contribution as well as the grant
3. Annual Capital Guidelines (ACGs) and Supplementary Credit Approvals (SCAs) represent loan sanction
4. The New Deal for Schools allocations in both 1997–98 and 1998–99 represent new funding over and above previous plans. Funds to reduce class sizes, replace outside toilets and energy efficiency projects are all additional to previous plans

[52698]

Mr. Mudie: I refer the hon. Member to the Department's Annual Report on Research, published on 31 July 1998, which details all the research funded by the Department in the period 1 April 1997 to 31 March 1998. Schools (London)

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many pupils attended (a) local authority comprehensive, (b) grant maintained, (c) grammar and (d) independent secondary schools in each London borough in each of the last five years. [53559]

Ms Estelle Morris: The available information is shown in a set of tables, copies of which have been placed in the Library.

Family-friendly Policies

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on progress in implementing the Government's family-friendly policies. [54026]

Ms Hodge: The White Paper "Fairness at Work" set out the Government's intentions on rights concerned with parental leave, part-time and working time. The framework document "Meeting the Childcare Challenge" describes the Government's plans for the National Childcare Strategy. Following consultation exercises on both documents, the Government will be making further announcements in the autumn. Other aspects of family friendly policy, including promotion of the business benefits and examples of effective practice, are also being taken forward.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the (a) training achievements and effectiveness and (b) value for money of training and enterprise councils. [54403]

Mr. Mudie: The work of each TEC is assessed by its Government Office on an ongoing basis. All TECs are required to meet a set of minimum licensing standards designed to demonstrate continuous improvement, value for money and accountability. Government Offices will, for the first time this year, publish annual reports on their assessment of the performance of their TECs.

We have also implemented a research and evaluation programme on TECs and copies of study reports are available in the Library.

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the proportion and amount of budget spent on management and administration costs by each training and enterprise council in 1997–98. [54402]

Mr. Mudie: This information is not yet available for 1997–98. Copies of the audited accounts are placed in the Library as they become available.

Information on administrative costs and the proportion of overall income spent on administration is stated in the consolidated annual statutory audited accounts of most of the English TECs. Companies law allows TECs to present their income and expenditure accounts using two different formats which can be adapted by adding further detail. Most TECs have chosen the format which includes disclosure of administrative costs which include staff and premises costs and other overhead. We are asking that those TECs that do not currently identify administrative costs reconsider the format they have adopted for the presentation of their accounts.

Persistent Inquirers

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment which of his Department's agencies have procedures to identify persistent inquirers for information. [53953]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Adrian Sanders, dated 31 July 1998:

The Employment Service is the only Executive Agency of the Department for Education and Employment (DfEE) and the Secretary of State has asked me to reply direct to your question about which of his Department's agencies have procedures to identify persistent enquiries for information. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

The Employment Service has no formal procedure to identify persistent enquiries for information. Like the DfEE, we handle all requests for information in line with the requirements of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information: second edition (1997), and the 6 Whitehall Standards.

Our Regions and Head Office Divisions can forward to our Head Office Secretariat details of anyone who appears to be repeatedly dissatisfied with the way in which their enquiries have been handled. In these cases our Head Office Secretariat will generally deal with all further enquiries from the individual concerned.

I hope this is helpful.

Overseas Visits

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list those who have accompanied (i) him and (ii) his departmental Ministers on overseas visits since 1 January indicating (a) the venue of the visit, (b) the purpose of the visit, (c) the names of those involved, (d) the job of those involved, (e) the reasons why they were included in the visit and (f) the cost to public funds. [53846]

Mr. Mudie: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Departmental Publications

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many of his Department's publications have been made available in (a) Braille, (b) audio tape and (c) large print in 1997–98; and what percentage of the total number of publications this represents. [54273]

Mr. Mudie: To give a precise answer to this question could only be done at disproportionate cost. During 1997–98, however, the Department produced 22 Braille editions of publications and 23 audio tape versions for people with visual impairments.

The Department's policy is to ensure that publications that will be of very wide public interest are available in formats that are suitable for people with visual impairments.

Additional Educational Needs

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what representations he has received concerning the impact of proposed changes to the methodology for relating to the index for additional educational needs; [53997]

(2) what evaluation he has made of the impact on funding for London local authorities if the current indicators contained in the additional educational needs index are replaced with a two stage process for picking indicators. [53998]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Government have received a number of different representations supporting and opposing proposals to revise the current index for additional educational needs. The Government will not evaluate any of the options or take final decisions on the education SSA methodology for 1999–2000 until the autumn, after they have considered the views of local government as a whole. We have a manifesto commitment to ensure a fair distribution of grant.

- refurbish A and B wings (work commenced, to open in the Autumn);

The following projects have been identified and will be considered if funds become available this financial year: new external store; reinstate E wing exercise yard; repairs to temporary kitchen; repair chimneys; structural repairs to G and K wing dry area and gable ends to officers' mess.

The following projects have been identified and will be prioritised for bidding in the next financial year, 1999–2000: a new gate, new visitors' centre; new main stores; disperse boilers, new kitchen, new laundry, new industries and training; refurbish E, G, H, and K wings.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) men and (b) women held in each London prison on 20 July were classified as category A inmates. [52785]

Mr. George Howarth: Belmarsh is the only London prison which holds category A prisoners. On 20 July, there were 73 male category A prisoners held in Belmarsh prison. There are currently no category A females held in London prisons. Additionally, 18 male category A prisoners were held in Highdown prison, Surrey, which also serves the London area.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many inmates there were at each London prison on 20 July. [52787]

Information Technology

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much his Department spent on IT itemising (a) personal computers, (b) main-frame, (c) mini-computers and (d) file servers in the last year for which figures are available. [52879]

Mr. Straw: During the financial year 1997–98, the Home Office, inclusive of the Prison Service, spent £9,430,500 in total on Information Technology hardware, software and maintenance services. More precise details covering expenditure for some smaller agencies and other associated bodies would be available only at disproportionate cost.

CS Gas

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what research (a) his Department and (b) the Police Scientific Development Branch have carried out to analyse the concentrations of CS and CS sprays which have been purchased by police forces since 1996; when this research was carried out; what were the results of this research; and if he will place the results of this research in the Library; [53152]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 16 June 1998, Official Report, columns 173–4, on CS spray, if he will place in the Library copies of the documentation of the competitive national tendering process managed by the Metropolitan Police on behalf of the Association of Chief Police Officers on the purchase of CS sprays; [53155]

(3) if he will place in the Library a copy of the aerosol incapacitants guidelines governing the use of CS spray by police officers; [53154]

(4) pursuant to his answer of 16 June 1998, Official Report, columns 173–74, on CS spray, what studies his Department has undertaken into the concentrations of CS in CS sprays which are used by police officers in the United States of America; and what conclusions were drawn from them; [53151]

(5) if his Department or the Police Scientific Development Branch are aware of, or have been informed of, any research carried out by police forces to analyse the concentrations of CS in CS sprays which have been purchased by police forces since 1996; when this research was carried out; who carried out this research; what were the results of this research; and if he will make a statement. [53156]

Mr. Michael: A copy of the invitation to tender is being obtained and will be placed in the Library shortly. Documents submitted by tenderers will not be placed in the Library because of their commercially sensitive nature.

CS spray has not been widely used by police officers in the United States of America. From the limited information available from its use there, it appears that concentrations of 1 or 2 per cent. are not effective as an incapacitant. The reasons for choosing a 5 per cent. concentration were given in the Answer I gave to my hon. Friend on 16 June 1998, Official Report, column 266.

In November 1996, an analysis arranged by Avon and Somerset Constabulary of one canister showed a concentration of 6.8 per cent. weight to volume. The Home Office Police Scientific Development Branch arranged for a further two canisters to be analysed, and discovered concentrations of 5.4 per cent. and 6.1 per cent. Canisters were not withdrawn because the small additional amounts of CS which would be delivered operationally were not significant. A copy of a note by the Police Scientific Development Branch dated 4 February 1997 and entitled "CS Concentration in Alsetes Spray" has been placed in the Library. The concentration of CS in equipment supplied to police forces is set out in the specification issued jointly by the Association of Chief Police Officers and the Police Scientific Development Branch in March 1997, copies of which have previously been placed in the Library. CS concentrations were tested as part of the national tendering process and any product purchased as part of that process should comply with the specification.

Individual chief officers are responsible for ensuring that the equipment they issue to their officers is of the appropriate specification. Copies of guidelines issued by the Association of Chief Police Officers on police use of CS spray are already in the Library.

Defence Evaluation and Research Agency

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many contracts or agreements have been commissioned by his Department with the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency of the Ministry of Defence since January 1996; and what was the duration, nature and value of each. [53153]

Mr. Straw: Two contracts have been let by the Police Information Technology Organisation with the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency of the Ministry of Defence since January 1996. Details are:

1. A consultancy contract for the operation of a Trials and Testing Programme for the TCAS 791 Collision Warning System, which commenced on 1 November 1997 and was completed on 15 March 1998.

2. A consultancy contract for a study to consider the introduction of Packet Data Base Stations in Home Office Allocations, which commenced on 28 January and was completed on 20 February 1998.

The value of the contracts was £109,301.

Prisoners

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many and what proportion of (a) male and (b) female prisoners had (i) no previous convictions, (ii) one or two previous convictions and (iii) three or more previous convictions on the most recent available date. [52837]

Mr. George Howarth: The available information regarding prisoners with previous convictions is based on samples of the sentenced prison population in England and Wales taken at the end of June each year. As this information is based on samples, the results can only be expressed in percentage terms.

The most recently available data relate to samples of those adult males, adult females and male young offenders in prison at the end of June 1996 and are given in the table. Information relating to female young offenders with previous convictions is not available due to the relatively small number of such prisoners.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners were on (a) basic level, (b) standard level and (c) enhanced level of the incentives and earned privileges scheme, in each prison in England and Wales on the last date for which figures were available. [53339]

Mr. George Howarth: The provisional figures for 1 June 1998, which are subject to final validation, are given in the table.

British Nationality (Applications)

Ms Ryan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for British nationality are currently outstanding for applicants registered as resident in Enfield North. [53247]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The information is not available in the form requested as applications are not recorded according to the parliamentary constituency in which an applicant is living. Nationality Directorate records indicate that there are 481 applications outstanding from persons who have given an address with an Enfield postcode.

Remand Prisoners

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) male and (b) female prisoners were remanded in custody to await trial or sentence in 1997; what was the average daily number on remand; and what percentage subsequently received custodial sentences. [52838]

Mr. George Howarth: In 1997, 58,092 males and 3,974 females were remanded in custody awaiting trial. 33,988 convicted males and 2,426 convicted females were remanded in custody awaiting sentence. The average monthly remand population in 1997 was 8,057 untried males and 3,475 convicted unsentenced males. The corresponding figures for females were 396 and 203 respectively.

Of those remanded in custody at some stage in magistrates' courts proceedings, provisional information shows that 46 per cent. of males and 31 per cent. of females were sentenced to immediate custody.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what data his Department has collated on the average time spent by prisoners on remand in custody awaiting trial over each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [54027]

Mr. George Howarth: The information requested is given in the table. Information on the estimated average number of days in custody for untried prisoners is published in "Prison statistics England and Wales" (table 2.1 of the 1996 edition, Cm 3732), a copy of which is in the Library. Information for 1997 has been taken from draft tables prepared for the 1997 edition of "Prison statistics England and Wales" which is due to be published today.

Provisional figures

Custody (Girls)

Ms Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many girls aged under 18 years from Wales were in custody at the last date for which figures are available. [53261]

Mr. George Howarth [holding answer 29 July 1998]: The available information is for those 15, 16 and 17 year old females held in Prison Service establishments in England and Wales who were first committed to custody from a Welsh court. As at 30 June, provisional information indicates that there was one such prisoner.

Departmental Research

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the cost of all research undertaken by his Department since May 1997, excluding the cost of green papers and other public consultation documents drafted by his officials; and if he will list in each case the organisations which undertook that research. [52697]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 29 July 1998]: The term 'research' covers a wide range of activities, from scientific and engineering research through to consultancies and public opinion surveys. The information requested is not held centrally and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Comprehensive Spending Review

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, pursuant to the Comprehensive Spending Review, he will list the real terms changes in spending on the (a) Prison Service, (b) police and (c) Probation Service, in each of the next three years. [53337]

Mr. Straw: The table shows the real terms year on year increases produced by the allocation of total Home Office provision to the three services. The allocation may be subject to adjustment, particularly in the second and third years.

£ million 1998–99 prices

Prison service	10	11	11
Police[1]	3	23	107
Probation service[2]	12	19	21

[1] Based on planned spend in 1998–99, which includes an additional £112m above the original baseline

Prisons (Expenditure)

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the total expenditure needed to meet each of the Prison Service's three projections for the required number of prison places, in each year until 2005; if he will give the figures at constant real terms cost per prison place; and if he will make a statement. [53341]

Mr. George Howarth: The Prison Service has not based its expenditure projections on any one of the three population scenarios. The Comprehensive Spending Review settlement, which includes £179 million over the period to complete the programme for increasing capacity, provides the Service with a realistic plan for coping with rising numbers over the period.

But, as recent experience has shown, it is very difficult to forecast trends precisely several years ahead. It is expected that the policies that we are pursuing to increase public confidence in community-based punishment will have an impact on population trends by the end of the period.

The Comprehensive Spending Review covers only the years 1999–2002 and the forecasts of cost per uncrowded place only over that period.

The Comprehensive Spending Review Settlement provides for a real terms cost per uncrowded place[1] increase of 0.9 per cent. over the three years. Expressed as a year-on-year basis, this represents a 1.7 per cent. increase in the first year (1999–2000); a 0.2 per cent. reduction in the second year (2000–01) and a 0.6 per cent. reduction in the third year (2001–02).

The costs per uncrowded prison place underlying these percentages at 1992–93 prices (the year used by the Prison Service against which to measure its Key Performance Indicators, as this was the year before it became an agency) are listed with the equivalent figures at 1998–99 prices:

	1992–93 prices	1998–99 prices
1999–2000	20,540	23,986
2000–01	20,498	23,937
2001–02	20,379	23,798

[1] Figures do not include costs or places of prisons designed, constructed, managed and financed (DCMF) by the private sector

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the need for extra (a) prison places and (b) prisons in each of the next three years; what is the planned spending per prison place over the next three years; and what is the expected capital spending on prisons over the next three years. [53338]

Mr. George Howarth: Resources are in place to increase the operational capacity of the prison estate by a further 4,500 places over the next three financial years.

The building programme will deliver 1,350 places in 1998–99 and 550 in 1999–2000 in the form of houseblocks and cell reclamation places at existing prisons.

New prisons will provide an additional 1,200 places in 1999–2000 and 1,400 places in 2000–01.

The Comprehensive Spending Review (CSR) settlement provides for a real terms cost per uncrowded place increase of 0.9 per cent. over the three years of the CSR. Expressed as a year-on-year basis this represents a 1.7 per cent. increase in the first year (1999–2000); a 0.2 per cent. reduction in the second year (2000–01); and a 0.6 per cent. reduction in the third year (2001–02).

The CSR settlement provides, in real terms at 1998–99 prices, capital expenditure for the Prison Service of £150 million (1999–2000), £131 million (2000–01) and £130 million (2001–02).

Figures do not include costs or places of prisons designed, constructed, managed and financed (DCME) by the private sector.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the Comprehensive Spending Review, if he will provide a breakdown of the total amount of extra funding which will be allocated to (a) prison places and (b) rehabilitation and other programmes in prison, in each of the next three years, in real terms; and if he will make a statement. [53340]

Mr. George Howarth: In the three years from 1999–2002, the Prison Service will spend an extra £62 million (1999–2000), £54 million (2000–01) and £54 million, in real terms at 1998–99 prices, on prison places.

In the three years from 1999–2002, the Prison Service will spend an extra £72 million (1999–2000), £60 million (2000–01) and £70 million (2001–02), in real terms at 1998–99 prices, on rehabilitation and other programmes in prison. These funds are in addition to the previous Government's planned expenditure for the Prison Service.

Security Services

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those European Community working groups attended by the security services. [53775]

Mr. Straw: Members of the Security Service routinely attend the Terrorism Working Group under the Justice and Home Affairs Council. They may attend other European Union Working Group meetings in a supporting role where the Security Service has a direct interest in the subject matter under discussion or where its expertise is needed.

EU K4 Committee

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the nature of the United Kingdom delegation to the European Community's K4 Committee. [53776]

Mr. Straw: The United Kingdom representative on the Committee set up under Article K4 of the Treaty on European Union is Mr. Timothy Walker, Director General of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate of the Home Office. He is accompanied by other members of the Home Office and members of the United Kingdom Permanent Representation in Brussels. Representatives from other Government Departments, such as the Lord Chancellor's Department and Her Majesty's Customs and Excise, sometimes attend in a supporting role, depending on the subject matter under discussion.

Youth Justice

Mr. Wood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what additional resources will be provided to local areas piloting the youth justice provisions set out in the Crime and Disorder Bill [Lords]. [53965]

Mr. Michael: There will be some funding available to help the pilot areas put in place the programmes and forms of intervention needed to undertake work under the final warning scheme and the new court orders which are to be piloted. We will discuss with the pilot areas how available funds can be used most effectively within their area.

Overseas Visits

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those who have accompanied (i) him and (ii) his departmental Ministers on overseas visits since 1 January indicating (a) the venue of the visit, (b) the purpose of the visit, (c) the names of those involved, (d) the job of those involved, (e) the reasons why they were included in the visit and (f) the cost to public funds. [53836]

Mr. Straw: All overseas visits by Ministers are conducted in accordance with the principles set out in the Ministerial Code. Information in the precise form requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The available information is set out in the table.

Police (Numbers)

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number of police officers in each of the police authorities in Wales for each of the last five years and the projections for the next three years. [54540]

Mr. Michael: The information requested in respect of the last five years is set out in the table.

Ministers have no direct control over police numbers. Under legislation passed by the previous Government in 1994, it is for individual chief constables to determine the number of police officers in their force, on the basis of the resources made available to them. No decisions have yet been made on funding allocations for individual police authorities over the next three years.

Provisional figures

Persistent Inquirers

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which of his Department's agencies have procedures to identify persistent inquirers for information. [53050]

Mr. Straw: Home Office Agencies do not operate procedures to identify persistent inquirers for information. All requests for information received under the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information are routinely monitored, but no Agency has found it necessary to introduce specific procedures.

Police (Bicycle Patrols)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for each police force in England the number of officers who routinely patrol on a bicycle. [54408]

Mr. Michael: The use of bicycles to patrol is an operational matter for the chief officer of the force concerned and information on the number of officers deployed in this way is not recorded centrally.

Homosexuality

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons have been convicted for voluntarily engaging in homosexual acts involving persons of between 16 and 18 years of age in each of the years since 1994. [53970]

Mr. Michael: Information for 1994 to 1996 (latest available) is given in the table. It does not include offences such as male rape or indecent assault on a male.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people under the age of 18 years were arrested for consenting homosexual activity but then released without charge in the latest year for which figures are available. [54659]

Mr. Michael: Information on the particular offence for which a person is arrested is not collected centrally.

Police (Community Relationships)

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how he plans to develop better relationships between the police and (a) inner city and (b) ethnic minority communities. [53963]

Mr. Michael: The Government are committed to developing better relationships between the police and all sections of the society they serve. My right hon. Friend gave his full personal endorsement to the thematic report on Police Community and Race Relations, published by Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary (HMIC) last October.

The report concluded that, although much work had been done by police forces in this area, performance was patchy and further steps needed to be taken to ensure that racism and discrimination were eliminated.

The main recommendations of the report were that forces should: publicly re-affirm their commitment to investing in good community and race relations as a core function of policing; give a higher priority to dealing with neighbourhood incidents and anti-social behaviour; clearly state that they regard the behaviour of officers who show racial or other prejudice in their behaviour and language as completely unacceptable; continue to attract minority ethnic recruits and retain them; and consider a community and race relations audit to identify areas needing improvement. The report also recommended that training in community and race relations should be given greater emphasis, and that priority should initially be targeted towards first line supervision.

In order to co-ordinate the implementation of the report, a working group has been set up under Home Office chairmanship, on which the Association of Chief Police Officers, HMIC, the Commission for Racial Equality and the Black Police Associations are represented. A key part of the work to follow up the report will be undertaken by HMIC in the autumn. All forces will be asked to report on the progress they have made on the issues raised in the report and a further inspection will be undertaken of 15 forces.

The Home Office is currently tendering for a new contract to provide independent specialist support to the police service in community and race relations training. The new contract will contain two elements: integration of community and race relations throughout the national curriculum of police training; and support and training to individual forces to place community and race relations firmly within operational policing. One of the ways in which a better relationship can be developed between the police and the community will be through the involvement of the community in the needs analysis, the implementation and the evaluation of this new training strategy.

On 24 July, the Home Office submitted written evidence to the Inquiry into matters arising from the death of Stephen Lawrence. That evidence gives a fuller account of work in progress or planned to improve relations between the police and the communities they serve. That evidence is available in the Library.

Party Conferences

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 23 July 1998, Official Report, columns 617–18, (1) what assessment he has made of the means available to the Lancashire Police Authority to fund the shortfall between the estimated cost of policing the Labour Party Conference in 1998 and the special grant made available to it under the Police and Magistrates' Court Act 1994; [54077]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 23 July 1998, Official Report, columns 617–18, what estimate he has made of the shortfall between the estimated cost of policing the Labour Party Conference in 1998 and the special grant made available to the Lancashire Police Authority. [54076]

Mr. Michael: It should be borne in mind that until 1996 no contribution was made from central funds to help with the costs of political party conferences. The Government have maintained the level of total grant at £1.5 million in 1997 and 1998. We are currently reviewing the arrangements.

The Lancashire Police Authority has estimated that the additional costs of policing the Labour Party Conference at Blackpool will be £1.284 million. This is £534,000 more than the special grant they will receive from my Department, but it represents less than 0.5 per cent. of the force's budget of £177 million.

It is for the Chief Constable to decide how to find the additional resources. The force could use its reserves, which were expected to be around £2.9 million as at 31 March, or find the money from efficiency savings elsewhere in the force budget.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, (1) pursuant to his oral statement of 27 July 1998, Official Report, columns 35–38, what estimate he has made of the cost of establishing new national machinery to plan and co-ordinate provision for asylum seekers; [54388]

(2) pursuant to his oral statement of 21 July 1998, Official Report, column 918, if he will give a breakdown of the funding transferred to his Department from other departments for the support of asylum seekers; and what assumptions he has made about the number of asylum seekers who will be in receipt of such support in that period. [54386]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The provisional level of funding for asylum seeker support allocated to the Home Office is £350 million in 1999–2000, £300 million in 2000/01 and £250 million in 2001/02. Detailed plans have yet to be developed and the cost of establishing new national machinery to plan and co-ordinate this provision has not yet been assessed.

The funding assumes that the numbers of asylum decisions and appeals disposals will be in line with the provisional plans set out in the White Paper published on 27 July. We aim that, by April 2001, most initial asylum decisions will be made within two months of receipt and most appeals to an adjudicator will be heard within a further four months.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his oral statement of 27 July 1998, Official Report, columns 35–38, what estimate he has made of the number of asylum seekers who will receive leave to enter or remain and who applied for asylum (a) before 1 July 1993 and (b) between 1 July 1994 and 31 December 1995. [54389]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The proportion of the estimated 10,000 asylum claims made before 1 July 1993 awaiting an initial decision and the estimated 20,000 claims awaiting an initial decision made between 1 July 1993 and 31 December 1995 which will qualify for leave to enter or remain will depend upon the numbers to whom the special considerations set out in paragraphs 8.29 and 8.30 of the White Paper "Fairer, Faster and Firmer—A Modern Approach to Immigration and Asylum" (Cm 4018) are found to apply. Some of these people will not be granted either indefinite leave to remain or exceptional leave to remain under our proposal.

Sir Norman Fowler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if staff will be transferred from the Department of Social Security to his Department to run the new benefit in kind support system for political asylum seekers; and if he will make a statement. [54046]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: No decision has yet been taken on the kinds of staff needed to operate such a scheme, or how they might be recruited.

Sir Norman Fowler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to disperse political asylum seekers around the country; what kind of accommodation will be provided; and if he will make a statement. [54049]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Government's proposals for new support arrangements for asylum seekers are set out in paragraphs 8.17–8.26 of the White Paper "Fairer, Faster and Firmer—A Modern Approach to Immigration and Asylum" (Cm 4018). The aim is that, where asylum seekers are in genuine need of accommodation, this should be provided at a wider range of locations than under present arrangements, which have resulted in a heavy concentration in London and certain other areas. The type of accommodation offered to any particular asylum seeker is likely to vary: it will depend on what is available and at what cost, and on such factors as the presence or otherwise of dependants.

Sir Norman Fowler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department by what date he expects that the 30,000 applications for political asylum made prior to December 1995 will be determined; and if he will make a statement. [54048]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: As indicated in the White Paper "Fairer, Faster and Firmer—A Modern Approach to Immigration and Asylum" (Cm 4018), we are aiming to clear the backlog of undecided asylum claims before April 2001.

Sir Norman Fowler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department by what date he expects that his proposed system of benefits in kind for asylum seekers will be operational; what benefits in kind will be available; and if he will make a statement. [54044]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The date on which such a system becomes operational will depend on when the necessary legislation is enacted. The type of provision envisaged is explained in paragraph 8.21 of the White Paper "Fairer, Faster and Firmer—A Modern Approach to Immigration and Asylum" (Cm 4018).

Sir Norman Fowler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if all those who made an application for political asylum prior to July 1993 and whose applications are still outstanding will be individually interviewed before any decision is taken on their application, and if he will make a statement. [54043]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: No. It is unlikely that very many of these applicants will need to be interviewed. Some applicants will already have been interviewed and others will have provided full details of their asylum claim by way of a self-completion questionnaire commonly in use at the time these applications were made. The decision whether to interview will be taken individually as each case is examined.

Employees Over 60

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) men and (b) women employed by (1) his Department and (2) his Department's agencies have contracts of employment which permit them to retire after their 60 birthday. [53055]

Mr. Straw: The normal retirement age for staff in the Home Office is 60, with the following exceptions:

prison officer grades who were in post prior to 1 September 1987 have a minimum retirement age of 55 and a maximum retirement age of 60.

operational service grades, prison auxiliaries and night patrol officers in the Prison Service and industrial grade staff throughout the Home Office have a minimum retirement age of 60 but may remain in employment up to the age of 65 subject to continued fitness and efficiency.

The numbers of industrial grades employed on 24 July 1998 were as follows:

Department	Men	Women
(1) Home Office (excluding agencies)	39	6
(2) Agencies
(i) Prison service	2,610	230
(ii) UK Passport agency	0	0
(iii) Forensic science service	0	0
(iv) Fire service college	41	0

The numbers of operational service grades, prison auxiliaries and night patrol staff in the Prison Service employed on 30 June 1998 were as follows:

	Men	Women
(1) Operational service grades	3,247	951
(2) Prison auxiliaries	573	238
(3) Night patrol staff	252	324

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) men and (b) women aged over 60 years were employed by (i) his Department and (ii) his Department's agencies on 1 January. [53060]

Mr. Straw: Figures for staff aged over 60 on 1 January in the Home Office and Agencies are set out below:

	Number over 60 (male)	Number over 60 (female)	Total
Home Office excluding Agencies	34	14	48
Fire Service College	5	0	5
Forensic Science Service	2	0	2
United Kingdom Passport Agency	14	14	28
Her Majesty's Prison Service	987	60	1,047
Total	2,028	148	1,129

The Home Office and Agency figures (excluding the Prison Service) include 11 industrial grade staff. These staff have a minimum retirement age of 60 but may remain in service until 65 subject to continued fitness and efficiency.

The Prison Service figures include industrial grade staff. These account for approximately a third of the total. Of the remainder, the majority are operational service grades, prison auxiliaries, and night patrol staff. All these staff have a minimum retirement age of 60 but may continue in service up to age 65 subject to continued fitness and efficiency.

Non-departmental Public Bodies

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the non-departmental public bodies in existence on 1 May 1997 that (a) have been disbanded, (b) will be disbanded in the next 12 months, (c) have had their functions transferred to (i) another non-departmental public body and (ii) a democratically elected body, (d) have been renamed but continue to perform a similar role and (e) have been unchanged; if he will indicate in (c) (ii) the relevant successor body; what new non-departmental public bodies have been established since 1 May 1997; and how many non-departmental public bodies his Department currently is responsible for. [53865]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 30 July 1998]: None of the non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs) for which my Department is responsible, has been disbanded since 1 May 1997, although I expect that, subject to Parliamentary approval, the Advisory Committee on Service Candidates will be abolished shortly.

No Home Office NDPB has had its functions transferred either to another NDPB or a democratically elected body, and none has continued to perform a similar function under a different name.

Details of all NDPBs in existence on 1 May 1997 sponsored by this Department are listed in "Public Bodies 1997". Since that date, we have established as NDPBs the Police Information Technology Organisation and the Race Relations Forum.

My Department is currently responsible for 35 NDPBs, plus 135 Boards of Visitors to penal establishments.

Child Sex Abuse

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many sexual abuse offences were committed within the family by (a) natural parents and (b) step parents in each of the last five years. [54072]

Mr. Michael: From the figures collected centrally on the numbers of sexual offences recorded by the police, it is not possible to distinguish the relationship between the offender and the victim.

Task Forces

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the task forces and advisory groups composed of independent members which have been set up by his Department since 1 May 1997, indicating in each case (a) their remit, (b) their membership, (c) how many members are (i) scientists, (ii) engineers, (iii) small business people or representatives of small businesses, (d) any remuneration members receive for their services and (e) their budget. [53286]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 30 July 1998]: A Task Force on Youth Justice was established in June 1997 and is being wound up this month. Its remit and membership were published in the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Brigg and Goole (Mr. Cawsey) on 17 June 1997, Official Report, columns 99–100. The membership of the Task Force drawn from outside the civil service remained unchanged. One independent member came from the business community, the others from public services business community, the others from public services dealing with young people who offend or are at high risk of offending. None were employed as engineers, scientists or by small businesses. The Task Force had no budget and members were not remunerated. To date, £2,440 of their travel expenses have been refunded from the running costs of my Department.

I announced the membership of the Race Relations Forum in the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Leicester, East (Mr. Vaz) on 21 May 1998, Official Report, columns 450–51. Detailed terms of reference have not yet been finalised, but the purpose of the Forum is to advise the Government, in the formulation and implementation of their policies, on issues affecting ethnic minority communities. I am not aware that any of the Forum's members is a scientist, engineer or a representative of small business. The Forum has no budget and members are not remunerated.

Following its first meeting on 23 June, £257.90 has so far been refunded to members from the running costs of my Department for their travel and subsistence.

Court Welfare Service

Angela Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how the Government intend to take forward consideration of the case for setting up a new court welfare service. [54870]

Mr. Straw: Following my announcement on 16 February 1998, Official Report, column 465, of a review of the scope for improving the effectiveness of the welfare services currently provided by several agencies in family proceedings through the creation of a new unified service, my noble and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor and my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Health and Wales and I are today publishing a consultation paper seeking wider views on these issues. Copies of the paper are being placed in the Library, are being sent to a wide range of interested bodies and will be gladly sent to individuals on request. The closing date for response is 13 November.

Criminal Appeals

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in how many of the cases tried on indictment where convictions were quashed following referral to the Court of Appeal by the Secretary of State, exercising his powers under section 17 of the Criminal Appeal Act 1968, compensation was paid to the appellant; what was the amount of compensation paid in each case; and how many such compensation claims remain outstanding for each year between 1990–91 and 1996–97. [54106]

Mr. Michael: The consideration of eligibility for compensation is subject to an application being made. It does not follow that all those whose cases were referred to the Court of Appeal during the period in question, and whose convictions were subsequently quashed, will necessarily have applied to the Home Office for compensation. Of the relevant individuals who did apply, the available information is as follows:

Year conviction referred	Number who subsequently qualified for compensation	Number of claims not yet settled
1991	11	1
1992	8	3
1993	4	2
1994	2	1
1995	4	3
1996	6	4
1997	—	—

The year in which a case is referred to the Court of Appeal will not usually be the same year in which the appeal is heard, nor in which a decision to pay compensation is taken

The eligibility for compensation of one individual whose conviction was referred to and quashed by the Court of Appeal in 1997 has yet to be determined

Note:

It is not practice to give details of the amounts awarded in individual cases

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) in how many cases, for each year between 1990–91 and 1996–97, where convictions tried on indictment were referred to the Court of Appeal by the Secretary of State for the Home Department in exercise of his powers under section 17 of the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 (a) the appeal was allowed, (b) the appeal was dismissed, (c) a re-trial was ordered and (d) the appeal is awaited; [54104]

(2) how many convictions in cases tried on indictment were referred to the Court of Appeal by the Secretary of State in exercise of his powers under section 17 of the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 for each year between 1990–91 and 1996–97. [54102]

Mr. Michael: The number of convictions referred to the Court of Appeal from 1990–97, and the outcome, are given in the table.

Mr. Diarmuid O'Neill

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the steps taken by the Police Complaints Authority investigating the shooting of Diarmuid O'Neill to obtain statements from (a) Brian

McHugh and (b) Patrick Kelly since December 1997, indicating when (i) letters were sent and (ii) appointments made and with what notice; how many appointments were cancelled following approaches to legal representatives; what responses were received; when statements were taken; what assessment has been made of the impact of a transfer of the prisoners on the investigation; and what further steps are necessary to complete the investigation. [53990]

Mr. Michael: I understand that the investigating team wrote to solicitors representing Brian McHugh on 13 January to arrange an interview with their client. The solicitors were subsequently notified on 23 March that an appointment had been made to visit Mr. McHugh in prison. The solicitors replied on 1 April to say that Mr. McHugh would not make a statement. Officers visited Mr. McHugh on 7 April and he declined to co-operate with the investigation.

The investigating team wrote to solicitors representing Patrick Kelly on 28 January. An appointment to interview him in prison on 10 March was cancelled because his legal representative could not be present. The solicitors were notified on 25 March that another appointment had been made and he was eventually seen on 8 April in the presence of his legal representative. He declined to provide a statement.

The Police Complaints Authority (PCA) subsequently wrote to the solicitors representing the men on 27 May to make another request for their co-operation with the investigation, but no reply has been received.

The investigating officer is continuing his inquiries and has yet to complete the interviews of the police officers involved in the incident. The PCA has not made any assessment of the impact of a transfer of the prisoners.

Criminal Cases Review Commission

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will lay a copy of the first annual report of the Criminal Cases Review Commission before Parliament; and if he will make a statement. [54105]

Mr. Michael: The Commission's first annual report was laid before Parliament on 20 July, and copies were placed in the Library. I welcome the report, and am pleased to note that the Commission is able to record a generally favourable reception to its openness, accessibility and independence, and of the thoroughness and professional competence of its case reviews.

Homosexual Acts (Prosecution)

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many men, aged between 16 and 18 years, during the last 10 years, have been (a) prosecuted and (b) convicted, for activities relating to homosexual acts in private. [54937]

Mr. Michael: Information for 1986 to 1996 (latest available) is given in the table. It does not include offences such as male rape or indecent assault on a male.

Paedophiles

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to require convicted paedophiles subject to the Sex Offences Register to inform the authorities if they plan to travel abroad. [53981]

Mr. George Howarth: We will shortly be starting a review of the effectiveness of the registration provisions of the Sex Offenders Act 1997. The question of convicted sex offenders who travel abroad will form part of that review.

Asia Europe Child Welfare Initiative

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his Department's policy is towards the objectives of the Asia Europe Child Welfare Initiative; and if he will make a statement. [53982]

Mr. Michael: The objective of the ASEM child welfare initiative is to develop practical co-operation between Asia and Europe in the fight against commercial sexual exploitation of children through the exchange of ideas and information and the promotion of models of good practice. The initiative is led by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, with the full support and participation of the Home Office, the police, the Department of Health and other Government Departments, as well as the non-governmental organisations concerned with children who have been closely involved.

The Government take the combating of the commercial sexual exploitation of children very seriously. This Government have implemented the Sex Offenders Act 1997, which both creates a requirement for sex offenders to register their names and addresses, and any changes to these, with the police, and enables crimes against children abroad to be prosecuted in this country. The United Kingdom police have carried out training courses for police and prosecutors in the Philippines, Thailand and Sri Lanka. Within the United Kingdom, the Government have undertaken to issue joint Home Office/Department of Health guidance to the police and social services on dealing with children in prostitution on an inter-agency basis with the intention of diverting them from prostitution.

The ASEM child welfare initiative is breaking new ground in seeking to develop practical responses to this most difficult problem. We regard it as making a valuable contribution to our own strategy to combat the sexual exploitation of children at home and abroad.

Young Offenders

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will review the procedure whereby minor offences committed by a young offender remain on their record and affect opportunities for employment. [54687]

Mr. Michael: The retention of records of convictions and cautions held in national or local police records are subject to the Association of Chief Police Officer (ACPO) weeding guidelines, which are currently under review. In general, the retention period for criminal records depends on the seriousness of the offence and whether the subject of the record reoffends. Criminal records are retained for the purposes of crime prevention and detection and the apprehension and prosecution of offenders. The weeding guidelines do not differentiate between the criminal records of juvenile and adult offenders.

Police records are only disclosed for the purpose of viewing a person's suitability for employment where there are important considerations of public interest to justify departure from the general rule of confidentiality. In addition, the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974 applies to all convictions of the court. The length of the rehabilitation period, after which a conviction is spent, depends on the sentence passed by the court, and, for offenders aged under 18, the rehabilitation period for many sentences is halved. The Rehabilitation of Offenders Act does not apply to cautions, reprimands and final warnings. We shall be considering whether the Act should apply to these non-judicial disposals and will be consulting on the issue.

Fatal Road Crashes

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many manslaughter charges have been brought following fatal road crashes for each of the last 10 years; how many have been brought against (a) drivers and (b) managers; and how many have resulted in convictions. [54844]

Mr. Michael: The numbers shown below for a charge of manslaughter following road incidents between the years 1987–96, are those initially recorded as manslaughter by the police.

The numbers for conviction are those currently recorded as manslaughter.

There is not information held centrally on the number of convictions brought against drivers and managers.

Hillgrove Farm, Minster Lovell

Mr. David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when his Department last inspected the animal breeding establishment Hillgrove Farm, Minster Lovell, Oxfordshire; with what results; and what assessment he has made of the standard of animal welfare at this establishment. [54222]

Mr. George Howarth: The establishment was last visited by a member of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Inspectorate in early May. The visit was unannounced. The inspector reported that standards of care, accommodation and animal welfare were satisfactory. On the basis of this advice, I am satisfied that Hillgrove Farm continues to operate both within the terms of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 and the conditions of its Certificate of Designation.

Prisons (Gardening)

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 22 July 1998, Official Report, column 544, what are the ingredients of the five commercial chemical products used in gardening at the three Isle of Sheppey prisons. [54959]

Mr. George Howarth: The ingredients of the five commercial chemical products used at Elmley prison are listed below:

Casoron G: used for weed control in shrub beds a granular product containing 6.75 per cent. dichlobenil/2.6—dichlorobenzonitrite

Mosstox: used for moss control contains dichlorophen 340 grams/litre(g/l) used in dilution. 27.9 per cent. with water (w/w)

Roundup Bioactive: used for weed control contains 360 g/l glyphosate, present as 480 g/l (41.1 per cent. w/w) of the isopropylamine salt of glyphosate

Supertox 30: used for control of broad leaf weeds in grass contains 190 g/l (16.9 per cent. w/w) mecoprop and 90 g/l (8.03 per cent. w/w) 2.4—D as diethanolamine salts

Trik: used for weed control contains aminotriazole 28 per cent. w/w, diuron, sodium hydroxide and 2.4—D.

My hon. Friend the Member for Gateshead, East and Washington, West (Ms Quin), said in the answer she gave my hon. Friend on 22 July 1998, Official Report, column 544, that all three prisons are happy to discuss environmental issues with interested parties.

European Children

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will support the proposal put to his Office for a millennium lottery specifically to fund longitudinal studies of European children in the next century, sponsored by the European Forum for Child Welfare; and if he will make a statement. [54203]

Mr. George Howarth: We have not received any proposals. They would need to be put to the Gaming Board, and would have to comply with the requirements of the Lotteries and Amusements Act 1976. Under the Act, it is unlawful for tickets in unauthorised lotteries, including overseas lotteries, to be sold, or for such lotteries to be advertised, in Great Britain.

Probation Service

Angela Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he hopes to publish his proposals on the future of the Probation Service and for improving their joint effectiveness with the Prison Service; and if he will make a statement. [54968]

Mr. Straw: I shall be publishing a consultation document shortly, entitled "Joining Forces to Protect the Public", which seeks views on my plans for reforming the organisational structure of the probation services, and for improving its systems of accountability and its joint effectiveness with the Prison Service. Copies will then be placed in the Library.

The proposals are the product of the emerging findings of the Prisons-Probation Review which I announced on 16 July 1998, last year, Official Report, columns 172–73, and which formed part of the Comprehensive Spending Review. Among other things, the document sets out our proposals for creating a modern unified national Probation Service as a Next Steps Agency, forming part of the Home Office, directly accountable to the Home Secretary through a Chief Executive. The proposals form one part of our wide-ranging programme to modernise and improve the performance of the criminal justice system in England and Wales. The consultation exercise will continue until 27 November, and I shall announce final decisions before the end of the year.

To assist the consultation process, I shall also make available the report of the review of options which has informed our proposals.

Europol

Angela Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures are being put in place to ensure that the United Kingdom complies with the provisions in the Europol Convention related to breaches of discretion or confidentiality following its entry into force on 1 October. [54969]

Mr. Straw: Article 32(4) of the Europol Convention requires that prior to the entry into force of the Convention, each member state shall introduce the provisions required under national law to proceed against breaches of discretion or confidentiality. To this end, I am certifying the Europol Convention as an agreement to which an international organisation is a party, under section 12(2)(b) of the Official Secrets Act 1989. This will have the effect of ensuring that members and employees of Europol will be treated as "government contractors" for the purposes of the Official Secrets Act, and will ensure that the United Kingdom will comply fully with the relevant provisions in the Convention.

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the United Kingdom role in data exchange in Europol. [54953]

Mr. Michael: The role of Europol and European Union member states in relation to Europol is set out in the Europol Convention. The role of the United Kingdom will be the same as any other member state.

Corruption

Angela Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to reform and consolidate the law on corruption; and what progress has been made on the recommendations by the Committee on Standards in Public Life to (i) clarify the law on corruption in relation to hon. Members and (ii) introduce a new statutory offence of misuse of public office. [55130]

Mr. Straw: As a Government, we are committed to ensuring high standards in both public and private life. On 9 June last year, I published a consultation document on the reform of the corruption statutes entitled "The Prevention of Corruption: Consolidation and Amendment of the Prevention of Corruption Acts 1889–1916: A Government Statement", a copy of which is in the Library. This had been preceded in December 1996 by the publication of the Home Office discussion document "Clarification of the Law Relating to the Bribery of Members of Parliament", an issue on which the Committee on Standards in Public Life had earlier reported. In November last, the Joint Committee on Parliamentary Privilege embarked on its current inquiry into Parliamentary Privilege, including the law of corruption as it relates to hon. Members; and in March, the Law Commission for England and Wales helpfully published its proposals in its report No. 248: "Legislating the Criminal Code: Corruption". We are also committed to supporting and giving effect to international efforts through the European Union, the Council of Europe and the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) to deal with international aspects of corruption, including implementing the OECD Convention on Combating Bribery of Foreign Public Officials in International Business Transactions. These domestic and international initiatives taken together provide us with a sound basis on which to review and modernise the law of corruption.

Although we are still awaiting the recommendations of the Joint Committee on Parliamentary Privilege we have (as I announced on 24 June 1998, Official Report, column 520) set up two inter-departmental groups to examine (i) the Law Commission's Report on Corruption and (ii) the possibility of a new statutory offence of misuse of public office. It is clear from the many representations received that there is much to support the Law Commission's recommendations for the common law of bribery and the present statutory offences of corruption to be restated in a modern statute, with a clear definition of what is meant by acting in a corrupt manner. At this stage, we also accept, in principle, the Law Commission's proposal that there should be a single offence of corruption to cover both public and private sectors. This reflects the reality that some functions which would, in the past, have been carried out by the public sector are now carried out by public/private partnerships or in the private sector. It also reflects the importance of ensuring equally high standards of probity in all aspects of life, whether in the public or the private sector. The inter-departmental working group on corruption expects to complete its work by the end of the year. When it has done so, I propose to publish a paper setting out the Government's detailed proposals for the consolidation and amendment of the law on corruption. When available, I will also take into account the views of the Joint Committee on Parliamentary Privilege.

The level of response to the consultation paper about a possible new offence of misuse of public office and the quality of replies demonstrates the importance of, and interest in, public probity. The Committee on Standards in Public Life in its third report recommended that all holders of public office should be covered equally by a statutory offence of misuse of public office, which enables action to be taken against them in the event of misconduct which is serious, but does not entail bribery and corruption. This is a complex area. The inter-departmental working group set up to consider the recommendation by the Committee on Standards in Public Life in this area, with the assistance of the Criminal Law Commissioner as recommended by the Committee on Standards in Public Life, is looking carefully at the inter-relationship between any new offence, existing offences, civil remedies and disciplinary codes. It is also taking into account proposals being developed by my right hon. Friend, the Deputy Prime Minister and the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions on the establishment of a new Standards Board for local government and the creation of a new code of conduct for local councillors. As with corruption, this inter-departmental working group also expects to complete its work by the end of the year.

Green Transport

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 27 March 1998, Official Report, column 302, on departmental transport arrangements, what further changes he has made. [54014]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: My Department is working towards the target announced in the White Paper 'A New Deal for Transport', that all headquarters buildings and main buildings occupied by Executive Agencies should have green transport plans by March 1999, and all other key buildings by March 2000. These targets have been incorporated into my Department's Greening Operations Policy. The policy also includes the following aim:

"to minimise the impact of the Department's travel arrangements on the environment by reducing the level of unnecessary travel and encouraging those who have to travel to do so in a way that minimises the environmental impact".

Listening Devices

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what guidance he has given to (a) police forces and (b) MI5 in respect of the use of long-range microphones and the civil liberty implications thereof; [54193]

(2) if it is the practice that the use by (a) police and (b) MI5 of listening devices which do not require his prior authorisation, of comparable effectiveness of those which do, are used only against targets and in cases where authorisation for those listening devices which do require such authorisation might reasonably be expected to be forthcoming; and if he will make a statement; [54574]

(3) what steps he has taken to ensure that listening devices not requiring approval by warrant are not used by (a) the police and (b) MI5 to conduct exercises that would be unlikely to be approved by warrant were they conducted by listening devices that did require such authorisation; and if he will make a statement; [54573]

(4) what steps he intends to take to ensure those listening devices presently available to the police and the security services but not covered by legislation requiring specific authorisation before their use are brought within the remit of legislation to require such specific authorisation to be obtained. [54192]

Mr. Michael: The deployment by the police and the Security Service of listening devices in circumstances not covered by the Intelligence Services Act 1994 or the Police Act 1977 (when implemented) is an operational matter for chief constables and the Director General respectively.

The Association of Chief Police Officers is overseeing a project to establish national standards for police and Customs activity in relation to a range of covert law enforcement activity. The Security Service operates in accordance with its statutory functions and subject to statutory oversight. In accordance with long standing policy, I do not propose to comment on matters relating to its operations, including the equipment and sensitive techniques which it employs.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department under what circumstances warrants for interception are agreed to where the prevention or detection of serious crime is not a factor. [54575]

Mr. Straw: The Interception of Communications Act 1985 provides that the Secretary of State may issue an interception warrant if he considers that it is necessary in the interests of national security, for the purpose of preventing or detecting serious crime or for the purpose of safeguarding the economic wellbeing of the United Kingdom. In deciding whether a warrant is necessary, the Secretary of State is required to consider whether the information could reasonably be acquired by other means. And, where the purpose of the warrant is to safeguard the economic wellbeing of the United Kingdom, the information which is required must relate to the acts or intentions of persons outside the British Islands.

Departmental Publications

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of his Department's publications have been made available in (a) Braille, (b) audio tape and (c) large print in 1997–98; and what percentage of the total number of publications this represents. [54274]

Mr. Straw: Information on the numbers of documents published in alternative formats such as audio tapes will normally be considered by officials with responsibility for the documents in question. This information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Driving Offences

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what has been the average penalty for (a) causing death by dangerous driving and (b) careless driving in each of the last 10 years; [53302]

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of charges of causing death by dangerous driving that are reduced to careless driving during the course of trials. [53301]

Mr. Michael: Information taken from the Home Office Court Proceedings database on average penalties is given in table A.

No estimate has been made of the number of charges of causing death by dangerous driving that are reduced to careless driving during the course of trials. Table B, which uses data from the same database, compares the number of persons committed for trial from the magistrates' courts to the Crown Court for these two offences with the number tried in the Crown Court.

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of road deaths resulted in convictions for (a) manslaughter, (b) causing death by dangerous driving, (c) careless driving, (d) causing death by careless driving under the influence of drink or drugs and (e) no conviction, in the last year for which figures are available. [53300]

Mr. Michael: There were 3,598 road deaths for England and Wales in 1996. The number of prosecutions and convictions in 1996 are shown in the table for the offences specified, and the respective proportion of all road deaths.

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if juries are informed of the maximum penalties attached to the offences of (a) careless driving and (b) dangerous driving. [53303]

Mr. Michael: The jury's role is solely to determine the facts of the case and to reach a verdict. Juries are not made aware of the consequences of conviction.

Schengen Information System

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his document, "UK Presidency of the EU, Half Way Mark", if he will make a statement on the application of openness to UK nationals under the Schengen Information System. [54951]

Mr. George Howarth: Schengen, and the Schengen Information System in particular, is currently an inter-governmental arrangement outside the structures of the European Union. The United Kingdom is not a party to, or a participant in, Schengen.

When the Treaty of Amsterdam comes into force, the Schengen arrangements will be brought within the structures of the European Union but will not apply to the United Kingdom unless we choose to take part. The arrangements for data protection and subject access in respect of the Schengen Information System, once within the European Union, have not yet been decided.

Justice and Home Affairs Council

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place a copy of the minutes of the 19 March Justice and Home Affairs Council on new openness measures in the Library. [54949]

Mr. Straw: The openness measures agreed at the Justice and Home Affairs Council on 19 March did not extend to Council minutes, which are not made publicly available in the interests of protecting the confidentiality of Council proceedings. But I reported on the outcome of the meeting in the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Slough (Fiona Mactaggart) on 8 April 1998, Official Report, columns 256–67. The openness measures which were under discussion by the Justice and Home Affairs Council are set out in Council document 6407/98 (JAI 6), a copy of which was placed in the Library following the Council meeting.

Household Insurance (No-claims Bonus)

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the likely impact of the trends in the numbers of no-claims bonuses for household insurance on reporting rates of household crimes. [54822]

Mr. Michael: It is not possible to determine the effect of trends in the number of no-claims bonuses on reporting rates of household crimes. This is because there are no centrally held figures on the proportion of household insurance policies that have a no-claims bonus, or on whether the number has changed over time.

Evidence from the 1996 British Crime Survey suggests, however, that any drop in claims, for whatever reason, is likely to reduce levels of reporting. Victims of nearly three-quarters of incidents not reported to the police said they would have reported if they had made a claim.

No claim was made in about two-thirds of incidents covered by insurance. Protecting a no-claims bonus was the reason given in only a fifth of these. There are no comparative figures to assess whether this proportion is higher than it would have been in the past.

Active Community Task Force

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current membership of the Prime Minister's task force on the active community; and when it will next meet. [54487]

Mr. Michael: The task force has not yet been established.

Metropolitan Police (Malpractice)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received about the level of malpractice within the Metropolitan Police. [54037]

Mr. Michael: We have received a number of representations from hon. Members and from members of the public on subjects related to corruption within the Metropolitan Police.

The Commissioner of Police for the Metropolis has publicly stated his determination to tackle corruption in the Metropolitan Police. The Commissioner tells me that, unfortunately, while the overwhelming majority of his officers are honest, professional and brave, and will never do anything wrong throughout their service, there is a small number who are involved in corrupt, dishonest and unethical behaviour. The actions of these officers sap the morale of their honest colleagues and undermine the confidence of the public in the police service.

My right hon. Friend and I are regularly updated by the Commissioner and the Deputy Commissioner on their progress in tackling corruption in the Metropolitan Police.

Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Constabulary will be conducting a review into integrity in police forces in England, Wales and Northern Ireland. I welcome this review, which will inform chief constables of good practice and ensure corrective action so that the high standards of service and integrity set by British police officers will be maintained.

DNA Techniques

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his letter FC/98 333/1039/3 of 18 June 1998, what progress has been made by the Forensic Science Service in exploring how the police might utilise DNA techniques. [54053]

Mr. Michael: The National DNA Database was established in April 1995. The success of the database has stimulated joint research between the Forensic Science Service and police forces on how to make best use of the information that DNA analysis can provide to support crime investigation. Some progress has been made in developing tests that may help to determine the race, hair and eye colour, for example, of the suspect from a stain left at the scene of a crime. Research presently underway with several police forces is aimed at evaluating the usefulness of this information in helping to identify suspects.

Prisoners (Prescription Drugs)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to introduce new guidelines on prescription drugs for prisoners, with particular reference to (a) Largactil, (b) Melleril and (c) other neuroleptic drugs. [54213]

Mr. George Howarth: Published Prison Service healthcare standards set out guidelines on the prescription of medicinal drugs to prisoners. The guidelines require prison doctors to exercise appropriate clinical judgment, and for Prison Service establishments to provide a safe, efficient and cost-effective pharmaceutical service to prisoners which complies with legal requirements, professional standards and ethical codes, commensurate with those in the National Health Service.

There are no plans at present to revise these guidelines.

Prisoners (Psychiatric Help)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to review the quality and the amount of psychiatric help provided to prisoners with problems of mental ill health. [54214]

Mr. George Howarth: The provision of mental healthcare in prisons was reviewed by the independent standing Health Advisory Committee (HAC) for the Prison Service, which published a report containing 16 recommendations for improvements last autumn. Implementation of the HAC's recommendations is being considered by the Joint Prison Service/National Health Service Executive working group, established to advise on options for improving prisoners' health care. The joint working group has been looking at, among other improvements, ways of increasing the contributions made by the NHS to mental health services for prisoners.

Reasoning and Rehabilitation Programme

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the Reasoning and Rehabilitation programme, in Holloway and Cookham Wood; and what plans he has to extend this scheme. [54215]

Mr. George Howarth: Reasoning and Rehabilitation is a nationally accredited offending behaviour programme. Its delivery at individual establishments is reviewed annually as part of the Prison Service's offending behaviour programme accreditation process. The 1996–97 review showed that Cookham Wood and Holloway are implementing the programme well.

To maintain the quality of programme delivery, the Prison Service modifies the number of successful completions of the programme by prisoners by reference to an implementation quality rating. In 1997–98, the adjusted figure for Cookham Wood was 14 completions and for Holloway 20.9. Under plans made before the outcome of the Comprehensive Spending Review was announced, Cookham Wood was predicting 24 completions for 1998–99 and Holloway 21.

The Prison Service plans to increase significantly the number of completions of accredited offending behaviour programmes across the whole estate over the next three years.

Prisoners (Statistics)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are (a) the numbers and (b) the proportions of prisoners who are (i) Asian and (ii) Afro-Caribbean. [54212]

Mr. George Howarth: The latest available information on the ethnicity of prisoners is for 30 June 1998 and is given in the table

Percentage of prisoners in prison by ethnic group on 30 June 1998

Ethnic group	Number	Percentage of total prison population

Prison Medical Staff

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has to ensure that the qualifications of medical staff in prisons are parallel to those of the National Health Service. [54217]

Mr. George Howarth: The Directorate of Health Care is working with an expert committee, comprising representatives of the Royal Colleges of General Practitioners, Medicine and Psychiatry, to establish a Health Care Standard for the continuing professional development of doctors working in prisons in England and Wales. This new Standard will include essential person specifications and competencies for the employment of prison doctors.

Women's Prisons (Staff)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to review the numbers of women doctors, nurses and gynaecologists employed in women's prisons. [54216]

Mr. George Howarth: The overwhelming majority of nurses employed in women's prisons are female. The number of women doctors employed in women's prisons can vary due to the use of external general practitioners and other locum doctors. The most recent available figures show that 10 out of 31 doctors employed in women's or mixed prisons were female.

Women prisoners who wish to see a female doctor or nurse have their wishes met wherever possible. A Women's Health Care Standard is being developed, which will include a requirement for protocols, to be agreed locally, for women prisoners who wish to consult female doctors or nurses to have their wishes respected.

Prison Officers (Statistics)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are (a) the numbers and (b) the proportions of prison officers who are (i) Asian and (ii) Afro-Caribbean. [54211]

Mr. George Howarth: The information requested is as follows:

The number of prison officer grades who are

(i) Asian: 159

(ii) Afro-Caribbean: 172

The proportion of prison officer grades who are

(i) Asian: 0.68 per cent.

(ii) Afro-Caribbean: 0.73 per cent.

Primary Purpose Rule

Sir Norman Fowler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his current estimate of the effect that the abolition of the primary purpose rule has had upon the number of spouses granted leave to enter the United Kingdom for a probationary year prior to settlement; and if he will make a statement. [54047]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I will write to the right hon. Member.

Police Service

Sir Norman Fowler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the strength of the police service in England and Wales, broken down to show (a) police and (b) civil staff (i) in total and (ii) by police force. [54045]

Mr. Michael: At the end of March 1998, there were in total 126,944 police officers and 53,480 civilian support staff. This is 214 fewer police officers and 469 more civilians than there were on 31 March 1997. The table sets out the information requested.

These are units set up between forces to provide a common service. An example of this is the Regional Driving School at Devizes

Age of Consent

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to alter the provisions in the Sex Offenders Act 1997 relating to those convicted for crimes which would be legal if the age of consent were reduced to 16 years for homosexual acts. [53927]

Mr. Michael: The issue will be considered in due course.

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to issue new guidance on the sentencing of men aged between 16 and 18 years for engaging in consenting homosexual acts in private. [53928]

Mr. Michael: None. Sentencing guidelines are a matter for the Court of Appeal, which provides guidance on the appropriate sentencing range for criminal offences through its judgments in individual cases.

The Crime and Disorder Bill [Lords] also contains provisions to build on and improve the current system of sentencing guidelines. Provisions in the Bill place a statutory duty on the Court of Appeal to consider producing sentencing guidelines. There will also be a new sentencing advisory panel established by the Bill, which will give advice to the Court of Appeal on sentencing.

Mohammed Al Fayed

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to make a decision on the application for British citizenship by Mr. Mohammed Al Fayed. [54903]

Mr. Straw: It is not our practice to comment on individual applications. Decisions are taken when we have completed our consideration of whether an applicant meets the statutory requirements for British citizenship.

Prison Farms

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the privatisation of HM prison farms. [54110]

Mr. George Howarth: There are no plans to privatise prison farms. However, a number of prisons are involved in Private Finance Initiative projects or partnership agreements.

In May 1997, the Prisons Board agreed to the recommendations of the Prison Service Agricultural Review team, which was commissioned to consider the need and size of prison agricultural activities. The implementation of these recommendations will result in agricultural land which is no longer required by the Prison Service being sold, and the phasing out of potato and pig production. Any staff employment places in these particular enterprises would be absorbed into other activities. Work is continuing with the monitoring of dairy herds and developing the role of vegetable distribution centres.

The review recommended continued involvement with private sector companies. The primary purpose of seeking such partnerships is to offer good value for money in providing prisoners with work, maximising current unrealised production and, more importantly, the injection of capital funds.

The largest current Private Finance Initiative project operating in the prison farms sector involves mushroom packaging at Kirkham prison. Discussions are taking place on establishing other such enterprises in a number of prisons.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on livestock and produce grown and reared in prisons for sale on the open market. [54111]

Mr. George Howarth: There are a number of commercial sales generated from agricultural and horticultural activities in prisons. They are regarded as sources of income which can be offset against the cost of running the establishment from which the sales have been generated. Prison Service policy is that prices obtained should be in line with the local, and, where appropriate, national, price for a comparable product.

Immigration

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what date the presenting officer's Unit in his Department received the papers from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office relating to immigration appeal GV100/46408/AP; and if he will make a statement. [54279]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The explanatory statement was sent from the British High Commission, Islamabad, on 5 February. It was received within my Department on 17 February, it was processed and forwarded to the Immigration Appellate Authority on 7 April for the appeal to be listed.

Race Relations Act

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to assess the recommendations relating to Employment in the Public Service, as contained in the document Proposals for Change, submitted to him by the Commission for Racial Equality, on the reform of the Race Relations Act 1976. [53242]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Commission for Racial Equality's Third Review of the Race Relations Act 1976 contains a large number of proposals for amending the Act. My right hon. Friend announced on 23 June that the Home Office would welcome views on these and other proposals he has received. This consultation period will run until 6 November. The Government will reach a view on all the proposals once the consultation has finished.

Written Answers to Questions

Wednesday 2 September 1998

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Press Office

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many people currently work for his Department's Press Office. [54468]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 31 July 1998]: There are 23 staff, including administrative support, currently working in the Department of Trade and Industry's Press Office. In addition, there are 6 vacant posts in the process of being filled.

EU Working Time Directive

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will defer the coming into force of the Working Time Directive from 1 October 1998 to 1 January 1999 to allow more time for consideration of the implementing regulations. [54031]

Mr. Ian McCartney [holding answer 31 July 1998]: The timetable for implementation was announced in February 1998. We published draft regulations for consultation in April 1998. We laid regulations on 30 July 1998, which will come into force on 1 October 1998. There has been plenty of time for consideration of the Government's proposals.

Foreign Coal Producers (Subsidies)

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proposals his Department has to take action in respect of the subsidies given to German and Spanish coal producers by their Governments. [54238]

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action he proposes to take in respect of the amount of subsidies given to German and Spanish coal producers by their Governments. [54000]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 31 July 1998]: In the case of Spain we have formally complained to the European Commission about discriminatory application of limits on the sulphur content of coals from different ECSC resources, and have received assurances that UK coal will be treated on the same basis as Spanish coal. This should open the Spanish market to a range of English deep-mined coals.

We have also laid a formal complaint against Spanish state aid for coal questioning whether the required criteria of ultimate viability has been fulfilled for all those producers receiving operating aid under the ECSC Coal State Aid code. We are pressing for confirmation from the Spanish authorities that a subsidy of 1 peseta per kilowatt/hour available to Spanish power-station operators burning Spanish coal is equally available in respect of UK coal.

In the case of Germany, we conveyed a complaint to the European Commission on behalf of Celtic Energy Ltd. setting out how state aid provided to Sophia Jacoba and Ibbenburen mines led to a distortion in the anthracite market in the ECSC and particularly in the UK. Following an investigation the Commission found there had been abuse of state aid and reached a decision on 29 July requiring repayment of nearly DM 20 million state aid by the German producers. This decision provides UK producers with an assurance that such unfair practices will not recur and should help to open up continental markets for competitive UK exports of anthracite.

We made representations to the Commission in March 1998 on the proposed merger of the three remaining German hard coal producers, urging the need for full transparency of future state aid, and for further consideration to be given of the assets being acquired by Ruhrkohle. The Commission approved the structure of the merger of the three companies on 29 July but subject to conditions on divestment and segregation of the company's import activities.

Formal complaints against German state aid for power station anthracite have been submitted by Consolidated Coal and Evans and Reid (the agents for Tower Colliery) and RJB Mining in respect of state aids for German coal production more generally. In June 1998 the Commission approved state aid of DM 10.4 billion for German coal production and 438 billion pesetas for Spanish coal production. I understand that RJB Mining is lodging an appeal to the European Court against these Decisions.

The Government are monitoring closely the commercial negotiations UK producers are conducting on the export of power-station coal and briquettes to the German market in competition with state-aided German coal.

It is important that the Commission interprets the Coal State Aids Code strictly and we will continue to press for an open and competitive coal market in Europe.

Electricity Industry

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on his policy in respect of further vertical integration in the electricity industry; and if he will make a statement. [54001]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 31 July 1998]: Decisions on company structure in the electricity sector are commercial matters subject to any restrictions imposed through licences and, in the case of mergers, to consideration under the provisions of the Fair Trading Act 1973.

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the reforms which the Government propose to make to the price-setting mechanism for the pool price of electricity. [54462]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 31 July 1998]: The Director General of Electricity Supply published his Report on the Review of Electricity Trading Arrangements on 29 July. I shall need to consider the proposals he has put forward before deciding what action to take.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the anticipated demand for new electricity generation capacity, taking account of granted consents and anticipated retirement of coal-fired and Magnox plant. [54893]

Mr. Battle: Retirement of all existing coal, oil, or nuclear plant will be a commercial matter for its owners, subject to approval by the regulator who may require it to be offered for sale. Need for new plant will depend on retirement decisions as well as on future demand for electricity.

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what target he has set for the proportion of electricity to be produced from renewable sources following the Kyoto agreement. [54823]

Mr. Battle: The Government are committed to a new and strong drive to develop renewable energy sources in line with our manifesto commitment. To this end, I am reviewing policy towards new and renewable sources of energy, including consideration of what would be necessary and practicable to achieve 10 per cent. of UK electricity needs from renewables by the year 2010, and how renewables can make an effective contribution to meeting our national and international commitments for future greenhouse gas reductions. The review, which is nearing completion, is examining the status of all the new and renewable energy technologies in the UK industry, and their future prospects in both home and export markets. It is also considering what further research, development, and demonstration is needed for the longer term. I expect to announce the outcome of the review later this year.

Coal Industry

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the likely number of job losses in the coal industry over the next three years. [54004]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 31 July 1998]: Levels of employment in the coal-mining industry will depend upon commercial decisions taken by the private sector coal companies.

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is his estimate of the number of people that will be employed in the coal industry in 2002. [54824]

Mr. Battle: Levels of employment in the coal-mining industry will depend upon commercial decisions taken by the private sector coal companies.

Trade Unions

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will exempt small and medium sized businesses from his proposed statutory trade union recognition requirements. [54457]

Mr. Ian McCartney [holding answer 31 July 1998]: As stated in the Fairness at Work White Paper, the Government propose to exempt firms employing twenty or fewer employees from the statutory recognition procedure.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will raise the threshold for the size of firm required to recognise a trade union. [54456]

Mr. Ian McCartney [holding answer 31 July 1998]: The Government's current policy on the threshold is as set out in the Fairness at Work White Paper, which was published on 21 May 1998.

Millennium Dome (Sponsorship)

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, (1) pursuant to his oral answer to the hon. Member for Buckingham (Mr. Bercow), of 27 July 1998, Official Report, column 14, if he will list the amount of the contributions made by (i) British Telecom, (ii) BSkyB, (iii) Manpower, (iv) Tesco, (v) Marks and Spencer, (vi) British Airways and (vii) BAA plc; [54431]

(2) pursuant to his oral answer of 27 July 1998, Official Report, column 14, to the hon. Member for Buckingham (Mr. Bercow), if he will list each private sector sponsor and the amount of the contribution; [54432]

(3) pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member of Pontefract and Castleford (Yvette Cooper) of 24 February 1998, Official Report, column 204, if he will list those companies which had made commitments coming up for detailed negotiation which are now sponsors and the amount of their sponsorship; [54434]

(4) pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Pontefract and Castleford (Yvette Cooper) of 24 February 1998, Official Report, column 204, if he will list those of the 40 potential sponsors who have now made contractual commitments to sponsorship. [54433]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 31 July 1998]: As announced by the New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) in its press release on 24 February 1998, the total sponsorship support from these companies for the Millennium Experience is £58.8 million. Press releases were issued on the same day by British Telecom (BT), BSkyB, Manpower, and Tesco—the first four Founding Partner sponsors. BT's said that it was

"investing £12 million in the national Millennium programme",

BSkyB's said that it will be "committing a minimum of £12 million to the project",

Manpower's said that its president

"confirmed the £12 million", and Tesco's said that their total

"investment would be £12 million".

British Airways and BAA together, as confirmed in the NMEC's February press release, are providing £10.8 million. Marks & Spencer was announced as the fifth Founding Partner on 1 June. The Millennium Experience project, and its cash budget, incorporates both the Dome at Greenwich and a linked programme of country-wide initiatives, activities, and events running prior to and during 2000. The Founding Partner and other sponsorships span both aspects of the Experience.

Others who have confirmed their support for the Millennium Experience are the Corporation of London, whose press notice on 24 February stated that its £6 million sponsorship is on the basis that it is matched by City business; GEC and BAe, who have both been supporters of the project since its early development phase in 1996. Additionally, Camelot are official ticket distributors through their Lottery terminals.

I cannot at this stage name other companies in sponsorship discussions with the NMEC, or the potential level of sponsorship support under discussion or negotiation in particular cases. I must respect the commercial confidentiality expected by the companies concerned where they do not wish, at this stage, to announce their involvement. To do otherwise would jeopardise the NMEC's negotiating position and, ultimately, the success of the project.

Millennium Dome (Sponsorship)

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Minister without Portfolio, pursuant to his answer of 17 July 1998, Official Report, column 316, on the Millennium Experience, what incentives he offers to individuals, companies or other organisations to sponsor zones within the Millennium Dome which are not available to the New Millennium Experience Company; what is the minimum monetary commitment required of them; and when that has to be made available to the New Millennium Experience Company. [52176]

Mr. Mandelson: The New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) is responsible for all matters relating to sponsorship of the Millennium Experience. Its strategy is to deliver its testing sponsorship target through a range of sponsorship categories each with terms and conditions and benefits commensurate with the level of sponsorship involved. There is no minimum monetary commitment required. The timing of when the sponsorship is made available is a matter for the Company and the individual sponsor.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Minister without Portfolio how much has now been committed by sponsors to the Millennium Experience; and how much of this is (a) in cash and (b) in kind. [51941]

Mr. Mandelson: The New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) has announced a total of £87 million and has commitment at Board level from other sponsors, whose own commercial considerations require that details remain unannounced at this stage. This takes the level of sponsorship secured to above £100 million. Whilst the detailed negotiations between the NMEC and the companies are concerned with progress towards contractual terms, it is not possible to state the split between cash and in kind.

Energy Policy

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will make a statement on energy policy. [54236]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 31 July 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry to the right hon. Member for Wokingham (Mr. Redwood) on 29 July 1998, Official Report, column 354.

Competitiveness Working Parties

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the current membership of the competitiveness working party on increasing business investment; when it last met; what matters were discussed; and when it will next meet. [54506]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 31 July 1998]: The UK Competitiveness Working Party on Investment last met on Monday 15 June under the Chairmanship of Lord Hollick to discuss the part business might play in implementing various of its earlier recommendations. Current membership is as follows:

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the current membership of the competitiveness working party on promoting the best of best practice; when it last met; what matters were discussed; and when it will next meet. [54508]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 31 July 1998]: The members of the Competitiveness UK Best Practice Working Party are Alec Daly (CBI), James Dyson (Dyson Domestic Appliances), Sir Tom Farmer (Kwik Fit), Jackie Kernaghan (Forte UK), Tina Mason (Dutton Engineering), Professor Colin New (Cranfield School of Management), Amber Paul (Caparo Industries), Dr. Rosemary Radcliffe (Coopers & Lybrand), John Saunders (Business Link—Hereford and Worcester) Fiona Skinner (RF Brookes), Cob Stenham and Lynn Williams (TUC).

No further meetings of the Working Party are currently planned.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the current membership of the competitiveness working party on making the most of the information age; when it last met and what matters were discussed; and when will it next meet. [54509]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 31 July 1998]: The membership of the Information Age Competitiveness Working Party is as follows:

Barbara Roche MP, Minister for Small Firms, Trade and Industry (Chair)

Sir Jeremy Beecham, Chairman, Local Government Association

Alan Calder, Chief Executive, Business Link London City Partners

Julia Collins, Partner, Coopers & Lybrand

Tony Young, Secretary General, Communication Workers Union

The last meeting was held on 25 June 1998, when Working Party members discussed a range of ideas on ways of promoting the potential Competitiveness Benefits of Information and Communication Technologies for UK business, particularly small firms. No further meetings of the Working Party are currently planned.

Multilateral Agreement on Investment

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish reports of the unofficial negotiations on the Multilateral Agreement on Investment which have taken place since the Ministerial meetings in April; and if he will make a statement. [54249]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 31 July 1998]: My hon. Friend the Minister for Small Firms, Trade and Industry reported to the Commons Select Committee on European Legislation on the negotiations on the Multilateral Agreement on Investment (MAI) on 8 July. She undertook to keep the Committee informed of further developments in negotiations.

Wide informal discussions have taken place, both with other negotiating countries and interested parties, but no formal records are kept of these contacts.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to ensure that hon. Members are given access to the full list of exemptions for each signatory of the Multilateral Agreement on Investment. [54250]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 31 July 1998]: On signing the Multilateral Agreement on Investment (MAI) each country's list of exemptions will be published. At this stage in the negotiations, however, the full list of country exemptions is not available. Countries submitted their lists as confidential documents and we therefore cannot release them without the consent of the countries concerned. The UK, however, has always made its list available and has been placed in the Library of the House.

My officials will explore with other countries negotiating with MAI the possibility of making their lists public and, if consent is given, I will ensure these are also placed in the Library.

Balance of Trade

Mr. Stevenson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the balance of trade in (a) steel, (b) ceramics and (c) coal in (i) volume and (ii) value in each of the last five years. [53238]

Mrs. Roche: The information is given in the following table:

UK balance of trade in iron and steel, ceramics and coal 1993-97

Year	Iron and steel	Ceramics	Coal

Export Promoter Scheme

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the operation and cost of the Export Promoter Scheme in each year since 1990. [54162]

Mr. Wilson: The Export Promoter Initiative was launched in late 1992 as a partnership between industry and Government which would spearhead the UK's efforts to win overseas business. The initiative involves seconding senior executives from British companies with appropriate international trade expertise to the Department for about two years. Their role as Export Promoters (EPs) is to bring to bear their experience of particular countries and sectors and use this impartially to advise and assist both SMEs and larger enterprises. The initiative is now a rolling programme of recruitment with EPs being replaced as secondments are completed.

Employers are asked to bear their secondees' payroll costs although in practice the department has to make a financial contribution by negotiation in 3 our of every 4 appointments. The department provides support budgets for EPs for their travel, subsistence, promotions, etc.

Since its early days, when the target number of EPs was 100, the initiative has settled to a current level of about 80 EPs on secondment at any one time.

The cost of the scheme each year since its inception has been as follows:

	£ million
1993–94	2.0
1994–95	5.6
1995–96	6.3
1996–97	5.8
1997–98	4.6

An evaluation report of the Export Promoter Initiative in 1997 found it to be highly valued by UK business, and the current Government remain strongly committed to the Initiative.

Export Forum

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the Export Forum's recommendations as to target markets. [53462]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 31 July 1998]: These recommendations are being implemented in the new scheme of Support for Exhibitions and Seminars Abroad (SESA), which was announced on 25 March 1998, and in the rolling programme of target market campaigns which we are launching this year. Some, such as the Export Explorer for Western Europe, have already been introduced and others will follow in the Autumn. As recommended by the Export Forum, the list of target markets will be kept under regular review.

Export Opportunities (Defence and Security) Service

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the support provided by his Department to the Export Opportunities (Defence and Security) Service operated by the Defence Manufacturers Association and the Association of Police and Public Security Suppliers in the last year for which figures are available. [54166]

Mr. Wilson: The establishment of the Export Opportunities (Defence and Security) Service was one of the winning projects announced by the President of the Board of Trade on 29 May 1997 in the Government's Sector Challenge initiative. The Department is providing support of up to £101,625 over a period of three years. £8,587 in grant was paid in 1997–98. £10,699 in grant has been paid so far in this financial year.

Science Budget

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the spending recipients of the science budget in the year 1997–98; what the allocation will be for 1998–99; and what are the planned figures for (a) 1999–2000 and (b) 2000–2001. [54580]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 31 July 1998]: The information for 1997–98 and 1998–99 is as follows:

Science budget allocations

£ million

	Allocation 1997–98	Allocation 1998–99
BBSRC	183.300	186.549
ESRC	64.896	67.450

Because of the Comprehensive Spending Review there were no specific planning figures for the subsequent years. The allocations for 1999–2000 and 2000–01 will be announced in the autumn.

Competitiveness Advisory Group

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the current membership of his Competitiveness Advisory Group; when it last met and what matters were discussed; and when it will next meet. [54512]

Perwegn Warsi, Managing Director, S&A Foods

The Competitiveness Advisory Group last met on 30 June 1998. Three main issues were discussed: the progress of the Competitiveness UK White Paper; a report from the Small Firms Working Group; and the competitiveness strategy for the South East Region. A date has not yet been fixed for the next meeting of the Group.

Departmental Environmental Policy

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what environmental activities her Green Minister has undertaken since being appointed. [50064]

Mr. Battle: I have considered "environmental-related issues" on a day-to-day basis, reflecting their importance in the work of DTI, and the Government's commitment to the overall objective of sustainable development. I have taken a number of steps to ensure that sustainable development is properly integrated into all of the Department's work. This includes: circulation of copies of the recently published guidance on environmental appraisal to all directorates and to staff at all levels, to be supported by staff training sessions; a series of seminars with prominent speakers from industry and NGOs to raise the level of understanding of sustainable development issues and the implications of our work; and a Sustainable Development network throughout the DTI and Government Offices to provide a focal point for two-way communication with the 50-strong Environment Directorate which provides a central contact point for advice and information to all staff on environmental issues. My Department has contributed to the revision of the UK Sustainable Development Strategy and work is underway on the development of a DTI sustainable development strategy.

Virtually all of the DTI's responsibilities, from energy, trade, and science and technology policy through to sectorial sponsorship (including that in respect of the environmental and waste management industries) to consumer affairs are related to activities which have impacts on the environment, and implications for sustainable development which can be significant.

I have made sustainable development a priority across my science and research portfolio, in particular with regard to the Foresight Programme. Through its identification of a vision for the future and the development of practical initiatives to realise that vision, it can make a substantial contribution in the life of this Parliament to our long term policy objectives. Foresight is already promoting a number of initiatives which have the potential to make an important contribution to sustainable development. For example, the Foresight LINK Awards launched on 1 September 1997 have a declared preference for projects addressing the broad theme of "A Cleaner World". Another Foresight initiative, the "Foresight Clear Zones" programme aims to help in the development of technology that will improve local air quality and reduce congestion within our urban centres, making them cleaner, but at the same time accessible and commercially thriving.

Awards have been made to six projects underway across the country that demonstrate "technology for liveable cities". The "Sustainable Technologies for a Cleaner World" conference on 19 May 1998, which I addressed, raised awareness of the market opportunities presented by the key environmental challenges of the future. The conference focused on future markets for cleaner technologies and processes and environmental products which will exist in 2010, in the UK and globally. It considered how the UK should best respond to these opportunities through R&D and other necessary actions.

I have promoted and provided practical help and support for the UK Environmental goods, services and technologies industry at home and overseas through the Joint DTI/DETR Environmental Markets Unit (JEMU).

JEMU has identified a number of significant overseas markets for the UK environmental industry and is helping the sector to exploit the commercial opportunities which these markets represent.

On 18 March 1998 my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment and I launched a business plan for JEMU which outlines the way in which the Unit will work with the environmental industry over the next three years.

Finally, I am developing systems for environmental appraisal of polices and programmes and implementing greening government operations. I have attended two Green Minister's meetings, a bilateral meeting with the Minister for the Environment, and gave oral evidence to the Environmental Audit Committee in relation to their Greening Government inquiry.

Millennium Dome (HFCs)

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what air-conditioning units which do not emit hydrofluorocarbons were considered for use in the Dome; and if he will make a statement. [51290]

Mr. Mandelson: Despite an open and flexible tender process, only one proposal for a non-HFC cooling system for the Dome was submitted to the New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC). This proposed the use of ammonia refrigerant. However, the NMEC did consider a number of other possible cooling systems during the design process and reviewed options again following suggestions made by Greenpeace. In each case it was concluded that, given the unique nature of the Millennium Experience, the tight deadlines and fixed budget, the units that have now been selected offer the safest, most flexible solution. The chiller units for the Dome are hermetically sealed so as to give zero emissions of HFC in normal operation. Accepting that actual leakage is dependent upon maintenance protocols, detection and repair procedures, the NMEC is committed to a realistic target of less than 1 per cent. leakage during the year of the Experience's operation.

Millennium Dome (Exhibit Zone)

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what progress he has made in defining British characteristics for the purposes of the @ Now Zone of the Millennium Dome. [48833]

Mr. Mandelson: It is not the New Millennium Experience Company's (NMEC) aim or intention to define British characteristics in the UK@Now exhibit zone. The content of the zone aims to explore the UK population's view of themselves and their country, and the perceptions of others about the UK. Research and consultation which the NMEC will be undertaking will ensure that the views of the UK public are reflected in this zone.

Millennium Experience (Environmental Impact Assessments)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Minister without Portfolio, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Islington, North (Mr. Corbyn) of 29 June 1998, Official Report, column 67, what environmental impact assessments he has commissioned of the Millennium Dome and associated developments including parking and travel arrangements, for the new Millennium Experience exhibition at Greenwich; and what plans he has to apply the green Government policy guidelines to further developments at the Greenwich site. [51406]

Mr. Mandelson: The planning application for the Millennium Experience at Greenwich submitted to the London Borough of Greenwich in 1996 included detailed assessments of the likely environmental, traffic and other impacts of the project. In addition to this the New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) has prepared an Environmental Plan setting out an integrated programme of sustainable site management for the Millennium Experience site. This plan has been accepted by the London Borough of Greenwich as the basis for the delivery of the NMEC's environmental commitment. The plan is regularly reviewed and updated to reflect the evolving nature of the project. Additionally, the NMEC liaise regularly with the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions and take into account all relevant Government guidance and policy.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Diplomatic Staff

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the (a) individual and (b) combined total capital value of each of the UK's diplomatic posts abroad. [54681]

Mr. Fatchett: I shall write to my hon. Friend shortly and place copies of the letter in the Libraries of the House.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Overseas Property

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the properties (a) owned and (b) rented or leased by her Department outside the United Kingdom; the purposes for which they are designated and the annual running costs for each property. [54442]

Mr. Foulkes: The Department for International Development owns the following three domestic properties outside the United Kingdom each of which are used to house aid personnel and have an average annual running cost of approximately £1,000:

11 Hendikz way, Harare

11 Brentford, Harare

20 Epping road, Harare

Domestic properties are purchased only where there are significant cost advantages. A large number of domestic properties are rented on behalf of aid personnel overseas details of which could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

DFID leases office accommodation directly with local landlords in Pretoria and New Delhi. Annual running costs of each are approximately £400,000 and £100,000 respectively. Other overseas office accommodation is either shared or sub-leased from the FCO. A contractual Agreement is being negotiated with the FCO.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made by Her Majesty's Government in relation to the employment impact assessment of increased taxation and advertising controls on tobacco products prior to the publication of the White Papers. [53689]

Ms Jowell: Discussions are taking place with interested parties on all aspects of the White Paper, which will include a Regulatory Impact Assessment (RIA). Matters covered by the EC Tobacco Advertising Directive will be assessed in an updated RIA before being implemented in UK law.

Mr. Walter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the dates on which meetings have taken place between (a) Ministers and (b) officials and (i) the British Medical Association, (ii) Action on Smoking and Health, (iii) the Health Education Authority, (iv) the Tobacco Manufacturers Association, (v) representatives of tobacco retailers and (vi) trade unionists representing tobacco workers, in connection with the preparation of proposals that may be contained in the prospective White Paper on tobacco control. [53727]

Ms Jowell [holding answer 30 July 1998]: Ministers and officials have met, and are continuing to meet, representatives from the organisations listed above and others. A full list of the organisations with which the Government have consulted, as work on the Tobacco White Paper has progressed, will be in the White Paper when published.

Task Forces

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the task forces and advisory groups composed of independent members which have been set up by his Department since 1 May 1997, indicating in each case (a) their remit, (b) their membership, (c) how many members are (i) scientists, (ii) engineers, (iii) small business people or representatives of small businesses, (d) any remuneration members receive for their services and (e) their budget. [53289]

Ms Jowell [holding answer 30 July 1998]: Copies of the information requested have been placed in the Library.

Continence Services

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if his Department will ensure that continence services are not commercially retailed by providers of continence products. [54843]

Ms Jowell: In common with all retail organisations, continence product suppliers are free to make decisions on the products and services that they supply.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

New Millennium Experience Company

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps his Department is taking to encourage businesses to contribute towards the Millennium Dome; and if he will list those which have done so. [54464]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 31 July 1998]: The Department of Trade and INdustry will have no role as regards sponsorship of the Millennium Dome. As sole shareholder of the New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) I will continue to receive advice on millennial matters, including sponsorship, from officials at the Department for Culture, Media and Sport. I would also refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Christchurch (Mr. Chope) today, Official Report, column 879.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if his Department is now the sponsoring department for the Millennium Commission; and if he will make a statement. [54391]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 31 July 1998]: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport (DCMS) will remain as the sponsoring department for the Millennium Commission. Officials from the Department will continue to support me in my role as the sole shareholder in the New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC).

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if the grant memorandum between the Millennium Commission and the New Millennium Experience Company will be altered following changes in departmental responsibilities; and if he will make a statement. [54390]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 31 July 1998]: No changes will need to be made to the grant memorandum between the Millennium Commission and the New Millennium Experience Company. I will remain as shareholder of the New Millennium Experience Company, and will continue to be advised in this role by officials from the Department for Culture, Media and Sport.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the shares in the New Millennium Experience Company were transferred from the Minister without Portfolio to the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry. [54392]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 31 July 1998]: No transfer was necessary as the shares are held in my name rather than my position in Government.

Foreign Coal Producers (Subsidies)

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will ensure that coal subsidised by EU Governments is not imported into the UK. [54657]

Mr. Mandelson: Our commitments under our membership of the European Coal and Steel Community and the World Trade Organisation prevent us from imposing import controls in the way suggested. But we have taken, and will continue to take, a strong line against European state aid for coal where it distorts competition in the UK market.

We have already taken action within the European Coal and Steel Community to prevent unfair competition from German graded anthracite in the UK market. We conveyed a complaint to the European Commission on behalf of Celtic Energy Ltd. setting out how state aid provided to Sophia Jacoba and Ibbenburen mines led to a distortion in the anthracite market in the ECSC and particularly in the UK. Following an investigation the Commission found there had been abuse of state aid and reached a decision on 29 July requiring repayment of DM20 million state aid by the German producers. This decision provides UK producers with an assurance that such unfair practices will not recur and should help to open up continental markets for competitive UK exports of anthracite. For the future it is important that the Commission interprets the Coal State Aids Code strictly; we question the continuing availability of large scale state aid for coal producers except in the context of clearly defined closure programmes. Elsewhere, we are examining carefully the extent to which Polish housecoal and power-station coal is being sold in the UK market at prices below production costs, and will pursue the matter vigorously. We will continue to press for an open and competitive coal market in Europe and an end to practices which discriminate unfairly against UK exports.

DEFENCE

Strategic Defence Review

Mr. Linton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the outcome of the inquiry into the leak of the Strategic Defence Review White Paper. [55672]

Mr. George Robertson: A copy of the Strategic Defence Review White Paper was leaked to the Opposition Front Bench and to the press on the afternoon and early evening of Tuesday 7 July. As soon as I learned about the leak, I asked the Cabinet Secretary to authorise an immediate and thorough investigation into how it came about. This inquiry has been conducted by two independent investigators. It has now been completed.

I regret that, after extensive inquiries, the investigators were not able to identify the person responsible for the leak. They have, however, established the course of events on the afternoon and evening of 7 July with a high degree of probability.

The investigators concluded that on 7 July a photocopy of the White Paper was sent by an authorised recipient within Government to the Opposition Front Bench; and that subsequently four copies were made within the House and made available to selected journalists. The first newspaper to receive a copy was The Daily Telegraph. Further copies went to The Times, the Financial Times and the Daily Mail, apparently in phased distribution because of the bulk of the document being copied. The investigators found no evidence to suggest that, in addition to the copy sent to the Opposition, a second authorised recipient sent copies to the newspapers.

The investigation revealed some small weaknesses in the generally very successful procedures for the distribution of the White Paper. None of them was a likely cause of the leak. The necessary steps will be taken to ensure that these small errors are not repeated. In itself the leak was of no significance to national security. But I am naturally most concerned that someone working for the Government breached security in this way. Ten thousand copies of the White Paper were circulated under embargo in advance of its publication. It appears that only one of the authorised recipients did not respect its confidentiality.

The leak was a gross discourtesy to Parliament; and I once again express my anger and my apologies for the fact that it occurred.

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Lichfield (Mr. Fabricant) of 28 July 1998, Official Report, columns 198–99, what public opinion research was undertaken in May in respect of the public presentation of the SDR; how much it cost; and what was the purpose of the research. [54667]

Mr. George Robertson: My Department commissioned two items of public opinion research: a qualitative focus group study which reported in May 1998, and a questionnaire in an omnibus survey conducted over one week (28 May to 3 June 1998). The combined cost was £49,655.50. The purpose of the research was to explore the public's attitudes, feelings and knowledge regarding the key issues covered in the Strategic Defence Review. This was in keeping with the Government's declared objective of achieving a national consensus on the defence of the country.

Chemical Weapons

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment's evaluation of whether short-term exposure to mustard gas causes bone marrow depression and the resulting immunosuppression in the long term [54539]

Mr. Doug Henderson: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 7 August 1998:

I have been asked to reply to your question about DERA's evaluation of whether short term exposure to mustard gas causes bone marrow depression and the resulting immunosuppression in the long term.

DERA's Chemical and Biological Defence sector (CBD) has not performed any research into either bone marrow depression or immunosuppression following short term exposure to mustard gas. However, CBD is aware from both the available literature on the subject and the experience gained through assisting in the clinical management of Iranian casualties in the UK during the late 1980s that bone marrow depression and severe immunosuppression can result from a single high does exposure to mustard, particularly after liquid exposure under occluded conditions.

A total of four out of approximately thirty Iranian casualties treated in the UK developed bone marrow depression as a result of contamination of a large proportion of their body surfaces with mustard. This depression of their bone marrow and immune competency progressed rapidly and resulted in their deaths from overwhelming infection with a few days; such rapidly decreasing bone marrow function proved to be resistant to treatment with both blood and cell transfusions.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment's evaluation of whether short-term exposure to mustard gas causes chronic skin ulceration and scar formation. [55329]

Mr. Doug Henderson: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 19 October 1998:

I have been asked to reply to your question about the effects of short term exposure to mustard gas.

I informed you in my letter of 20 August 1997, printed in the Official Report Col 660 dated 27 October, that DERA's Chemical and Biological Defence sector (CBD) has reviewed the available literature documenting the effects of short term exposure to mustard gas. In my earlier letter I explained that historical evidence from the First World War, and more recent nursing of Iranian patients in the UK in the mid 1980s, indicates that short term exposure to mustard gas affects the skin, eyes and respiratory tract. The effects on the skin consist of reddening followed by blistering; similar effects are seen at the other affected areas. Once the blisters rupture, ulceration of the skin following; these injuries take a long while to heal.

The long term effects of mustard exposure have most frequently been documented in people previously employed in the manufacture of mustard gas. In a study of 488 workers from the Okuno-jima war gas plant, 115 showed pigmentary skin changes and 22 showed evidence of basal cell cancer and Bowen's disease (pre-invasive cancer). Thus far, there has only been one report describing the long term effects of mustard exposure on the skin of war veterans. A group of Iranian solders were monitored for almost two years following exposure to mustard during the Iran-Iraq war of 1984–1988. Of the exposed casualties, 41% developed pigmentary disorders. No other clinical abnormalities have so far been identified.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment's evaluation of the effect on human health in (a) the long-term and (b) the short-term of exposure to phosgene. [55320]

Mr. Doug Henderson: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 19 October 1998:

I have been asked to reply to your question about possible effects on human health of long term and short term exposure to phosgene.

I informed you in my letter of 21 July [illegible] printed in the Official Report Col 472 dated 21 July, that DERA's Chemical and Biological Defence sector (CBD) was undertaking studies to determine the short term effects of exposure to phosgene as part of an ongoing research programme. These studies are not yet complete.

CBD's evaluation of the long-term effects is based on information available from the First World War when phosgene was used extensively. Inhalation of the gas causes immediate irritation of the respiratory passages. The effects on the lung, which can be fatal, may not become apparent for two to six hours after exposure.

If exposure does not prove fatal the lung usually recovers within a few weeks. However, the results of long term reviews of the health of First World War veterans exposed to phosgene have indicated that the incidence of chronic bronchitis and emphysema is higher in these veterans than in age matched control groups.

I hope this is helpful.

Women (Recruitment)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to encourage women to join the armed forces. [55359]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The Armed Forces are committed to maximising career opportunities for women. In April this year, the number of posts in the Army open to women increased from 47% to 70%. Three quarters of posts in the Royal Navy are now open to women. Additionally, as part of the Strategic Defence Review, we announced that 1,300 posts filled by Royal Navy and Army personnel in specialists units attached to the Royal Marines would be open to women. In the RAF, women are eligible for 96% of all posts. Women are excluded from posts only where their presence would be detrimental to combat effectiveness, or for practical or medical reasons.

All three Services welcome applications from women, and are making considerable efforts to encourage them to apply to join the Armed Forces. In particular, the Army regularly publishes recruitment advertisements and editorials in national and female titles. The RAF has published a recruitment brochure specifically targeted at female inquirers entitled "The World at Your Feet—Women in the RAF", and has recently run an advertising campaign featuring the most senior RAF female officer.

Royal Ordnance, Bridgwater

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has come to a decision on the sale of Royal Ordnance, Bridgwater to a French company. [54920]

Mr. Spellar: The position remains as set out in my previous answer to the hon. Member on 19 December 1997, Official Report, column 383. The strategic implications of any joint venture between Royal Ordnance and an overseas company would be examined with great care as part of the consideration by the appropriate regulatory authorities.

Medical Officers

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the restructured pay scales for qualified general medical practitioners and general dental practitioners in the rank of major. [54915]

Gulf Veterans Medical Assessment Programme

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what resources have been made available to the Gulf Veterans Medical Assessment Programme for work from 1 September; what is the duration of Professor Harry Lee's contract; what is the total value of his contract; and if he will make a statement on the progress of the programme. [55421]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The Ministry of Defence has been running a Medical Assessment Programme (MAP) for Gulf veterans since Autumn 1993. In that time, over 2,600 patients have been seen by the Programme's physicians. A detailed paper covering the diagnostic results of the first 1,000 patients seen at the MAP has been submitted to an independent medical journal for publication. The MOD also plans to commission a thorough audit of the MAP later this year, focusing on all aspects of patient care and on the service it provides.

Following an open competition, Professor Harry Lee took up his post as Head of the MAP on 1 September this year. He has been employed on a two year fixed term appointment which, as is usual with contracts of this kind, is extendable. The salary range for the grade at which Professor Lee has been employed—Principal Medical Officer—is £41,606 to £64,346.

The annual cost of running the MAP is approximately £¼m. This level of resources is appropriate to handle the current rate of new referrals to the Programme. Accordingly, no additional resources have been allocated to the MAP as a direct consequence of Professor Lee's appointment.

The MAP currently forms part of the Baird Health Centre at St. Thomas' Hospital, London.

Armed Forces (Homosexuals)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his consultations with the chiefs of staff on the treatment of homosexuals in the armed forces. [52218]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The issue of homosexuality and the Armed Forces will be reviewed in this Parliament, as part of the policy reviews undertaken in preparation for the passage of the next Armed Forces Bill due in 2001. The Government will form a view on the weight of the evidence, taking into consideration EC and national law as well as the views of the Armed Forces. We will then seek to establish the way forward in consultation with the Chiefs of Staff.

Trident

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his Department's estimate of the explosive power of the nuclear warheads deployed on the Trident submarine system. [51884]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 24 July 1998]: The 48 nuclear warheads deployed on each Trident submarine will have an explosive power one third less than the 32 warheads carried on each Polaris submarine under the Chevaline modification. Details of the explosive yield of our Trident warheads are covered by Exemption 2 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Departmental Vehicles

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department expects to spend in each year from 1998–99 to 2000–01 on vehicle replacements. [54990]

Mr. Spellar: I have written to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Motorcycle Parking

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many motorcycle parking spaces exist at each office or site for which his Department is responsible; and how many are secure spaces. [55260]

Mr. Spellar: Motorcycle parking facilities exist at a number of Ministry of Defence and Agency sites. However, records of the precise numbers and types of space are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The provision of parking facilities in general will be considered during the preparation of my Department's Green Transport Plans.

Shipyards (Aircraft Carriers)

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the United Kingdom shipyards with the capacity to design and build the two larger aircraft vessels planned for service from 2012 as announced on 8 July. [55278]

Mr. Spellar: There are a number of UK Shipyards with the capacity to design and build the two larger aircraft carriers planned to enter service from 2012. These include VSEL at Barrow-in-Furness; Harland and Wolf Belfast; Swan Hunter Tyneside; and the ship construction yard in Birkenhead previously owned by Cammell Laird.

The Procurement Strategy being developed for the acquisition of the carriers envisages a design, build and initial support contract being placed competitively with a prime contractor who need not be a shipbuilder. It is not, therefore, necessarily the case that the shipbuilder will be responsible also for the design of the new carriers.

Naval Field Gun Crews

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what was the cost of each of the three Royal Navy field gun crews in each of the last five years; [55645]

(2) how many service personnel have been involved and over what period in the field gun competition of the Royal Tournament in each of the last five years; and what was the cost of those personnel. [55646]

Mr. George Robertson: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Gulf War (Compensation Claims)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many claims for compensation from Gulf War service personnel and civilians his Department has received to date. [55649]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Up to 15 October 1998, my Department had received 116 claims for compensation arising from a variety of incidents from Service personnel and civilians following Gulf War service. These include claims relating to road traffic and other accidents which occurred in the Gulf region in 1990/1 and claims alleging medical negligence in the treatment of Post Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD). In addition, at 15 October 1998, my Department had registered 1,736 current notices of intention to claim compensation from Service personnel, members of their families, and civilian Ministry of Defence employees and contractors in respect of illnesses allegedly arising from the Gulf War.

Royal Tournament

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what injuries have been incurred by military personnel participating in the Royal Tournament in each of the last five years; and how many working days were lost through those injuries; [55650]

(2) what was the total cost to his Department of support for the Royal Tournament in each of the last five years. [55647]

Mr. George Robertson: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Royal Navy (Undermanning)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Royal Navy ships are currently undermanned; of which types; and to what extent. [55648]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The major ships of the Surface Flotilla all experience a degree of gapping which, on average, amounts to 5 per cent. of the full crew complement, and in the case of minor ships this average is 4 per cent. There are no submarines operating below their full crew complement.

Military Satellites

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the UK's decision not to participate in the tri-national project to develop a military satellite. [55361]

Mr. Spellar: In the period up to August this year, the UK had been considering a range of procurement options, covering collaborative, National conventional, and Public Finance Initiative (PFI) options, for satisfying the Project Definition (PD) phase requirements for the next generation of UK military satellite communications, known generically as Skynet 5. The preferred option had been a collaborative programme involving France and Germany, known as Trimilsatcom.

Following a thorough evaluation of the options by the UK, it was clear that Trimilsatcom would not meet the UK's requirements in an affordable way, and would not be ready in time to replace our existing satellites when they went out of service. The assessment also showed that a National PFI approach had the potential to offer an affordable and timely solution. It was therefore decided that the UK would not proceed with the Trimilsatcom PD programme.

Future Offensive Air System

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will make a statement on the timetable for the development of the Future Offensive Air System; [55352]

(2) if he will make a statement on the progress of his Department's evaluation of the Future Offensive Air System. [55351]

Mr. Spellar: The Future Offensive Air System, FOAS, will replace the capability currently provided by the Tornado GR fleet in the offensive support role in about twenty years' time. As confirmed in the Strategic Defence Review White Paper (Cmd 3999), a wide range of options to fulfil the FOAS requirement will continue to be examined, including manned aircraft, remotely piloted/unmanned air vehicles and cruise missiles. Feasibility studies into the various options are underway and are progressing well.

Joint Strike Fighter

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the timetable for the introduction of the Joint Strike Fighter. [55353]

Mr. Spellar: The Joint Strike Fighter, JSF, is a US Department of Defense project. The UK is participating in the Concept Demonstration Phase of the US programme as a full collaborative partner, JSF being a strong contender to meet our Future Carrier Borne Aircraft requirement. First flights of the JSF concept demonstration aircraft are scheduled for the year 2000. Subsequently, a decision will be taken on whether to join the next phase of the US programme, or to follow one of the alternative options currently being studied. The Future Carrier Borne Aircraft is due to enter service around 2012.

Training Exercises

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 30 July 1998, Official Report, column 444, what was the outcome of the review of his Department's training methods; and what is his policy on future defence exercises involving the shooting of pigs. [55396]

Mr. Doug Henderson: UK military participation in the Danish Armed Forces medical exercises involving the use of pigs remains suspended pending the completion of our review.

HMS Cromer (Submarine)

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the remote-operated submarine abandoned by HMS Cromer has been replaced. [54923]

Mr. Doug Henderson: On 17 March 1998, HMS Cromer was obliged to temporarily abandon her Remote Controlled Mine Disposal Vehicle (RCMDV) while assisting in the location of the wreck of a fishing vessel. As soon as HMS Cromer returned to base port her RCMDV was replaced by a spare, in order to restore the warship's capability. As the original vehicle was recovered and will be returned to service shortly, it will not be necessary to purchase a replacement.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what disciplinary action has been taken concerning (a) the logs of and (b) the decision to abandon HMS Cromer's yellow submarine. [54922]

Mr. Doug Henderson: None.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when HMS Cromer's remote-operated submarine was purchased and at what cost; and what it would cost to replace. [54924]

Mr. Doug Henderson: HMS Cromer's Remote Controlled Mine Disposal Vehicle was purchased in 1996. As configured, the unit cost of a vehicle on this contract was some £230K. As the vehicle was recovered and will be returned to service shortly it is not necessary to purchase a replacement.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when HMS Cromer lost her yellow remote-operated submarine; what attempts were made to find it; when the decision was taken to abandon it; and if he will make a statement. [54925]

Mr. Doug Henderson: On 17 March 1998 the Mine-hunter, HMS Cromer, dispatched a Remote Controlled Mine Disposal Vehicle (RCMDV) in an attempt to assist the Marine Accidents Investigation Branch in locating the wreck of the fishing vessel Margaretha Maria. In the process of making a positive identification of the wreck, the RCMDV became entangled in the sunken trawler's nets. Its location was confirmed but, as it could not readily be recovered at that time, it was temporarily abandoned to enable HMS Cromer to continue with each scheduled duties. The RCMDV was subsequently picked up by a trawler. The salvors have submitted a salvage claim but as yet no settlement has been agreed.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has settled the salvage claim in respect of the yellow submarine lost from HMS Cromer; and for what sum. [54921]

Mr. Doug Henderson: No settlement has yet been reached with regard to this salvage claim.

Chinook Helicopters

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to purchase Allied Signal Incorporated upgraded gas turbine engines for the Chinook helicopter fleet; and when the Royal Air Force will lift the reduced weight limit on British Chinooks. [55467]

Mr. Spellar: We have no plans to upgrade the Allied Signal 712F engines fitted to the RAF's Chinook HC Mk2 fleet, but we are pursuing the procurement of minor modifications to improve commonality, thereby reducing spares holdings, with the 714A engines fitted to the eight Chinook HC Mk3 aircraft to be delivered to the RAF in early 2001.

The Chinook HC Mk2 was cleared to operate to its full flight envelope at an all up mass of 24,500 kg under an amended Controller Aircraft Release which was signed on 30 September.

Training (Private Land)

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many landowners, and in respect of what acreage, have withdrawn their consent to military training on private land since 30 April; and what impact this will have on man training days. [54912]

Mr. Spellar: Four landowners have withdrawn consent for military training to take place on their land since 30 April 1998. The total land area withdrawn was 6,376 acres and 650 man training days were lost. Two of these landowners have since reinstated permission for training to take place on their property. The continued withdrawal of the remaining land is not expected to have any lasting effect because military exercises have been rescheduled to take place elsewhere.

Chevaline Nuclear Warheads

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what reasons the specific plans for the dismantlement of Chevaline nuclear warheads are deemed to be covered by exemption 1 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. [55431]

Mr. George Robertson: Specific details of the programme to dismantle Chevaline nuclear warheads are classified as they could be used to provide insights into the UK's nuclear weapon production capabilities. The information was therefore withheld under Exemption 1 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Trimilsatcom Collaborative Programme

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the cost to (a) United Kingdom public funds and (b) each of the two tri-national consortiums of the UK's participation in the Trimilsatcom collaborative programme with France and Germany; and what were the equivalent costs to (i) France and (ii) Germany. [55472]

Mr. Spellar: Expenditure by the UK Ministry of Defence on work specifically associated with Trimilsatcom initiative has amounted to approximately £3.0M. Of this sum, approximately £2.7M was spent on studies, and the information obtained will be utilised on future stages of the UK Skynet 5 national programme. The balance of the money was spent on the Joint Programme Office which was set up in Paris to manage the programme. While no definitive information is available, it is believed that expenditure by both France and Germany will have been of similar magnitude. The MOD has no knowledge of the expenditure by the two trinational consortia in support of their commercial bids for the project.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what will be the cost of his decision not to enter the project definition stage of the Trimilsatcom collaborative programme with France and Germany [55471]

Mr. Spellar: The cost to the UK of its decision not to enter the project definition stage of the Trimilsatcom collaborative programme with France and Germany is limited to those administrative costs associated with the Joint Programme Office, JPO, in Paris, which was set up to manage the project. These costs are currently estimated to be approximately £0.3M, of which approximately £33k is attributable to the UK's share of the direct costs of winding up the JPO.

VC10 Aeroplane (Repairs)

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what work has been carried out since 1 May 1997 on XV.108; who instructed that the work be done; what was the nature of the work; and what was the cost of the work and on which departmental budget it fell. [55563]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Government Purchase Card

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what use (a) his Department and (b) its agencies are currently making of the Government Purchase Card; what savings he estimates are being achieved as a result; what plans he has to expand use of the card by his Department and its agencies; and if he will make a statement. [55174]

Mr. Spellar: The use of purchasing procurement cards was one of my Department's SMART procurement initiatives which was endorsed by the Strategic Defence Review (SDR) and we are implementing a pilot scheme.

A number of sites in support areas have been selected to pilot the Government Procurement (GPC) cards, which will be used to purchase goods and services such as motor transport spares, office machinery, books and training courses. The GPC will not be used to buy major items of equipment.

Cards will be issued under the Pilot scheme this month, and the scheme will be reviewed after three months. Introduction of the GPC across the Department will follow and will be based upon the experience gained from the Pilot scheme.

Procurement Costs

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 31 July 1998, Official Report, column 720, to the hon. Member for Cynon Valley (Ann Clwyd), for which equipment items he estimates that overseas orders have reduced the procurement costs in each of the last three years; and what is his estimate of the savings. [55644]

Mr. Spellar: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Buried Ordnance Clearance

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he will commence the clearance of buried ordnance in fields next to the Defence Nuclear Chemical and Biological Centre at Winterbourne Gunner; and if he will make a statement. [54918]

Mr. Spellar: I have written to the hon. Member and the operation to clear buried wartime ordnance at Winterbourne Gunner will commence in November. A copy of my letter has been placed in the Library of the House.

Nuclear Material

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to the answer of 28 July 1998, Official Report, column 199, if he will list the names of the contractors holding nuclear materials owned by his Department. [54866]

Mr. Spellar: I am withholding the full list of contractors holding MOD owned nuclear material under the terms of Exemption Category 1 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. However, nuclear fissile material is held by the following contractors:

British Nuclear Fuels plc.

Hunting BRAE Ltd.

Rolls Royce & Associates Ltd.

Royal Ordnance plc.

AEA(T).

Employees Over 60

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) men and (b) women employed by (1) his Department and (2) his Department's agencies have contracts of employment which permit them to retire after their 60 birthday. [53058]

Mr. Spellar [pursuant to his reply, 30 July 1998, c. 451–52]: I regret that the response I provided to the hon. Member's question on employees over 60 contained an inadvertent error.

My answer stated that civil servants have no formal contract of employment. Whilst this is correct for the vast majority of civil servants, following the formation of the Senior Civil Service on 1 April 1996, staff at that level have been provided with formal contracts of employment.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Departmental Vehicles

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how much his Department expects to spend in each year from 1998–99 to 2000–01 on vehicle replacements. [54982]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I refer the hon. Member to my answers of 28 July 1998, Official Report, column 151, and of 31 July 1998, Official Report, column 620. Information on vehicle replacement costs will be available when property managers have reviewed their replacement policy in preparing Green Transport Plans. The first plans are to be completed by end March 1999.

Gas-fired Power Stations

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the environmental cost in terms of emissions if no new planning consents for gas-fired power stations are granted before April 2000; and if he will make a statement. [55239]

Mr. Meale: I refer my hon. Friend to the Environmental Appraisal contained in the Government's White Paper on Energy Policy, which was published on 8 October.

Birmingham Northern Relief Road

Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on progress on the Birmingham Northern Relief Road and projected completion of its various stages. [55314]

Dr. Reid: Progress on the BNRR depends on the outcome of the statutory challenge to the Orders for the Scheme, which was heard on 5 and 6 October. Assuming the decision is in the Department's favour, and there is no appeal, then the Orders for the scheme can be implemented. This should take about a year, with the road opening about three years after that.

Water Companies

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what powers private water companies have to require customers to pay for water in advance under the Water Industry Act 1991. [55562]

Mr. Meale: Water and sewerage undertakers' powers to charge are provided under section 142 of the Water Industry Act 1991, which enables an undertaker to adopt such methods and principles for the calculation and imposition of the charges as appear to the undertaker to be appropriate. But these powers must be exercised within the framework of the regulatory system overseen by the Director General of Water Services.

The long-established practice of water companies is to charge unmeasured bills in advance. Companies offer a range of payment options, of which payment in six-monthly instalments is the most widely used. Measured bills are paid in arrears.

Motorcycle Parking

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many motorcycle parking spaces exist at each office or site for which his Department is responsible; and how many are secure spaces. [55255]

Ms Glenda Jackson: A summary of the spaces available for parking motorcycles is as follows:

Department/Agency	Number of spaces	Secure spaces
DETR (Central)	211	187
DETR (Agencies)	340	161
Government offices for the regions	26	24

[1] The Secretaries of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, Trade and Industry, and Education and Employment share responsibility for Government Offices in England.

Government Purchase Card

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what use (a) his Department and (b) its agencies are currently making of the Government Purchase Card; what savings he estimates are being achieved as a result; what plans he has to expand use of the card by his Department and its agencies; and if he will make a statement. [55177]

Mr. Meale: (a) DETR (Central) is not currently using the GPC but plans to implement a pilot scheme using the Card and it is intended that the business case will be prepared by December 1998.

(b) The Agencies are not currently using the GPC, but some have plans to implement the Card as follows:

Highways Agency

The Agency is not using the GPC at present, but plans to use it as soon as Visa have undertaken an evaluation in support of the agency's Business Case.

Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA)

The Agency is not currently using the GPC; it has plans to introduce it although no specific date has been agreed.

Vehicle Inspectorate Executive Agency

The agency is currently using the GPC but intends to pilot its use by December 1998.

Driving Standards Agency

The Agency has no plans to implement the GPC at present but may do so at a later date.

Maritime and Coastguard Agency

The Agency is not currently using the GPC. It will be reviewing the benefits of using the GPC as a result of work being done by DETR and will decide by the end of 1998 whether to implement it.

Vehicle Certification Agency

The Agency is not currently using the GPC and has no plans at this time to do so.

Planning Inspectorate

The Agency is not currently using the GPC and has no plans at this time to do so. It is aware of its possible benefits and will continue to assess its suitability for use.

QE11 Conference Centre

The Agency is not using the GPC and has no plans to implement it.

Gospel Oak to Barking Line

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what discussions he has held with (a) Railtrack and (b) train operating companies concerning the electrification of the Gospel Oak to Barking line. [55515]

Ms Glenda Jackson: None. Railtrack is investing £40 million on the North London Lines over the next 3 years, mainly to improve clearances and remove line speed restrictions, of which £2.9m is allocated for electrification work between now and 2001. Railtrack is considering AC electrification for the route between Harringay and Wembley, but electrification east of Harringay is not proposed at present.

Bletchley to Bicester Line

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to receive proposals on the re-opening of the railway line from Bletchley to Bicester; and if he will make a statement. [55512]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Re-opening of this section of railway line forms part of the proposals received from the East-West Rail Consortium for a rail link from Ipswich/Norwich to Swindon. My officials, and those from the Franchising Director's office, are discussing with the Consortium the detailed business case for the project.

Standard Spending Assessments

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received concerning the operation of the standard spending assessment formula for Inner London; and if he will make a statement. [55519]

Mr. Raynsford: We have received a number of representations about possible changes in Standard Spending Assessments and their effect in relation to authorities in Inner London and elsewhere. We are considering the arguments for and against the changes and expect to announce our proposals at the end of November or the beginning of December.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the latest ONS figures for change in population by county since the 1991 Census will be reflected in the standard spending assessment calculations for 1999–2000. [55426]

Ms Armstrong: We will announce our proposals on standard spending assessments around the end of November or the beginning of December. We have, however, received no suggestions that we should change the past practice of using the most up-to-date population estimates published by the Office for National Statistics. These are currently the mid-year 1997 estimates which were published on 27 August 1998 in the Population Estimates Monitor PPI 98/1 (corrected in September for four local authority areas and two health authority areas).

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will reform the area cost adjustment to the standard spending assessment for local authorities to reflect the specific costs they incur and the costs they meet arising from the general labour market pressures in their area, in time for the 1999–2000 financial year. [55427]

Ms Armstrong: A wide range of options for changing standard spending assessments were set out in the report of the Standard Spending Assessment Sub-Group. I recently met with the Local Government Association and the Association of London Government to hear their views on the 1999–2000 SSA Settlement. We are now considering the merits of all of the options for change, including possible changes to the area cost adjustment, and expect to announce our conclusions around the usual time in late November or early December.

Virgin Railways

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what meetings have been held by (a) Ministers and (b) officials of his Department with Virgin Railways to discuss their performance levels; and if he will make a statement. [55511]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Franchising Director is responsible for overseeing train operators' performance levels. Following unacceptable performance levels, the Franchising Director has required all train operators to produce action plans setting out how they will deliver improved performance. He has also agreed improved Passenger's Charter compensation arrangements with Virgin Rail as part of the package of passenger benefits secured in exchange for his agreement to the acquisition by Stagecoach Holdings of 49 per cent. of the Virgin Rail Group.

GTRM (Steve Hedley)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received concerning the dismissal of Steve Hedley by GTRM; and if he will make a statement. [55516]

Ms Glenda Jackson: No such representations have been received.

Rail Traffic

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the projects currently being evaluated for the re-opening of (a) disused, (b) mothballed and (c) freight-only lines to regular passenger rail traffic. [55513]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Proposals under consideration for developing the rail network to extend passenger services are set out in the Railtrack's 1998 Network Management Statement. Copies of the Statement have been sent to all MPs and placed in the Parliamentary Libraries. Further copies are available upon request from Railtrack.

Detergents, Paints and Plastics

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the progress of the review of British Chemicals' policy on compounds in detergents, paints and plastics announced in July. [55365]

Mr. Meale: A consultation document "Sustainable Production and Use of Chemicals" was published on 27 July, and the consultation will last until 27 October.

The document seeks views on a range of proposals relating to environmental policies on common industrial and commercial chemicals. It addresses a number of key areas: European legislation on new and existing chemicals; eco-efficiency in the chemicals industry; research needs; streamlining procedures for addressing the risks posed by chemicals; and ways of improving the transparency of the process.

A Seminar was held on 12 October to stimulate responses to the consultation. A copy of the proceedings will be placed in the House Library.

Timber

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions pursuant to his Department's letter EE/p50/134/14/98 of 24 July what was the result of his Department's inquiries into permethrin timber treatments in Germany. [55364]

Mr. Meale: The Health and Safety Executive has obtained and considered a copy of the Study carried out by the Fraunhoffer Institute of Toxicology and Aerosol Research. The products tested were public hygiene insecticides which, where they are applied to surfaces, are formulated and applied specifically to create an exposed surface residue of active ingredient which kills insects when they come in contact with it. These differ from wood preservative insecticides which are formulated to penetrate the surface of the wood. Thus the study is of limited value for those considering the use of permethrin as a wood preservative in Great Britain.

Equal Opportunities

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what guidance he intends to give to the proposed regional development agencies to ensure equality of opportunity for women in relation to employment, training and access to managerial positions. [53476]

Mr. Meale: Each RDA will be required, by its Financial Memorandum, to develop and implement an equal opportunities policy covering all aspects of its work, to be committed to and promote equality of opportunity, and, in the exercise of all its functions, to ensure fair treatment for all.

Highway Authorities

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans his Department has to amend the New Roads and Street Works Act 1991 to enable highway authorities to recover costs for time expended on dealing with (a) the issue of notice requiring the avoidance of unnecessary delay or obstruction by an undertaker executing street works, (b) the recovery of costs of a joint inspection to agree the apportionment of financial liability regarding permanent reinstatement, (c) the recovery of costs for time spent providing traffic management advice relating to street works and (d) the recovery of income lost during the suspension of on-street parking bays to facilitate street works by the statutory undertaker. [53764]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Department has no plans for primary legislation to amend the New Roads and Street Works Act 1991. However items (a), (b) and (c) referred to in the question appear capable, in principle, of being met by regulations under section 150 of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989. We are willing to consider a reasoned case for making such regulations if one is put forward.

We have already made regulations under the 1989 Act concerning item (d). Item 6 of Table 2 in the Schedule to the Local Authorities (Transport Charges) Regulations 1998 provides that a local authority may charge for costs involved in suspending the use of a parking place. There is, however, no power for local authorities to recover income lost while a parking place is suspended. A major reason for this is that motorists can generally be expected to pay to park at other parking places in the area, which would increase the occupancy rate at those places.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will publish his Department's analysis of PFI projects and the final data on the preferred deals. [55205]

Mr. Meale: The Department has not commissioned a formal analysis of PFI projects. General information is provided each year in the Department's annual report. The details of significant PFI deals are set out in Departmental press releases.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions to what timescale the Government intend to publish PFI contracts. [55203]

Mr. Meale: The Department will make available on request all new contracts, including PFI contracts, to which it is a party. Those parts of contracts for which there are legitimate reasons for confidentiality will not be disclosed, although I would expect this information to become available after a limited period. This is in accordance with the Department's policy to make available contract documents which was set out in a statement by Lady Hayman on 23 July.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects the commercial confidentiality restraints on the publication of the risk assessment in respect of the Government guarantee of the £3.8 billion loan to the Channel Tunnel Rail Link consortium no longer to apply. [55204]

Ms Glenda Jackson: As my right hon. Friend the then Chief Secretary explained in his answer of 29 June 1998, Official Report, column 28, the Government's participation in the Channel Tunnel Rail Link was assessed using a model of London and Continental Railway's future finances. The risk assessment was likewise based on that model, which will remain confidential until such time as disclosure would not affect the commercial interests of the company.

Rural Schools

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will estimate the effect on Norfolk's SSA calculation of the introduction of a sparsity factor in relation to rural schools. [55028]

Ms Armstrong: The Ward Sparsity factor in the Education SSA calculations contributes approximately £13.422m towards Norfolk CC's Education SSA for 1998–99 of £270.064m.

A120

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the start date for the A120 Stansted to Braintree road improvement scheme; and if he will make a statement. [55286]

Ms Glenda Jackson: This scheme is included in our Targeted Programme of Improvements listed in "A New Deal for Trunk Roads in England". That means that the scheme will definitely start within the next seven years, subject only to any outstanding statutory procedures. Detailed decisions on the timing of the schemes have yet to be made.

St. John's Wood Underground Station

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will ascertain from London Underground what the cost was of the most recent refurbishment of escalators at St. John's Wood Underground Station: what will be the cost of the newly announced refurbishment; and why the work has to be repeated. [55333]

Ms Glenda Jackson: In 1990–91 and in 1995, major essential maintenance work had to be carried out simply to keep the escalators running. At the time, London Underground did not have the investment funds available for the sort of work now planned for the St. John's Wood escalators.

Between 1 December 1990 and February 1991, £50,000 had to be invested in one of the escalators to replace life expiring wiring and systems connected to that wiring and also to fit replacement brakes. This enabled the escalator to continue operating to safety standards.

Between January 1995 and March 1995, £120,000 had to be invested on essential maintenance work on a second escalator. This work, to enable the escalator to continue running was, again, replacing life expired wiring and systems connected to that wiring as well as modifying the escalator controller. Had funds then been available for replacement, obviously London Underground's engineers would have preferred that route rather than the 'patch and mend' solutions which technical staff have been forced to implement over years of under-funding.

The work that is now planned is, rather than a repeat of this refurbishment, virtually a full replacement of the two machines. At a cost of £2.3 million each, every part of the escalators is being replaced, the step chain, the motors, the panelling, the DC to AC power supply conversion and the wooden steps which will now be replaced with metal steps. Only the metal frames that support the escalators themselves will not be replaced.

This is much more fundamental work than that carried out earlier in the decade and should keep the escalators running safely for another 40 years. The only closure necessary in the future should be for routine maintenance rather than the more fundamental work carried out in 1991–92 and 1995 or the almost replacement and rebuilding scheduled to be carried out now.

Salisbury Transport Study

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what funds he will make available for integrated transport and environmental schemes as part of the Salisbury Transport Study in (a) the current financial year, (b) 1999–2000 and (c) 2000–01. [55297]

Ms Glenda Jackson: An allocation of £250,000 was provided for 1998–99 for capital transport expenditure within the Salisbury package area. For 1999–2000, a bid of £2.844 million has been made by Wiltshire County Council for the Salisbury package, as part of the Transport Policies and Programmes (TPP) bids. These are currently being assessed and details of the settlement are likely to be announced in December. It is expected that bids for 2000–01 will be submitted in July 1999.

Roads (Wiltshire)

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) how he will include a bypass of Chicklade in his A303(T) road improvement west of Stonehenge; [55296]

(2) how he will fund the A303(T) improvement at Stonehenge announced on 31 July; [55294]

(3) if the A303(T) improvement at Stonehenge will include a grade-separated junction at Long Barrow Roundabout; and what are the reasons for this decision. [55295]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The scheme will be taken forward on the understanding that at least a third of the costs will be funded from Heritage sources. The precise sources will be for consideration nearer the time but are likely to include contributions from the Heritage Lottery Fund and from English Heritage's receipts from a new visitor centre at Stonehenge.

A grade separated junction to the west of Stonehenge at Long Barrow Roundabout will be one of the options to be considered at the detailed design stage in taking forward the Stonehenge proposals. A decision will be based on the five criteria used for the Roads Review.

A series of studies was announced in the Roads Review to look at the problems on the trunk road network not addressed by the targeted programme of improvements. One of these studies will be the corridor London to South West and South Wales. Amongst its aims will be to consider capacity problems on the single carriageway sections on the A303, matters of safety, and the impact caused by seasonal traffic. This will include the section A303 through Chicklade. A decision on a bypass around Chicklade will be taken in the light of the results of that study.

A14

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the number of (a) accidents, and (b) resulting (i) injuries and (ii) fatalities recorded on the A14 between Cambridge and Huntingdon in each of the last two years. [55428]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Complete records are available only for accidents involving personal injuries. The Police do not necessarily keep statistics about damage-only accidents. The number of injuries resulting from Personal Injury Accidents (PIAs) recorded on the A14 between Cambridge and Huntingdon in the last two full calendar years is:

Year	Total PIAs	Fatal	Serious	Slight	Total
1996	79	0	15	107	122
1997	80	1	14	108	123
Total	159	1	29	215	245

Roads Programme

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will publish the quantitative criteria on which he based his selection of projects for inclusion in the Roads Programme. [55430]

Ms Glenda Jackson: This information is included in a document entitled A New Deal for Trunk Roads: Understanding the New Approach to Appraisal. Copies are available in the Library.

Countryside Commission

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will review the funding and resources of the Countryside Commission; and if he will make a statement. [54927]

Mr. Meacher: Since coming into power, the Government have undertaken a comprehensive review of countryside and rural expenditure. As a result of this review, my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister announced, on 27 March 1998, Official Report, columns 289–91, the merger of the Countryside Commission and parts of the Rural Development Commission to create a new body to champion rural England and the English countryside. On 29 July 1998, Official Report, columns 246–47, I subsequently announced that the new agency would, in addition to the grant-aid it will inherit from the two existing agencies, be given almost £9m extra in 1999–2000. Part of this money will be used to cover necessary restructuring costs; the remainder will enable the agency to make an effective start by strengthening its work in promoting and conserving the natural landscape, supporting rural communities and promoting access to and enjoyment of the countryside.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions in what circumstances the Countryside Commission is obliged to take into account the assets of organisations to which it provides grant-aid when determining the amount of grant it allocates; and if it made such an assessment in respect of the grant to the CLA to promote the Access 2000 scheme. [55411]

Mr. Meacher: The Countryside Commission satisfies itself before offering any grant that the applicant organisation appears to be financially sound and has the capacity to manage the project to completion and to the standards required by the Commission's grant conditions. It made a full assessment in this case.

Organophosphates

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is his Department's current evaluation of the extent to which (a) short-term and (b) long-term exposure to organophosphorus compounds produces chronic illnesses. [55334]

Mr. Meacher: Organophosphorus (OP) compounds are toxic and on present available evidence it seems very likely that exposure to high doses can result in long-term ill health in addition to acute toxic effects. What is still questioned in some quarters is the long-term effect of prolonged low-level exposure, and research has been commissioned into this. The research is being carried out by the Institute of Occupational Medicine in Edinburgh. Its report is expected next summer.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the reviews and research into the effect of organophosphorus compounds on human health which his Department has initiated since 1 May 1997, indicating who is carrying out the research and when it is expected to be completed. [55335]

Mr. Meacher: Two such projects have been initiated since 1 May 1997 by the Health and Safety Executive (HSE). The first, an in-vitro investigation of the relative inhibitory effects of organophosphates (OPs) and carbamates towards pseudocholinesterase in human blood, is being carried out by HSE's Health and Safety Laboratory (HSL) in Sheffield. This project began in August 1997 and ended in June 1998. The HSL report is expected later this year. The second, a study of sheep farmers to investigate the hypothesis that genetic differences lead to variations in individual responsiveness to OPs, is due to begin in November 1998 and end in October 1999. The study is being carried out by the University of Manchester's School of Epidemiology and Health Sciences.

Although not initiated within the timescale indicated, there is also under way a major 3-year epidemiological study by the Institute of Occupational Medicine (IOM) in Edinburgh on the health effects of prolonged low-level exposure to OPs in sheep dippers. The IOM report is expected next year. This research is jointly funded by HSE, the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the Department of Health.

Empty Dwellings (London)

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many (a) local authority, (b) registered social landlord and (c) private dwellings have been empty for (i) less than six months, (ii) less than one year and (iii) over one year in each London borough for the past five years. [55290]

Mr. Raynsford: The information requested has been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Mortgages (Insurance Protection)

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the impact since October 1995 of private insurance protection in reducing mortgage arrears and re-possessions of owner-occupier housing; and if he will make a statement. [55291]

Mr. Raynsford: This Department has made no such assessment. However, DETR and DSS Ministers will be meeting the Council of Mortgage Lenders and the Association of British Insurers later this month to discuss their proposals to improve the cover and take-up of Mortgage Payment Protection Insurance.

Household Waste (Greater London)

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has for dealing with the disposal of household waste in Greater London; what is the projected future use of (a) landfill, (b) incineration and (c) recycling in dealing with that waste; and if he will make a statement. [55289]

Mr. Meale: At present, decisions on the projected future use of landfill, incineration and recycling in Greater London are not for DETR but for the local authorities.

However, we recognise that there is a need for a strategic lead on municipal waste in London. That is why we will be giving the new Mayor for London a statutory duty to prepare and implement an integrated municipal waste management strategy for London. The strategy will encourage use of the various recovery, treatment and disposal options in line with the waste strategy for England and Wales which will be published by the end of 1999.

In the meantime, we are providing London Boroughs with up to £12 million under the Capital Challenge Programme to introduce kerbside waste collection schemes as part of an initiative to promote recycling across the city. In the first 18 months of the 3 year programme, over 1 million homes have been brought into the scheme and the recycling rate has risen from around 5 to 11 per cent. The future use of landfill, incineration and recycling will depend on several factors, including the Mayor's strategy, efforts to reduce the amount of waste produced, efforts to promote recycling and find markets for recovered materials, and the availability of landfill.

Bus Employees Superannuation Trust

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how much has been spent in legal fees, to date, from public funds, in respect of the case of the Bus Employees Superannuation Trust (a) in defending the case of the Department of Transport and (b) by the Official Solicitor, and others, facilitating and supporting the case of the Trustees. [55603]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The then Secretary of State announced on 27 November 1996, Official Report, columns 271–72, that the Department was prepared to meet the legal costs of the NBC pension trustees, in order to pursue litigation in respect of the Bus Employees Superannuation Trust. Expenditure to date on meeting the legal, actuarial, and other costs of the litigation on the Bus Employees Superannuation Trust and the closely related litigation on the National Bus Pension Fund is as follows:

(a) DETR costs: £131,000

(b) NBC pension trustees (reimbursed by this Department through the Official Solicitor): £415,000

This expenditure represents 0.5 per cent. of the original NBC pensions surplus (after tax) of £122 million.

Transport (Women)

Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what measures in the New Deal for Transport will benefit women using public transport. [53473]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Our New Deal for Transport will benefit women using public transport by putting a greater emphasis on better quality transport services; providing safer public transport through initiatives such as the Secure Station Scheme; improving the quality of the pedestrian environment; and promoting land use policies which encourage local services. These measures are in addition to the mainstreaming of women's transport needs throughout the development and application of transport policies and programmes through, for example, gender audit checklists for transport planners and operators and revised Planning Policy Guidance taking full account of women's transport needs.

We are committed to improving transport services for women—the Ministerial Sub-Committee on Women's Issues considered the issue at its inaugural meeting.

Area Cost Adjustments

Mr. Rammell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is (a) the level of area cost adjustment and (b) the proportion of standard spending assessment comprising area cost adjustment for each local authority to which it is applied in 1998–99. [55284]

Mr. Raynsford: A table showing these figures for each local authority has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Mr. Rammell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will announce his plans to consult on possible changes to the calculation of area cost adjustments. [55285]

Mr. Raynsford: A wide range of options for changing standard spending assessments were set out in the report of the Standard Spending Assessment Sub-Group. We recently met with the Local Government Association and the Association of London Government to discuss their views on the 1999/2000 SSA Settlement. We are now considering the merits of all of the options for change, including possible changes to the area cost adjustment, and expect to announce our conclusions around the usual time in late November or early December.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the impact in the UK of Euratom Directive 96/29 on (a) radioactive waste management policy for low activity, short-lived waste, (b) the recycling of mildly radioactively contaminated metals and (c) the existing regulations covering exposure of nuclear industry workforce to radiation. [54865]

Mr. Meale: Council Directive 96/29 Euratom, to be implemented by Member States by 13 May 2000, constitutes an updating of earlier standards in the light of more recent knowledge and its impact will not, therefore, be great. It lays down basic safety standards for the protection of workers and the general public against the dangers arising from ionising radiation; this area is already well regulated and the strict international standards governing it are, and will continue to be, applied rigorously.

The Ionising Radiations Regulations 1985 currently regulate exposures to ionising radiations in all industries, including nuclear. Since 1985, the exposure of nuclear workers has decreased considerably, and therefore, the impact of the Directive will be limited. Earlier this year, the Health and Safety Commission published a Consultative Document containing proposals for revised Ionising Radiations Regulations and supporting Approved Code of Practice in response to the revised Directive. The Health and Safety Executive is currently considering the responses.

Consideration is being given to those aspects of the Directive implemented by the Radioactive Substances Act 1993 (RSA 93) and associated regulations which control the disposal of radioactive substances on non-nuclear sites. A consultation document will be issued in due course on the principles involved.

"Access to the Open Countryside"

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many responses he has received to his consultation paper, "Access to the Open Countryside in England and Wales". [55486]

Mr. Meacher: My Department has received over 2,000 formal responses to the consultation paper.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what progress is being made to improve access to the countryside; and what plans he has for legislation on access to open land. [55020]

Mr. Meacher: The Government are considering carefully responses to the consultation paper, "Access to the Open Countryside in England and Wales". We are examining all options, both statutory and voluntary, for achieving greater access. We shall announce our conclusions as soon as possible.

Ministerial Visit to China

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on his visit to China. [55031]

Mr. Prescott: The central theme of my visit to China was the environment. I was accompanied by a water industry trade mission and held talks with Zhu Rongi, Wu Bangguo and other senior Chinese leaders on climate change, water and other issues. All the talks were marked by warmth and goodwill, with excellent access to Chinese thinking on the issues we discussed.

On climate change, we had a useful in-depth discussion. The Chinese confirmed they were committed to a range of policies whose effects would limit the rate of growth of greenhouse gases. They agreed to an informal dialogue on climate change and indicated a willingness to co-operate more closely with the UK in related areas. Further talks between officials took place last month. These exchanges are demonstrating the kind of trust between key developed and developing nations which is essential to keep the negotiations on climate change on track.

The Chinese have accorded high priority to the provision of water and waste water services. They are suffering severe shortages, and climate change could make these worse. There is recognition at the highest levels that their aims can be achieved only with the help of the private sector and foreign expertise. Following my visit, I am exploring new ways in which we might assist the process, to help the Chinese learn from UK experience and to provide new opportunities for UK companies.

During the visit, we achieved a major success on air services with confirmation that a new agreement between Britain and China would go ahead, opening Shanghai to British carriers for the first time and providing extra services to Beijing for British airlines.

In other areas, I received confirmation of a freight forwarding licence for P&O.

My visit and discussions laid the ground for my right hon. Friend's visit earlier this month.

Advertising Structures

Dr. Vis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on his policy regarding the granting by highways authorities of licences under section 50 of the New Roads and Street Works Act 1991 for commercial advertising structures and private street signs, or other structures promoting a commercial or sectional interest, upon land having public highway or trunk road status. [55480]

Ms Glenda Jackson: A structure bearing an advertisement may sometimes constitute apparatus for the purposes of the New Roads and Street Works Act 1991. Any decision about whether it is appropriate to grant a street works licence under section 50 of that Act in any particular case is entirely for the street authority (normally the highway authority) concerned.

In the case of trunk roads in England, the Highways Agency, acting for the Secretary of State as the highway authority, does not permit advertisements on land having trunk road status, with the sole exception of small signs identifying the sponsors of environmental improvements, usually at roundabouts, for which section 50 licences are not used. Erection of these signs is granted under individual agreements between Highway Agency and the sponsor, and the design and content are subject to Highway Agency approval.

Concessionary Bus Fares

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to implement a nationwide scheme of concessionary bus fares for pensioners; what impact this scheme will have on pensioners currently receiving travel tokens of a fixed monetary value; and if he will reimburse local authorities in full for the costs of implementing and administering the scheme. [55433]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Our White Paper 'Transport: The Way Ahead' proposed a minimum concessionary fare scheme for pensioners of half fare for bus travel, with a maximum £5 per year charge for a bus pass. Implementation of this proposal will depend on Parliamentary time being found for the necessary primary legislation. There will be consultation with local government and other relevant organisations about what future arrangements there should be for token schemes and other aspects of the proposal, including finance.

Water Charging

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will outlaw the practice of companies placing weekly water arrears payments on customers' electricity meters. [53913]

Mr. Mandelson: I have been asked to reply.

This is a matter for the Director General of Electricity Supply.

However, I understand that the use of electricity pre-payment meters to recover water debts may not be consistent with the provisions of the Electricity Act 1989. My Department has written to the Director General.

Renewable Energy

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what plans he has to increase the share of renewable energy sources in United Kingdom energy consumption; [48894]

(2) what Government incentives will be given to encourage the use and development of renewable energy and energy efficient technologies. [48895]

Mr. Battle: I have been asked to reply.

The Government are committed to a new and strong drive to develop renewable energy sources. At 30 June 1998, 235 projects, comprising 570 MW (declared net capacity) of renewables generating capacity had been commissioned under the four Non-Fossil Fuel Obligation (NFFO) Orders for England and Wales, two Scottish Renewables Obligation (SRO) Orders and two Northern Ireland NFFO (NI-NFFO) Orders. In addition a further 261 projects comprising 1177 MW of contracted capacity have been made in England and Wales under the fifth Non-Fossil Fuel Obligation (NFFO-5) Renewables Order, which I laid in Parliament on 24 September 1998. The purpose of NFFO Orders is to secure additional generating capacity from renewables in order to help them enter the commercial electricity generating market. NFFO-5 is the first step in our new and strong drive for renewables. I have also launched a consultation document on arrangements for incorporating the development of offshore wind energy into the Non-Fossil Fuel Obligation (NFFO) Order process.

Fossil Fuel Levy support for renewables under NFFO was around £116m in 1997–98. Separately, the DTI's new and renewable energy programme supports research, development, demonstration and technology transfer activities (£11.1m provision for 1998–99). I have already reversed the planned cuts in the renewables R&D budget which the previous Government had made.

Today about 2% of our electricity comes from renewables, mostly from large scale hydro. Non-Fossil Fuel Obligation (NFFO) Orders already laid or in train will add about 3% by around 2003 (equivalent to about a further 1000 MW).

Within weeks of coming into office, I instigated a review to consider what would be necessary and practicable to achieve 10% of UK's electricity needs from renewables by the year 2010 and how renewables can make an effective contribution to meeting requirements for future greenhouse gas reductions. The review, which is nearing completion, is examining the status of all the new and renewable energy technologies and the UK industry and their future prospects in both the home and export markets. It has also been considering what further research and development, and demonstration is needed. I expect to announce the outcome of the review later this year.

The use of energy efficient technologies is encouraged through a range of Government programmes, including the Home Energy Efficiency Scheme, the Energy Efficiency Best Practice Programme, and support for the Energy Saving Trust. The Government will be seeking views on further possible measures within their consultation on climate change later in the year.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Cervical Smear Tests

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many cytology laboratories in Northern Ireland are sending their cervical smears to other laboratories for interpretation. [55307]

Mr. McFall: None.

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the average time taken for a patient to receive the results of their cervical smear test; and what percentage take longer than the recommended four weeks. [55209]

Mr. McFall: The average time taken for a patient to receive the results of her cervical smear test is three weeks. Less than 10 per cent. take longer than the recommended four weeks.

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for each health and social services board in Northern Ireland, what is the average time taken for a patient to receive the results of their cervical smear test; and what percentage take longer than the recommended four weeks. [55213]

Mr. McFall: The information requested is as follows:

Health and Social Services Board	Average time for results	Percentage over 4 weeks
Eastern	2 weeks	Nil
Northern	2 weeks	Nil
Southern	4 weeks	20
Western	4 weeks	20

Motorcycle Parking

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many motorcycle parking spaces exist at each office or site for which her Department is responsible; and how many are secure spaces. [55258]

Mr. Paul Murphy: There are no separate records maintained of the total number of secure motorcycle parking spaces at government premises in Northern Ireland and this information could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost. Motorcyclists are, however, able to leave their machines in all government owned car parks and to have there the same level of security for their machines as for motor vehicles.

Government Purchase Card

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what use (a) her Department and (b) its agencies are currently making of the Government Purchase Card; what savings she estimates are being achieved as a result; what plans she has to expand use of the card by her Department and its agencies; and if she will make a statement. [55181]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Government Procurement Card was formally launched in Northern Ireland on 2 April 1998 and a contract signed with Ulster Bank to provide full purchasing card facilities for all NI Government Departments and Agencies.

A pilot implementation is being undertaken by the Department of Health and Social Services, using the free consultancy available under the agreement to facilitate the introduction of the card. This should be completed by the end of October 1998.

Guardsmen Fisher and Wright

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on what occasion she has met (a) relatives of Guardsmen Fisher and Wright and (b) the Scots Guards Association to discuss their case since 1 August. [55023]

Mr. Ingram: Since 1 August 1998, the Secretary of State has not met with the relatives of Guardsmen Fisher and Wright or the Scots Guards Association.

Civil Servants

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many candidates applied, in May 1997, for promotion to Civil Service Grade 7, and if she will provide a breakdown of the successful candidates by their religious background. [55542]

Mr. Paul Murphy: A competition for promotion to Administrative Grade 7 in the Northern Ireland Civil Service was launched in May 1997. The competition is a two-stage exercise with candidates deemed eligible at the end of Stage 1 to compete in individual Departmental competitions for promotion to Grade 7. A total of 414 candidates participated in the competition and, of these, 97 were deemed eligible to participate in Stage 2 Departmental competitions. Up until 30 September 1998, a total of 53 candidates have been promoted to Administrative Grade 7 following departmental competitions. The competition will remain open until July 1999. The community backgrounds of those participating, those deemed eligible to participate in Stage 2 competitions and those successful in obtaining promotion to date are as follows:

Community background	Number participating in the competition	Number eligible to participate in stage 2 competitions	Number successful to date (30 September 1998)
Protestant	265	54	28
Roman Catholic	134	42	25
Not determined	15	1	—
Totals	414	97	53

Fraud

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps she has taken in reported cases of (a) doctors, (b) opticians and (c) pharmacists who have defrauded the National Health Service; and if such incidents are reported to their professional bodies. [55532]

Mr. McFall: General medical, dental and ophthalmic practitioners and community pharmacists are independent contractors, whose contracts for services are with their respective NI Health and Social Services Board. Consequently, where cases of suspected fraud are detected, the responsibility for having these investigated lies with the HSS Boards. Following internal investigations, individual cases, where appropriate, are referred to the police. In addition, each case is also considered for referral to the appropriate professional body.

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many cases of possible fraud have been identified in boards or agencies of the DHSS since 1995; and what steps were taken to investigate them. [55576]

Mr. McFall: The following table provides the information requested in relation to Health and Social Services bodies.

No cases of possible fraud have been identified in respect of the Child Support Agency or the Health and Social Services Estates Agency.

In the Social Security Agency (SSA) 8 cases of internal fraud have been identified since 1995 in relation to the administration of social security benefits. When internal fraud is suspected, a formal investigation is carried out in accordance with set procedures and under the direction of an Agency Director.

As far as external fraud is concerned, a total of 43,581 cases of possible benefit fraud were identified in the Social Security agency for the tax years from 1995 to 30 September 1998.

The Agency investigates all allegations of benefit fraud. Investigations are carried out by fraud officials and where evidence of fraud is found prosecution of offenders is considered.

HSS bodies

Year	Total number of cases	Number of cases confirmed as erroneous	Action taken
1995	1	—	Officer dismissed
1996	2	—	1 No further action possible. Individual responsible not traced 1 Police investigation handled nationally
1997	6	1	2 Currently at court 1 Disciplinary Hearing—officer resigned 1 No criminal offence—referred to Disciplinary Committee 1 Under police investigation
1998	9	1	4 under police investigation—one of which referred to General Medical Council 3 under internal investigation—one of which referred to Disciplinary Committee 1 Officer dismissed

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on the report "Controls to Prevent and Detect Fraud in Family Practitioner Service Payments". [55578]

Mr. McFall: I welcome the report by the Comptroller and Auditor General "Controls to Prevent and Detect Fraud in Family Practitioner Service Payments". The report has been laid before Parliament and may be considered by the Public Accounts Committee. Parliamentary convention precludes me from commenting on the specific detail of a Northern Ireland Audit Office report at this stage.

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many cases of possible fraud have been identified in agencies of the DED since 1995; and what steps were taken to investigate them. [55577]

Mr. Ingram: The information requested is as follows:

1995–96: nil

1996–97: 2

1997–98: nil

1998–99: (to date) nil.

Recidivism

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many convicted prisoners released since 1 January 1997 have re-offended; what was the nature of their new offences; what illegal organisations they were associated with before their imprisonment; and what association they have with such organisations now. [55492]

Mr. Ingram: Statistical information in the precise form requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost. I am, nevertheless, able to provide statistical information on similar themes.

The following table includes information on numbers of convicted prisoners released since 1 January 1997 and whether or not they were convicted of scheduled offences. It also includes information on the numbers of life sentence or Secretary of State's Pleasure prisoners released since that date and those who have had their life licence revoked.

No information is routinely available on the overall reconviction of prisoners released since 1 January 1997; their reconvicted offences; or their current association with illegal organisations.

Table 1: Numbers of prisoners discharged from sentences of immediate custody since 1 January 1997 according to scheduled[1] or non-scheduled offences

Offence type	Number
Scheduled offences	898
Non-scheduled offences	1,490

1. Releases up until 7 September 1998
2. Excludes those committed and released from custody in default of the payment of fine
3. A licence may be revoked if the Secretary of State considers that continued liberty would be a risk to public safety. In many cases, the licensed prisoner will have been charged with or convicted of a new criminal offence, but this is not required by law

Social Security Officers

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many officers worked from each social security office during (a) 1995, (b) 1996 and (c) 1997. [55585]

Mr. McFall: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Social Security agency under its Chief Executive, Mr. Chris Thompson, and I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Chris Thompson to Rev. Martin Smyth, dated 13 October 1998:

I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about the number of officers employed in each social security office during the years 1995, 1996 and 1997.

[53840]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 30 July 1998]: All overseas visits by Ministers are conducted in accordance with the principles set out in the Ministerial Code. Information is not held in the form requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Minister of State, Cabinet Office

Sir Raymond Powell: To ask the Prime Minister what are the duties and responsibilities of the new Minister of State in the Cabinet Office. [54704]

The Prime Minister: My noble Friend Lord Falconer of Thoroton QC will work with the Minister for the Cabinet Office in pressing forward the coherent formulation and implementation of policy across Government and the delivery of better services across the public sector. He will play a key role in ensuring greater co-ordination of policies across Government.

He will also lead in monitoring the overall performance of the Government in terms of specific policy objectives and policy outcomes, building on the Government's Annual Report published in July.

My noble Friend Lord Falconer will answer in the House of Lords for those matters on which the Minister for the Cabinet Office answers in this House.

Sudan

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister what factors underlay his support for the bombing by the United States of America of the pharmaceutical factory in Sudan; and what assessment he has made of the evidence that the factory produced materials designed to facilitate terrorist activities. [55308]

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what assessment he made of the United States evidence on the role of the Sudanese pharmaceutical factory prior to giving support to the United States attack on the factory. [55440]

The Prime Minister: Our ally, the United States, said at the time of the strike against Al Shifa that they had compelling evidence that the chemical plant was being used for the manufacture of chemical weapons materials. It is established practice under Section 1(c) of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information not to disclose or discuss information received in confidence from foreign Governments.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will place in the Library the evidence provided by the United States Government on the role of the Sudanese pharmaceutical factory in the recent attacks on United States embassies. [55441]

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister what information was passed to his office, and when, by the United States prior to his endorsement of their air strike on Sudan. [55464]

The Prime Minister: It is established practice under Section 1(c) of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information not to disclose or discuss information received in confidence from foreign Governments.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister in what quantity o-ethyl methyl phosphonothioic acid was identified in the Sudanese factory attacked by a cruise missile. [55456]

The Prime Minister: The Americans have said publicly that o-ethyl methyl phosphonothioic acid (EMPTA) was present in a soil sample acquired clandestinely at the plant and that this substance is not used in commercial applications; does not occur naturally in the environment; and is not a bi-product of another chemical process.

Cabinet Committees

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister (1) if he will list the Cabinet Committees on which the right hon. Member for Hartlepool (Mr. Mandelson) presently sits; [55460]

(2) what changes to membership of Cabinet Committees have been made since the Cabinet reshuffle. [55462]

The Prime Minister: I will make a statement shortly.

Counter-terrorism

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister on what date it was decided to include measures to address counter-terrorism abroad under the emergency legislation to deal with the security situation in Northern Ireland; what factors led to the decision to include such measures; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: It had long been the intention of the Government to legislate against conspiracy here to commit terrorist and other offences overseas. We had made it clear that we would legislate as soon as the programme allowed. The decision to include the provision to make it an offence to conspire in the United Kingdom to commit offences abroad, in what is now the Criminal Justice (Terrorism and Conspiracy) Act 1998, was taken once it was clear that anti-terrorism legislation would be brought forward following the bombing at Omagh.

In the wake of terrorist activity abroad, including the bombings in Nairobi and Dar es Salaam in August, the Government concluded that it was timely and right to legislate in this way in order to underscore further our total commitment to defeating terrorism wherever it is plotted or executed. The Government's decision was subject to extensive explanation and debate in both Houses of Parliament on 2–4 September. I refer the hon. Member to the Official Reports of the proceedings. [55463]

American Air Strikes (Sudan and Afghanistan)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the impact on British nationals in (a) Sudan and (b) Afghanistan of his support for American air strikes on those countries. [55507]

The Prime Minister: The British Government's determination to fight terrorism in all its forms, wherever it may occur and whatever its motivation, is well-known. So is our commitment to the rule of law and to the UN Charter. The Government of the United Kingdom will continue to vigorously support firm action against international terrorism. Terrorists must not be allowed to act with impunity.

There are no reports of British nationals being directly affected as a result of or in reaction to the American action. However, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office has been advising against travel to Afghanistan since 1990 and to Sudan since 21 August 1998. On 25 August 1998 it advised British nationals in Afghanistan to leave immediately. On 27 August British nationals in Sudan were advised to leave unless they had a compelling reason to remain.

There is currently no resident British mission in either country. The British High Commission in Islamabad reports that they are unaware of any British nationals resident in Afghanistan but knows that a small number have visited for short periods since 25 August. The British High Commission in Nairobi reports that there are at present approximately 180 British nationals in Sudan.

Anglo-American Relations

Mr. Amess: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the United Kingdom's relations with the United States Government; and when he next plans to meet President Clinton. [55509]

The Prime Minister: Having met President Clinton on a number of occasions, most recently in New York in September, I have no immediate plans to meet him again. However, we are in regular contact.

Government Annual Report

Mr. Amess: To ask the Prime Minister what responses he has received to the Government Annual Report 1997–98; and if he will place them in the Library. [55508]

The Prime Minister: I have received many constructive responses to the Government's Annual Report 1997–98 in the form of letters, faxes and e-mails to the No. 10 website. It would not be appropriate to place copies in the Library as those who replied did so on the understanding that their comments were in confidence. However, I plan to include a summary of the replies received in next year's Report.

European Union (UK Presidency)

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Prime Minister what representations he has received from other European Union countries on the representation of member states in the logo for the United Kingdom presidency. [55394]

The Prime Minister: A number of EU Governments commented on the logo. I am happy to say it was a considerable success.

European Movement

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the occasions since 1 May when his Office has held meetings with representatives of the European Movement; and if he will make a statement on the issues discussed. [55330]

The Prime Minister: My staff and I have meetings with a wide range of organisations and individuals.

Cabinet Meetings

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 31 July 1998, Official Report, column 604, if he will list those occasions when the Cabinet has met when Parliament was not in session. [55566]

The Prime Minister: Cabinet has met on a number of occasions when Parliament is not in session.

House of Lords Reform

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Prime Minister what (a) consultations he has held and (b) reports he has commissioned on (i) abolition of the sitting and voting rights of hereditary peers in the House of Lords and (ii) other reforms of the membership of the House of Lords; and when he proposes to take action on these issues. [55393]

The Prime Minister: The Government will fulfil their Manifesto commitment to abolish the rights of hereditary peers to sit and vote in the House of Lords as a self-contained measure, without further consultation. The Manifesto also made clear our commitment to a wide-ranging review leading to proposals for further comprehensive reform of the House. We intend to establish a time-limited Royal commission to undertake a full examination of the longer term issues. In the meantime we are committed to changing the way that peers are appointed to the transitional House to ensure that the process is modern, transparent and fair.

Lobbyists

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister what representations he has received calling for the Government to establish a statutory register of lobbyists; if he will list them; and if he will make a statement. [55202]

The Prime Minister: As far as I am aware, none.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Maples: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the rules governing the use of (a) RAF planes and (b) private charter flights by Ministers; if rules have changed since 1 May 1997; and if departments have to meet the full cost of such use. [55510]

The Prime Minister: The Ministerial Code requires Ministers always to make efficient and cost effective travel arrangements. This principle applies to the use of RAF aircraft and private charter flights. The rules have not changed since 1 May 1997. When Departments charter private aircraft for Ministerial travel they meet the charter costs in full. They also pay for RAF aircraft charges, which are calculated by the hour.

Cabinet Office

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer to my hon. Friend for Crewe and Nantwich (Mrs. Dunwoody) of 28 July 1998, Official Report, columns 132–34, what new resources will be committed to funding the New Centre for Management and Policy Studies within the Cabinet Office; if the research the centre will commission will be published; and if the centre will be covered by the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. [54867]

Mr. Kilfoyle: I have been asked to reply.

The cost of setting up the new Centre for Management and Policy Studies will be within the CSR settlement agreed for the Cabinet Office. My officials are continuing discussions on implementing the changes announced in the House by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister. Decisions to publish research commissioned by the Centre will be based on its appropriateness. The Centre is expected to abide by the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Parliamentary Timetable

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the President of the Council what progress he has made in proposals for announcing the annual parliamentary timetable in advance. [53590]

Mrs. Beckett: The Modernisation Committee is considering proposals on the parliamentary calendar and I hope it will be able to report soon.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

National Lottery Distribution Fund

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what is his current forecast of the percentage of the National Lottery Distribution Fund which will be given to each of the good causes in each year from 1999 to 2003. [55589]

Mr. Banks: The National Lottery Act 1998 provided for Lottery income for good causes to be apportioned as follows:

	Percentage
Arts	16⅔
Sport	16⅔
Charities	16⅔
Heritage	16⅔
Projects to mark the Millennium	20
Health, education or the environment (New Opportunities Fund)	13⅓

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has announced that the arts, sport, heritage and charities are each guaranteed 16⅔ per cent. of Lottery proceeds for good causes after the current licence expires in 2001. He has also announced that, due to an increase in forecast Lottery income, these good causes will each receive £50 million more than previously forecast during the licence period, and that the New Opportunities Fund will receive an additional £400 million. This will require adjustments to the current percentage shares and the Government will lay an Order in due course, after consulting the Lottery distributors, to give effect to the necessary changes. When the Millennium Commission has received £2,017 billion, its share will go to the New Opportunities Fund.

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what is his current forecast of the date on which the Millennium Commission will cease to receive income from the National Lottery Distribution Fund. [55590]

Mr. Banks: The Millennium Commission has been guaranteed a total income of £2.017 billion. When this is reached, its share of income from the National Lottery will go to the New Opportunities Fund. The National Lottery etc. Act 1993 provided for the Commission's funding to continue until 31 December 2000. If it is necessary to extend the Commission's funding life beyond that date, the Government have the power by Order to do so. The Government are currently considering the implications for the Commission of the revised forecast of Lottery income and will make a further announcement in due course.

Motorcycle Parking

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many motorcycle parking spaces exist at each office or site for which his Department is responsible; and how many are secure. [55252]

Mr. Chris Smith: My Department does not provide any formal motorcycle parking spaces. However, up to five motorcycles can be securely accommodated in one of our HQ buildings.

A303(T)

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much money and from which budget head he will commit to the dualling of the A303(T) through the world heritage site at Stonehenge. [55293]

Mr. Alan Howarth: At least one third of the costs will be funded from heritage sources. The precise sources will be for consideration nearer the time, but we envisage that this funding is likely to include contributions from the Heritage Lottery Fund and English Heritage's receipts from a new visitor centre.

Government Purchase Card

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what use (a) his Department and (b) its agencies are currently making of the Government Purchase Card; what savings he estimates are being achieved as a result; what plans he has to expand use of the card by his Department and its agencies; and if he will make a statement. [55173]

Mr. Chris Smith: My Department plans to implement the Government Procurement Card by the 1999–2000 financial year subject to the outcome of a consultancy exercise which is currently taking place to look at our current processes in order to establish an estimate of any savings. The Royal Parks Agency is also working towards its implementation, but no planned adoption date has yet been established.

BBC

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) if he will urgently review the regulatory role of the BBC Board of Governors; and if he will make a statement; [55277]

(2) if he will add proposals for reform of the BBC's self-regulatory structure into his Department's Green Paper. [55276]

Janet Anderson: There are no plans to review the regulatory role of the BBC Board of Governors.

The Green Paper on the future regulation of broadcasting and telecommunications was published on 21 July. It argues that the present system of regulation has sufficient flexibility to deal with developments in these markets for some time. Views are invited on when it will become necessary to make fundamental changes to the regime, and what regulatory aims, methods and structure might then be appropriate. Decisions on these broad issues must precede consideration of specifics such as the future regulation of public service broadcasting.

World Heritage List Sites

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what role his Department plays in ensuring the protection of sites listed on the World Heritage List outside the United Kingdom; which international bodies have a co-ordinating responsibility; and what liaison takes place between his Department and other departments in protecting such sites. [55416]

Mr. Alan Howarth: My Department liaises closely with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on current and possible future World Heritage Sites in the UK Overseas Territories. The protection of World Heritage Sites outside the UK and its overseas Territories is the responsibility of the countries concerned. My Department, by agreement with the Home Country Departments, represents the UK as an Observer at meetings of UNESCO's World Heritage Committee (which inter alia considers the protection of sites in accordance with the World Heritage Convention) and pays an annual subscription (£111,215 for 1998) to UNESCO's World Heritage Fund which is used to assist endangered sites. These meetings are also attended by the International Council on Monuments and Sites, and the International Union for the Conservation of Nature, who are the official advisers to UNESCO on cultural and natural heritage issues respectively.

TREASURY

Departmental Vehicles

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much his Department expects to spend in each year from 1998–99 to 2000–01 on vehicle replacements. [54981]

Dawn Primarolo: The Chancellor of the Exchequer expects that his Departments will spend the following amounts on vehicle replacement in the years shown:

1998–1999: £5.9m

1999–2000: £6.1m

2000–2001: £6.2m.

Museum, Arts and Sport Funding

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his oral statement of 14 July 1998, Official Report, column 193, what proportion of the £290 million extra resources will come from savings made through cutting quangos. [54926]

Mr. Byers: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport has been allocated £290 million extra resources over the next three years. Further details were announced and consultation papers were issued on 24 July, explaining that, in return for the additional funding, cultural, heritage, tourism and sports organisations will be expected to reform, cut bureaucracy including streamlining quangos and meet the Government's objectives of improving access and achieving excellence. Proposals were set out for new streamlined structures in the arts, in film and in museums and libraries, and to streamline the public body structure in the built heritage, tourism and sports. Final decisions will be made in the light of this consultation.

Government Purchase Card

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what use (a) his Department and (b) its agencies are currently making of the Government Purchase Card; what savings he estimates are being achieved as a result; what plans he has to expand use of the card by his Department and its agencies; and if he will make a statement. [55166]

Ms Hewitt: The Treasury and its agency, the Debt Management Office, introduced the Government Procurement Card in May of this year and it is now in its third month of live use. There are currently 41 cardholders. The potential savings made until the 23 July were in the region of £4,000 on 129 transactions with a value of £13,800. The departmental policy encourages anyone to have a card who needs to buy low value items for operational reasons.

Childcare Tax Credits

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the cost to the Exchequer of the childcare tax credit element of the proposed working families tax credit; and how much of this expenditure will go to those who would otherwise be (a) non-taxpayers, (b) lower rate taxpayers, (c) standard rate taxpayers and (d) higher rate taxpayers. [55386]

Dawn Primarolo: The latest estimate of the cost of the childcare tax credit in the Working Families Tax Credit is £200 million in 2000–01, the first full year of the tax credit. Reliable estimates of the cost by the marginal rate of tax of the recipient are not available.

Terrorism Reinsurance Premiums

Mr. Caplin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has authorised the Pool Reinsurance Company Limited to change the terrorism reinsurance premiums in 1999; and if he will make a statement. [55670]

Ms Hewitt: I have agreed that premiums in 1999 should, as in 1998, be discounted provided the good claims experience of the past two years continues.

Therefore, from 1 January 1999, the premiums payable for all zones will be discounted by 85 per cent. The discount will be withdrawn if, in the course of the year, significant new claims are notified to Pool Re. This would affect subsequent new or renewed policies.

In addition, other changes to the premium tariff will be introduced which should help simplify the administration of the scheme and reduce its costs.

Arrangements for subsequent years will be determined in the light of experience.

Despite the relatively low level of terrorist activity on the mainland recently, experience has shown that businesses in Great Britain would be well advised to maintain full insurance cover against terrorist damage. This applies whether it is bought through the Government backed arrangements operated by Pool Re or through the alternative arrangements that have been appearing in the insurance market.

Economic and Monetary Union

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the EMU preparation unit in his Department will have access to funds to print material for general distribution. [55341]

Ms Hewitt: The Government's communication campaign on the euro, which is managed by the Euro Preparations Unit, is aimed not at the general public but at ensuring that UK businesses, especially small and medium sized firms, are aware of the implications of the introduction of the single currency from 1 January 1999.

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Exeter (Mr. Bradshaw) of 16 June 1998, Official Report, column 135, if he will make a statement on the nature of his most recent discussions on the political implications of economic and monetary union with (a) EU colleagues and (b) hon. Members. [55390]

Ms Hewitt: The Chancellor continues to meet ECOFIN colleagues on a regular basis to discuss a wide range of matters relating to Economic and Monetary Union. Details of ECOFIN meetings are reported to the House.

The House debated all aspects of Economic and Monetary Union on 30 April 1998, Official Report, columns 477–519, in advance of the EMU Special council meeting held on 1–2 May. On 21 July 1998, Official Repot, columns, 978–1022 the House held a further debate on EMU as part of an Opposition day debate.

The Government recognise that membership of a single currency has important constitutional implications. We recognise that, to share a common monetary policy with other Member states represents a major pooling of economic sovereignty. But we believe that if the economic case for joining the single currency is clear and unambiguous, then Britain should be part of it. There is no constitutional bar to British membership of the single currency. Nevertheless, we have said that the constitutional implications of joining the single currency are such that any decision by the UK Government to join would require the endorsement of both Parliament and the British people in a referendum.

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what criteria will be used to select non-civil servants serving on the EMU preparation unit in his Department. [55344]

Ms Hewitt: The Chancellor of the Exchequer announced in November last year that the Euro Preparations Unit would be set up to raise awareness and encourage preparatory activity across the UK economy. The unit is staffed by officials from DTI, DfEE and HM Treasury as well as a secondee from HSBC Midland with extensive small business experience.

Motorcycle Parking

Mr. Brake: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many motorcycle parking spaces exist at each office or site for which his Department is responsible; and how many are secure spaces. [55265]

Ms Hewitt: There are 22 motorcycle parking spaces at the Treasury's Headquarters Building in Parliament Street. All spaces are secure. No parking spaces specifically for motorcycles are provided at the Allington Towers office in Victoria, but space can be made available according to demand.

Taxation Relief (Training)

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action his Department has taken to introduce tax relief for employers who invest in training of their work force; and what proposals he has in this area. [55045]

Dawn Primarolo: Expenditure of employers on the training of their employees is already likely to attract tax relief. When calculating business profits for tax purposes, a deduction is allowed for revenue expenditure incurred wholly and exclusively for business purposes. Expenditure an employer incurs on training employees would generally satisfy this business expenses tax rule and qualify for a tax deduction.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action his Department (a) has taken and (b) proposes to introduce (i) grants and (ii) tax relief for workers on training courses. [55047]

Dawn Primarolo: The current position is that individuals can claim Vocational Training Tax Relief (VTR) on the cost of certain training courses. VTR is not restricted to those in work and benefits non-taxpayers as well as taxpayers. Where an employee's expenditure on job-related external training is not eligible for VTR, it may still qualify for tax relief under an Inland Revenue extra-statutory concession (A64) if the conditions are satisfied.

The current scope of tax relief for individuals' training expenses is being reviewed in relation to individual learning accounts. Our recent consultation paper on the Learning Age (CM 3790) indicated that we are considering targeted public support, which could take the form of grants or tax relief, to encourage people to open individual learning accounts. Officials from the Inland Revenue, Department for Education and Employment and the Treasury are currently exploring options.

Employee Share Ownership

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action his Department (a) has taken and (b) plans to take to encourage more employee share ownership schemes. [55046]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government are keen to encourage employee participation through share ownership. In this way, employees are able to share in the success of firms they work for and feel part of the common effort. The existing Inland Revenue approved share ownership schemes enable around $2\frac{1}{2}$ million ordinary men and women to benefit directly, and in a tax-efficient way, from any increase in the value of their companies which their own efforts have helped to bring about.

We remain committed to increasing employee participation through share ownership schemes, and all tax reliefs are kept under review. A tax break is not, however, the only way to encourage the spread of employee participation.

Arthur Andersen and Andersen Consulting

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what Government contracts have been awarded to Arthur Andersen and Andersen Consulting since 2 May 1997. [55157]

Ms Hewitt: No contracts have been awarded to either of these firms since the 2 May 1997.

Financial Services Authority

Mr. Love: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions his Department has held with the Registrar of Friendly Societies regarding the transfer of its functions to the Financial Services Authority to ensure continued recognition of and sensitivity to the special features of organisations currently regulated and supervised by the Registrar; and if he will make a statement. [55220]

Ms Hewitt: Treasury officials have regular discussions with the Registry of Friendly Societies (RFS), the Building Societies Commission (BSC) and the Friendly Societies Commission (FSC), about the transfer of their functions to the Financial Services Authority (FSA). The FSA has also been working with them to develop the new regulatory structure and to ensure a smooth transition to a single regulator, when the Financial Services and Markets Bill becomes law.

In the meantime, as the Chief Secretary to the Treasury announced on 30 July 1998, Official Report, columns 410–11, the FSA plans to enter into contracts with the BSC, the FSC and, in relation to credit unions, the FRS to enable it to carry out functions on their behalf, from January 1999.

Mr. Love: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions his Department has held with the Financial Services Authority regarding harmonisation of the costs of incorporation of the different types of organisations regulated by the Financial Services Authority; and if he will make a statement. [55215]

Ms Hewitt: A draft regulatory impact assessment was contained in part 3 of the consultation document on the Financial Services and Markets Bill. This concluded that the creation of the single financial services regulator, the Financial Services Authority (FSA), would mean savings for a significant proportion of authorised persons in compliance costs and regulatory fees. There would also be some efficiency savings due to co-location of the regulators.

Credit Unions

Mr. Love: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions his Department has held with the representative bodies for credit unions regarding the development of a share protection scheme; and if he will make a statement. [55219]

Ms Hewitt: The Credit Union Act 1979 provides for credit unions establishing a share protection scheme, if they wish to do so, and officials from the Registry of Friendly Societies have held a number of meetings with representative bodies for credit unions on this subject—although the movement has not, so far, introduced such a scheme. A consultation document will be issued shortly on how credit unions should be regulated in the future. This will seek views on whether or not credit unions should be included within the Financial Service Authority's Compensation scheme.

Bootlegging

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people have been prosecuted for re-selling alcoholic beverages and tobacco brought in from France in the latest available year. [55357]

Dawn Primarolo: The information requested is not available in this form. However, figures are available for the number of prosecutions generated by Excise Verification Officers for the smuggling and/or illicit resale of alcohol and tobacco from the European Union; in the year ending 31 March 1998 there were 417.

Euro

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the euro will be legal tender in Britain after 1 January 1999. [55405]

Ms Hewitt: No. If, however, parties agree amongst themselves to settle transactions in euro they will be at liberty to do so: just as they can currently choose to deal in other foreign currencies.

Economic Estimates

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes he has made to estimates for (a) growth, (b) unemployment and (c) inflation for (i) 1998 and (ii) 1999. [55381]

Ms Hewitt: New forecasts for growth and inflation will be published later this autumn as part of the Pre-Budget Report. These will take account of developments since the Budget forecast was published in March.

Payable Tax Credits

Dr. Naysmith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the proposed abolition of payable tax credits on dividends from April 1999. [55652]

Dawn Primarolo: My hon. Friend the Paymaster General has this under review and will make an announcement as soon as he is in a position to do so.

Individual Savings Accounts

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if an estimate has been made by the Inland Revenue as to the likely ongoing running costs of ISAs compared to those of PEPs. [55535]

Ms Hewitt: The Inland Revenue published a compliance cost assessment for the individual savings account on 31 July. A copy is available in the Library.

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on how the Inland Revenue's figure for the start-up costs of ISAs being £250 million for the savings industry was derived and provide a breakdown of the costs incurred for new computer installation, staff and sales force retraining and administration. [55534]

Ms Hewitt: The assessment reflects discussions with several potential managers, and comments received during the consultation process. Details of the breakdown of costs in the format requested are not available, since they were generally not known to this degree of precision by potential managers in the savings industry.

Pensions Mis-selling

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer with regard to the current pensions mis-selling review what is the Savings and Investment Board's estimate of the likely total cost of the compensation that will be paid by the life assurance industry; what is the breakdown of this estimate between with profits and unit linked policies; and what proportion of the costs incurred by with profits policies the Savings and Investment Board has estimated will ultimately be met by policy holders through reduced future bonuses. [55536]

Ms Hewitt: The FSA estimates that the total industry bill for the pensions mis-selling review will be in the range of £8 billion to £11 billion. These figures were contained in the FSA consultation document, copies of which were placed in the Library in March. There has been no estimate made of the split between with profits policies and unit linked policies. Nor is it possible to predict what proportion of the estimated total cost incurred by with profits policies will be met by policy holders through reduced future bonuses, due to uncertainties about the ultimate cost to firms.

Financial Services

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer with regard to the sale of financial services through intermediaries, what is the Personal Investment Authority's figure for the proportion sold on commission and those sold by advisers taking a fixed fee. [55537]

Ms Hewitt: No such figures are collected.

Customs

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes there were in the number of customs officers between January 1988 and January 1998. [55656]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Customs and Excise employed 26,654 permanent staff (including Fixed Term Appointees) in April 1988 and 24,112 staff in April 1998, a drop of 2,542.

In respect of "Customs officers" engaged on operational duties (as opposed to VAT, Excise or non-operational staff), 7,754 staff were employed in the preventive (anti-smuggling and baggage check) and frontier customs functions in April 1998, and at the start of the present financial year Customs and Excise employed 3,990 staff in these functions.

On the surface, this represents a fall of 3,764 in the numbers of "Customs officers". However, the figures for the two years are not directly comparable as some former frontier work has moved inland, a change in operational policy meant that more customs work is now undertaken by staff in specialist investigation and intelligence units and the Department's vessels have also been moved to a specialist unit with its own permanent crews. There are no figures available for the number of officers employed on customs work in these areas.

Lone Parents

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will estimate the number and proportion of all families headed by a lone parent indicating how many children live in them, based on the most recent available figures; [55584]

(2) if he will estimate the number and proportion of one parent families headed by a teenage lone parent (a) under 20 years and (b) under 16 years based on the most recent figures. [55583]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from John Fox to Mr. David Rendel, dated 19 October 1998:

The Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS) has been asked to reply to your Parliamentary questions on lone parent families. I am replying in his absence.

It is estimated that there were 1.6 million one-parent families with dependent children in Great Britain in 1996, with 2.8 million dependent children living with them. One-parent families formed 21 per cent. of all families with dependent children in 1996. Further details, including definitions, are published in Population Trends, 91, a copy of which is contained in the House of Commons Library.

It is estimated that there were around 40 thousand one-parent families with dependent children headed by a lone parent aged under 20 in Great Britain in 1996, just under 3 per cent. of all such one-parent families. Estimates have not been made of lone parents aged under 16 because of the proportionately larger uncertainty associated with very small sample sizes.

British Household Panel Survey

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer by what means tabulations of data from the British Household Panel Survey will be made available to hon. Members. [55638]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Steve Webb, dated 19 October 1998:

I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking by what means tabulations of data from the British Household Panel Survey will be made available to honourable Members.

The British Household Panel Survey (BHPS) is funded by the Economic and Social Research Council (ESRC) and conducted by the Institute for Social and Economic Research (formerly the ESRC Research Centre on Micro-social Change). The data are available from the Data Archive at Essex University. Further information on the BHPS, and details of research which has been carried out using the data, can be obtained from the Institute for Social and Economic Research (telephone number 01206 872957).

Tabulations from the BHPS are regularly published in two annual Government Statistical Service publications: Households Below Average Income (the latest edition was published on 15 October 1998) and Social Trends. Data are also published in the ESRC Working Papers series. These publications and papers are available in the House of Commons Library.

Earnings (Shrewsbury and Atcham)

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many employees in Shrewsbury and Atcham currently earn less than (a) £3.60 per hour, (b) £2.50 per hour and (c) £1.50 per hour. [55243]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Mike Pepper to Mr. Paul Marsden, dated 19 October 1998:

The Director of the Office for National Statistics has been asked to reply to your parliamentary question requesting information about the earnings of employees in Shrewsbury and Atcham. I am replying in his absence.

Estimates of the percentage of employees in Shrewsbury and Atcham earning less than the hourly rates you requested are given below. I am unable to provide numbers because appropriate grossing factors for the New Earnings Survey (NES) sample are not available at very detailed levels of disaggregation such as parliamentary constituencies.

The latest information, from the New Earnings Survey 1998, is contained in the following table.

Employees on adult rates, whose pay for the survey pay-period was unaffected by absence—New Earnings Survey—April 1998 Parliamentary constituency of Shrewsbury and Atcham

	Percentage of employees with hourly earnings (excluding overtime) less than:
	£1.50	£2.50	£3.60
All employees	0.4	1.5	9.8

I will arrange for a copy of this letter to be placed in the Library.

Economic Growth

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes have been made to his Department's estimates of the level of economic growth in 1997. [55485]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from John Kidgell to Mr. Austin Mitchell, dated 19 October 1998:

The Director of the Office for National Statistics has been asked to reply to your Parliamentary question on changes to the level of economic growth in 1997. I am replying in his absence.

The most recent data for 1997, published on 24 September 1998, show that gross domestic product (GDP) at constant market prices rose by 3.5 per cent. compared to 1996. Previous estimates published on 20 August 1998 showed growth in 1997 of 3.4 per cent.

The quarterly path of GDP growth during 1997 shows quarterly growth rates of 1.0, 0.2, 1.0 and 0.7 per cent. in quarters 1 to 4 respectively. This compares with previously published estimates of 0.7, 1.0, 0.8 and 0.6 per cent.

Registered Maternities

Mr. Pollard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the numbers of registered maternities to women resident in (a) St. Albans, (b) Dacorum, (c) Watford, (d) Hertsmere and (e) Three Rivers local authority districts which took place in (i) Hemel Hempstead General Hospital, (ii) St. Albans City Hospital, (iii) Watford General Hospital, (iv) Mount Vernon Hospital, (v) Barnet General Hospital, (vi) Chase Farm Hospital, (vii) Northwick Park Hospital, (viii) Luton and Dunstable Hospital, (ix) Stoke Mandeville Hospital, (x) Wycombe General Hospital, (xi) other NHS hospitals, (xii) RAF Halton Hospital, (xiii) other non-NHS hospitals, (xiv) at home and (xv) elsewhere for each of the last five years for which data are available. [55315]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from John Fox to Mr. Kerry Pollard, dated 19 October 1998:

The Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS) has been asked to reply to your parliamentary question on numbers of registered maternities. I am replying in his absence.

The information requested would only be available at a disproportionate cost.

Abortions

Mr. Woolas: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many women had abortions in each parliamentary constituency and what percentage of these were carried out by the NHS in the last year for which figures are available. [55538]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from John Fox to Mr. Phil Woolas, dated 19 October 1998:

The Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS) has been asked to reply to your parliamentary question on abortions by parliamentary constituency. I am replying in his absence.

Information on the number of abortions performed on residents of each parliamentary constituency is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Animal Experiments

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will ensure that his Department's proposed freedom of information legislation includes a statutory right of access to information relating to the scientific basis for research involving animal experiments within the United Kingdom. [55346]

Mr. Straw: Section 24 of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 prevents the disclosure of information supplied in confidence in relation to applications for licences to carry out scientific experiments on animals.

The Government are committed to review the need for all statutory bars to disclosure as part of the development of legislation on Freedom of Information. That legislation is likely to contain a power to repeal by Order specified existing bars to disclosure.

It is too early to say, however, whether section 24 of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 will be repealed in this way.

In reaching a decision on this issue, I shall need to be satisfied that those who are involved in lawful scientific experimentation are not put at risk from the violent activities of some animal rights extremists, or that British science and industry is not damaged by the disclosure of information.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his Department's letter AP98 1/10/333 PO 13469/98 of 23 July, if he has forwarded Neil Boyce's report, Freeze-dried Mice, relating to the overbreeding of animals, to the Animal Procedures Committee; and if he will make a statement. [55363]

Mr. George Howarth: Neil Boyce's report was forwarded to the Animal Procedures Committee at its meeting on 23 July. The Committee is looking at the issue of overbreeding as part of its review of the operation of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986.

Motorcycle Parking

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many motorcycle parking spaces exist at each office or site for which his Department is responsible; and how many are secure spaces. [55254]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Home Office Central London Estate provides designated areas within it secure car parks for some 50 motorcycles.

Generally, there is provision for parking motorcycles at most offices and sites throughout the rest of the Home Office Estate (including those occupied by the Agencies). However, details are not available centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Government Purchase Card

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what use (a) his Department and (b) its agencies are currently making of the Government Purchase Card; what savings he estimates are being achieved as a result; what plans he has to expand use of the card by his Department and its agencies; and if he will make a statement. [55180]

Mr. Straw: The Home Office is not currently using the Government Procurement Card (GPC), but it is being used in some agencies.

The extent to which the non-agency Department uses the GPC will depend on an evaluation of its benefits compared with a policy of obtaining consolidated invoices from suppliers with whom we conduct a high volume of transactions. Our preliminary findings are that by reducing the volume of invoices the Department can achieve savings similar to those obtainable from the use of the GPC, whilst retaining the benefit of the detailed management information which our suppliers provide with their invoices.

A pilot project to test the consolidated invoice option and its estimated savings began in August of this year and will conclude by March 1999. Further consideration will then be given to the scope for using the GPC in circumstances where its use would be the most cost-effective solution.

The position in the Department's agencies is as follows:

The Forensic Science Service introduced a procurement card in April 1996, but have since adopted the GPC. Some 60 cards have been issued and account for an average of 300 transactions a month, valued at £50,000 producing savings in excess of £10,000 a month. Up to a further 10 cards are expected to be issued.

The Prison Service is currently piloting the use of the GPC at three prison sites with a view to establishing a business case for possible implementation early in 1999. Full rollout would take approximately 18 months and would enable some 200,000 transactions a year to be processed using the card.

The United Kingdom Passport Agency and Fire Service College also have the use of the GPC under consideration.

Gaming Board

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the names, qualifications and experience of members of the Gaming Board appointed in the last 12 months; if he will list the (a) vacancies and (b) expected vacancies for the Board; and what arrangements are in place for filling them. [54862]

Mr. George Howarth: Mr. Robert Lockwood and Mr. Peter Dean were appointed as Gaming Board members from 1 January 1998 and 18 May 1998 respectively, with Mr. Dean becoming Chairman from 1 July 1998.

Mr. Lockwood's background is as a licensing magistrate, Chief Executive of the London Red Cross and former local authority chief executive. Mr. Dean has a legal background, is the Investment Ombudsman and was Deputy Chairman of the Monopolies and Mergers Commission.

All five Board posts are currently filled. One is expected to become vacant on 31 December 1998 and another on 31 August 1999. Both have been advertised and will be filled by competition.

Child and Youth Workers

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will bring forward proposals to strengthen the controls and procedures for vetting those employed and working directly or indirectly with children and young people; and if he will make a statement. [55453]

Mr. Michael: On 4 June 1998, Official Report, columns 304–05, I announced the establishment of an Interdepartmental Working Group on Preventing Unsuitable People from Working with Children and Abuse of Trust. The Group has made a good start on its work and has been asked to make recommendations by the end of the year.

Prison Service

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps the Prison Service intends to take to encourage recruitment to the service from ethnic minority communities. [55323]

Mr. George Howarth: The Home Secretary announced at the Labour party conference that he would be setting recruitment targets across the Home Office, with the aim that the workforce properly reflects Britain's multi-racial society.

As an equal opportunities employer, the Prison Service is committed to increasing the numbers of ethnic minority staff which it employs at all levels, consistent with fair and open competition and with recruitment and promotion on merit. Latest figures for the year to 31 March 1998 indicate that 7.8 per cent. of prison officers recruited were from ethnic minorities—more than double the figure for any previous year.

In the last few years, there has been considerable progress on measures taken to encourage ethnic minority staff. These include the following:

as part of the guidance on devolved recruitment, governors have been encouraged to take positive action to redress the current under-representation of people from the ethnic minorities, such as the recent open day organised by prisons in the Doncaster area; competence-based job simulation and assessment centres for the recruitment of prison officers support the devolved recruitment of prison officers and are increasingly used for promotion at all levels;

the Prison Service has provided placements for three Windsor Fellows this year, and continues to provide mentors from management level staff for ethnic minority undergraduates under the National Mentoring Scheme.

As a result of many years of sustained outreach work, the Service has two members of ethnic minorities who successfully applied for the Accelerated Promotion Scheme in the last year.

In August 1997, the Home Secretary established a monitoring group on the position of ethnic minority staff in the Home Office with the following terms of reference:

"To examine the position of ethnic minority staff in the Home Office, the measures taken to ensure their full representation and employment and to reduce real and perceived disadvantage and to make further proposals for action".

The Prisons Board is fully committed to the monitoring group and is carrying out a comprehensive review in the Prison Service. The review, which is now well underway, will lead to the development of a racial equality action plan which will recommend further measures to stimulate the recruitment of staff from ethnic minorities.

In July 1998, the Prison Service set up a new Race relations group. Its purpose is to ensure that the Service's race relations policies are as good as they can be, and to check that they are operating effectively across all establishments. It will also help to monitor and direct the range of initiatives which are underway, in relation to both staff and prisoners.

Administration of Justice

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to expedite the administration of justice. [54859]

Mr. Michael: This Government have a strong commitment to speeding up justice, particularly in relation to cases involving young offenders where delays have been scandalous in recent years. We aim to tackle delays throughout the criminal justice system and we have pledged to halve the time taken to deal with persistent young offenders from arrest to sentence.

Ministers across Government Departments are co-operating in encouraging all agencies to work together to cut delays. In October 1997, comprehensive guidance was issued in the circular 'Tackling Delays in the Youth Justice System'. This was prepared by six Government Departments and set out good practice to tackle delay in young offenders cases and asked local agencies to set up fast-tracking schemes for persistent young offenders. Many have responded positively: for instance, fast-track schemes for persistent young offenders have been established or are planned in 160 Youth Court areas, compared with 12 a year ago.

The Crime and Disorder Act 1998 contains a number of specific measures for speeding up the system, including provisions to enable straightforward guilty pleas to be dealt with promptly; to improve case management in magistrates courts; and allowing indictable-only cases to start in the Crown Court. Before being implemented nationwide, most of these new procedures are being piloted in Tyneside; Croydon, Bromley and Sutton; Blackburn and Burnley; North Staffordshire; Northamptonshire; and North Wales. Piloting began on 30 September and will run for six months, except for the indictable-only procedure, for which the pilots will begin in January 1999 and will run for a year.

To reinforce the effectiveness of the new procedures for case preparation and management, the Government intend to introduce overall statutory time limits for the prosecution of criminal cases, for which provision is made in the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 but which has been improved through the Crime and Disorder Act. These time limits, which will also be piloted, will be tougher for young offenders than for adults, and tougher still for persistent young offenders.

Anti-terrorist Legislation

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consultations he has held with (a) the RUC, (b) the police in Great Britain, (c) civil liberties organisations, (d) the Irish Government, (e) members of the Northern Ireland Affairs Committee, (f) other hon. Members and (g) the United States Government, concerning the new anti-terrorist legislation. [55349]

Mr. Straw: There was some informal consultation with a number of individuals and bodies, including some hon. and right hon. Members in the short timescale for the preparation of the Criminal Justice (Terrorism and Conspiracy) Act 1998. I met the Chief Constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary, the Commissioner of the Garda Siochana and the Assistant Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police, Mr. David Veness, on 28 August. The consultation document on permanent United Kingdom-wide counter-terrorist legislation, to be issued later this year, will provide a further opportunity for comments on the provisions of that Act in the context of broader consideration of the future shape of legislation against terrorism.

Domestic Violence

Ms Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to make an announcement on the review of domestic violence policy. [53497]

Mr. Michael: Our intention is to do everything we can to give an impetus to policy on domestic violence and implement initiatives as soon as possible, rather than to conduct a formal time-limited review. To address domestic violence, we have implemented the Protection from Harassment Act 1997 and Part IV of the Family Law Act 1996. We have issued guidance on the Crime and Disorder Act setting out our expectation that local crime reduction partnerships will identify the level of domestic violence in their area and incorporate a strategy for tackling it in their wider crime reduction strategy.

We are now seeking further research evidence about domestic violence and improved statistics; and to publicise this and raise awareness of how domestic violence can best be tackled in future.

Women have a more severe experience of domestic violence than men. Our policy is to reflect that fact in everything we do. Our policy is being developed in parallel with measures to address all forms of violence against women.

Terrorist Prisoners

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons are serving prison sentences in Great Britain for terrorist offences connected with Northern Ireland; how many of them are serving (a) life sentences and (b) other indeterminate sentences; to which terrorist group these prisoners belong and how many are in categories (a) and (b); how many he estimates will be transferred to Northern Ireland inside the next two years; and how many of those transferred will be eligible for release under the Northern Ireland (Sentences) Act 1998. [55024]

Mr. George Howarth: Six prisoners convicted of terrorist related offences connected with Northern Ireland are currently held in prisons in England and Wales, none of whom is serving a life sentence or other indeterminate sentence. The Prison Service does not record centrally information on organisations to which prisoners may belong. One of the six prisoners has requested a transfer to Northern Ireland. This application is currently under consideration and it is not possible to speculate on the outcome. The eligibility of an prisoner for release under the provisions of the Northern Ireland (Sentences) Act 1998 is entirely a matter for the Sentence Review Commissioners.

Traffic Officers

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to ensure that police traffic officers are given training in the collecting of evidence equivalent to that provided to CID officers responsible for investigating homicides. [55019]

Mr. Michael: We are keen to keep the training of police officers under review to ensure that they receive training in all the skills necessary to carry out their duties. I understand that National Police Training are planning to introduce a new course early next year on Policing Road Deaths in response to a demand from a number of forces for such training to be provided nationally. It is hoped that this course will be attended by both traffic and CID officers of the rank of inspector and above, who might be appointed to supervise such inquiries. The course is intended to provide a thorough grounding in all aspects of road death investigations and to raise awareness of the trauma likely to be caused by such incidents, both to victims and to police officers.

Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary is also currently undertaking a thematic inspection of traffic related police duties, including the training of traffic officers.

It should be remembered that decisions on the nature and extent of the training received by police traffic officers are primarily the responsibility of individual chief police officers. In most forces, if not all, the investigation of the scene of a serious road traffic accident is carried out by Road Accident Investigation Officers, who may be either police officers or civilian support staff, who use mathematical and physical theories and formulae to determine the speed and road position of vehicles at the time of collision. In general, police officers are skilled in managing the scene of a serious road accident and can call on specialist support skills, such as vehicle examiners, where necessary.

If there are suspicious circumstances surrounding the deaths of road users, it is open to chief officers to bring in officers with the appropriate skills, if necessary by appointing a senior detective to serve as the senior investigating officer in order to direct and control all the necessary inquiries.

Prisoners

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of males aged (a) 16, (b) 17, (c) 18, (d) 19, (e) 20, (f) 21, (g) 22, (h) 23, (i) 24, (j) 25, (k) 26, (l) 27, (m) 28, (n) 29, and (o) 30 years or over (i) are currently in prison, (ii) have served a prison sentence or are currently in prison and (iii) have a criminal record. [55432]

Mr. George Howarth: Information on the male prison population (excluding foreign nationals), by age, in England and Wales on 30 June 1998 as a percentage of the projected general population of England and Wales for the same date is given in table 1.

Information on criminal careers is also published in "Criminal Statistics England and Wales" (Chapter 9 of the 1996 edition, CM 3764), a copy of which is in the Library. These analyses are based on a sample of those born in selected years.

The proportion of males who have ever been sentenced to custody for those born in selected years between 1953 and 1978 is shown in table 2. Rates for the 1973 and 1978 birth cohorts are lower than for those born in earlier years and are consistent with the reduction in custody for these age groups in the late Eighties and early Nineties. The proportion of males who have been convicted of a "Standard List" offence is shown in table 3. Rates for 1973 and 1978 are also lower than for those born in earlier years and the lower proportion who have a conviction in these age groups reflects the increased use of cautioning in recent years.

Computers (Scanning)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he proposes to take in respect of the practice of HM Customs officials routinely scanning computer laptops brought into the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [55459]

Dawn Primarolo: I have been asked to reply.

HM Customs and Excise do not routinely scan laptops brought into the UK; Customs' anti-smuggling checks are guided by risk profiles and intelligence assessments, in order to concentrate their effort in the most productive areas and cause the minimum delay to the travelling public.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the practice of HM Customs officials routinely scanning laptops brought into the United Kingdom; what record is kept of information so gleaned and for what purposes; and what safeguards are in place to prevent the misuse of such information. [55461]

Dawn Primarolo: I have been asked to reply.

HM Customs and Excise do not routinely scan laptops brought into the UK; Customs' anti-smuggling checks are guided by risk profiles and intelligence assessments, in order to concentrate their effort in the most productive areas and cause the minimum delay to the travelling public. The aim of checks on laptops is to detect indecent or obscene material, in particular material featuring children; no record is kept of any other information encountered. Officers regularly encounter private or commercial correspondence and similar material in the course of their duties and are bound by their normal duty of confidentiality. Anyone misusing such information would be subject to Departmental disciplinary proceedings and, if appropriate, dismissal.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Buxton County Court

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to improve access to justice at Buxton County Court for people who have (a) physical, (b) visual and (c) hearing disabilities. [53390]

Mr. Hoon: The Court Service is currently undertaking an audit of all courts to establish what facilities exist at each location for people who have physical, visual or hearing disabilities. The audit is scheduled for completion in February 1999. Where requirements for additional or upgraded facilities are identified, these will be addressed, where reasonably practicable, according to priority.

Royal Family

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to review for possible release records relating to the Royal Family and Royal Household which are currently closed in the Public Record Office; and if he will make a statement. [53367]

Mr. Hoon: The 1993 White Paper Open Government (Cm 2290) stated that records relating to the Royal Family would be treated in the same way as all other records and closed for longer than 30 years only if they fell into one or more of the three criteria governing closure (para. 9.22). It also stated (para 9.28) that all Departments would, as resources could be made available, review all material currently withheld for longer than 30 years to see whether its sensitivity had passed and, if possible, release it. The review process is the responsibility of the Department where the records originated. This process is continuing.

Shrewsbury County Court

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will estimate the effect on the legal aid budget of the closure of Shrewsbury County Court and the relocation of its work to Telford, Ludlow and Oswestry. [53392]

Mr. Hoon: No estimate of the impact on legal aid has been made. Any savings or additional costs to the legal aid fund are likely to be marginal since business will simply transfer elsewhere. Whilst financial implications are important considerations, the costs and practical implications of running a court, the public facilities, waiting times, workload levels and overall standard of service that can be made available over the area as a whole also need to be taken into consideration.

External Legal Advisers

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the external legal advisers he has consulted since 1 May 1997, indicating (a) the names of those firms used, (b) dates of consultation, (c) the cost of using each firm and (d) the areas of discussion.

Mr. Hoon: The only firm of external legal advisers consulted by the Lord Chancellor's Department since 1 May 1997 is Messrs Masons who have been retained since November 1996 to provide drafting and general legal advice on a contract for the provision of corporate and financial services and general legal advice on IT contracts for Crown and county courts. Advice has been provided on numerous occasions since 1 May 1997. The total cost since that date is £234,362. [55400]

Possession Orders

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what was the average length of time between the serving of a notice of seeking possession on the tenant of a local authority and the granting of possession where the application was successful (a) in England and Wales, (b) in the West Midlands County and (c) in Birmingham in each of the last five years for which records are available; and if he will make a statement on measures he is proposing to speed up the process. [55504]

Mr. Hoon: No figures are collected for waiting times for possession actions. Although there are no current plans to introduce measures to reduce the length of time the possession process can take, it is intended to consider this process in the second stage of the Civil Justice Reforms. No timetable has yet been fixed.

Government Purchase Card

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department what use (a) his Department and (b) its agencies are currently making of the Government Purchase Card; what savings he estimates are being achieved as a result; what plans he has to expand use of the card by his Department and its agencies; and if he will make a statement. [55175]

Mr. Hoon: The Government Purchase Card (GPC) is not yet being used. The Court Service plans to introduce the GPC in one area later this financial year, and will assess the scope for further use next year. The Public Record Office will pilot the card later this month, and introduce it in June 1999 if that is favourable. The Land Registry will pilot in January 1999 and introduce it in April 1999 if the test succeeds. The Northern Ireland Court Service and the Public Trust Office are currently reviewing their procurement procedures, and will consider the introduction of the GPC.

Personal Injury Actions

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement concerning the implementation of section 10 of the Civil Evidence Act 1995 and section 1 of the Damages Act 1996 following the recent judgments in the House of Lords on multipliers in personal injury actions. [54863]

Mr. Hoon: Section 1 of the Damages Act 1996 came into force in September 1996. The Lord Chancellor and the Secretary of State for Scotland decided not to exercise the power conferred by that section until they had been able to consider what was said by the House of Lords in Wells v Wells and other pending appeals, in which opinions were delivered on 16 July. The section requires them to consult the Government Actuary and the Treasury before any exercise of the power. They are now doing so.

Legal Aid Board

Mr. Soley: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department if the Legal Aid Board has responded to the Lord Chancellor's request for advice on how best to achieve exclusive contracting of civil advice and assistance; and if he will make a statement. [55673]

Mr. Hoon: The Legal Aid Board have responded to the Lord Chancellor's request for advice on how best to give effect to the Government's policy of exclusive contracting for civil advice and assistance. A copy of their report, and an exchange of correspondence between the Lord Chancellor and the Chairman of the Board, have been placed in the Library of both Houses. The Lord Chancellor welcomes the report and generally accepts the Board's proposals. They will provide an effective way of achieving the Government's policy of targeting quality assured services on people's priority needs for help with basic legal problems. In particular, the proposals will secure our objective of channelling a greater share of funding to the not-for-profit advice sector, and of opening up new ways of delivering advice to people, for instance when they cannot conveniently reach the adviser's office. These are only first steps, but are essential components in building the community legal service promised by the Government in our election manifesto.

Departmental Vehicles

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department how much his Department expects to spend in each year from 1998–99 to 2000–01 on vehicle replacements. [54984]

Mr. Hoon: The information is as follows:

	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01
The Court Service	4,050,000	1,551,000	535,000
The Lord Chancellor's Department HQ	16,000	32,000	64,000
HM Land Registry	154,600	175,000	175,000

Planned expenditure by the Court Service reflects a change in August this year from leasing vehicles to outright purchase.

WALES

Cervical Smears

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many cytology laboratories in Wales are sending their cervical smears to other laboratories for interpretation. [55305]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: One laboratory in Wales is currently sending cervical screening work to an adjacent laboratory on a temporary and short-term basis. This is due to end this month.

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales for each health authority in Wales, what is the average time taken for a patient to receive the results of their cervical smear test; and what percentage take longer than the recommended four weeks. [55210]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: The information requested is as follows:

Health authority	Average time taken (weeks)	Percentage (longer than 4 weeks)
Bro Taf HA	3.5	16
Dyfed Powys HA	3	0
Gwent HA	4	20
Morgannwg HA	3.5	20.6
North Wales HA	3.75	10

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the average time taken for a patient to receive the results of their cervical smear test; and what percentage take longer than the recommended four weeks. [55206]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: The average time taken in Wales is 4 weeks; and about 13 per cent. are over 4 weeks.

Motorcycles

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many motorcycle parking spaces exist at each office or site for which his Department is responsible; and how many are secure spaces. [55253]

Mr. Ron Davies: There are several secure areas of the car park at my Department's head quarters in Cathays Park specifically dedicated to motorcycles. There is provision at other offices for motorcycling parking.

Measures to increase the proportion of motorcycle users are being considered as part of the development of green transport plans for buildings occupied by my Department and its agency.

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales for what reasons motorcycles were not included in the policy document "Transporting Wales into the Future"; and if he will make a statement. [55399]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: Chapter 3 of the transport White Paper "A New Deal for Transport—Better for Everyone" covers the role motorcycling can play in the development of an integrated transport policy. Paragraph 1.3 of our Welsh Transport Policy Statement "Transporting Wales into the Future" explains that the general policies set out in the White Paper apply equally in Wales. I did not think it necessary to repeat them all in the Welsh document.

Government Purchase Card

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what use (a) his Department and (b) its agencies are currently making of the Government Purchase Card; what savings he estimates are being achieved as a result;

what plans he has to expand use of the card by his Department and its agencies; and if he will make a statement. [55167]

Mr. Ron Davies: My Department does not, currently, use the Government Purchase Card. However, we have accepted the offer via the Treasury of a consultancy to undertake a cost/benefit analysis of the introduction of the card. A decision on whether or not to introduce the card will be made in the light of the consultancy report.

Carmarthen-Aberystwyth Rail Track

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action he is taking to safeguard the trackbed of the former rail link from Carmarthen to Aberystwyth; and if he will make a statement. [55514]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: Preservation of disused railway trackbeds is a matter for the local planning authorities concerned, within the framework of planning guidance which encourages them to promote public transport opportunities, including the exploration of opportunities to re-open rail routes. I understand that the bulk of the land underlying the former railway line between Carmarthen and Aberystwyth was sold some years ago, although Rail Property Limited retain ownership of a number of railway bridges along the route.

Dyfed Powys Health Authority

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the cash limit of the Dyfed Powys Health Authority for 1997–98; and what figure has been set for 1998–99. [54913]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: The initial revenue cash limit authorisations for Dyfed Powys Health Authority were as follows:

Financial year	£000
1997–98	274,301
1998–99	283,391

SCOTLAND

Temazepam

Mrs. Irene Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many prescriptions for Temazepam (a) capsules and (b) tablets were issued in Strathclyde in each year since 1992 and in 1998 to date. [55164]

Mr. Galbraith: The information for Greater Glasgow Health Board for the years 1992 to 1997 and January to June is shown in the table.

Year	Capsules	Tablets
1992	112,712	99,911
1993	67,401	119,146
1994	41,312	122,848
1995	20,356	110,801
1996	1	112,017
1997	0	105,035
January-June 1998	0	49,803

Government Purchase Card

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what use (a) his Department and (b) its agencies are currently making of the Government Purchase Card; what savings he estimates are being achieved as a result; what plans he has to expand use of the card by his Department and its agencies; and if he will make a statement. [55171]

Mr. Dewar: My Department began using the Government Procurement Card on a pilot basis in September 1998. The pilot is taking place in two executive agencies and three business areas in the core Department. The pilot exercise will help to determine what savings and other benefits might accrue from using procurement cards, and whether there is a case for expanding their use throughout the Department.

Diffuse Pollution

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on his proposals (a) to combat diffuse pollution and (b) to implement the recommendations of the Scottish Environmental Protection Agency of 31 August 1998 on diffuse pollution, in relation to nitrate enhancement. [55475]

Mr. Macdonald: The Government are addressing the need to combat diffuse pollution, through the use of preventative and advisory approaches together with legislation. We are also exploring the use of economic instruments ("green taxes"). Our approach will be developed further when we come to implement the EC Water Framework Directive, which is at present in draft form. This will be a matter for the Scottish Executive.

We are currently consulting on proposals for a statutory Nitrate Action Programme in the Scottish Nitrate Vulnerable Zone at Balmalcolm. The programme is specifically aimed at reducing nitrate use.

Antimicrobial Resistance

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to the replies by the Under-Secretary of State for Scotland, my hon. Friend the Member for Strathkelvin and Bearsden (Mr. Galbraith), FP 060705 of 13 May and FR 021609 of 18 September, if he will list the Chairman and members of the UK Committee on Antimicrobial Resistance. [55544]

Mr. Galbraith: There is no UK Committee on Antimicrobial Resistance. My letter to my hon. Friend referred to an internal Steering Group of officials which has been set up by the Department of Health to advise Ministers on the terms of the Government's response to the House of Lords Report "Resistance to Antibiotics and other Antimicrobial Agents" and is considering other significant developments in the field of antimicrobial resistance.

The Group includes representatives from the Public Health Laboratory Service, the Joint Foods Safety and Standards Group, Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, Medicines Control Agency, Office of Science and Technology and The Scottish Office.

Teacher Training

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what reviews he has initiated into teacher training in Scotland since May 1997. [55013]

Mrs. Liddell: In February this year, the Government responded to a report on teacher education and training, prepared by Sir Stewart Sutherland for the National Committee of Inquiry into Higher Education. As part of this response we set up a short term working group to look at two specific issues relating to initial teacher education in Scotland—quality assurance and arrangements for managing and developing the type and pattern of provision. I expect to receive a report from the working group within the next few months.

In March we issued for consultation revised draft guidelines for initial teacher education courses in Scotland. These guidelines set out the requirements which courses must meet if they are to be approved by the Secretary of State. We have carefully considered responses to the consultation and finalised revised guidelines will be issued very shortly.

Further and Higher Education

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the amount each further and higher education college in Scotland has acquired from the Scottish Office budget in each year since incorporation in (a) cash terms, (b) real terms at 1998–99 prices and (c) as a percentage of their total income. [55007]

Mr. Dewar: The total of recurrent grant-in-aid and funding in respect of bursaries, restructuring and capital projects made available to incorporated colleges by the Secretary of State, since incorporation, in cash and real terms (at 1998–99 prices) and as a percentage of colleges' total income is shown in the following tables.

(14) what changes his Department has made to the requirement for young offenders to be tested for drugs; and what plans he has to require young offenders taking drugs to undertake treatment programmes; [55016]

(15) how much money has been paid by his Department to Moray College for special needs education in each of the years since incorporation expressed in (a) cash and (b) real terms based on 1998–99 prices; and what audited accounts he has received from Moray College on how this has been spent on special needs education; [54999]

(16) what procedures he has in place to ensure that money granted by his Department to further and higher education colleges for special needs education is spent properly; [55000]

(17) what (a) guidelines and (b) statutory procedures must be followed by the boards of management of further and higher education colleges when consulting staff and union representatives on management and staff restructuring within the colleges. [55049]

Mr. Dewar: I refer the hon. Member to my letter of 12 October, a copy of which was placed in the House Library.

Crime Victims

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what changes his Department has made to (a) the amount of information provided to and (b) the protection by law for victims of crime and vulnerable witnesses since May 1997. [55015]

Mr. McLeish: At the end of February we produced a general information leaflet for victims of crime, which explains the criminal justice process in simple terms and provides information about getting help. The leaflet is distributed mainly by the police, who are the first contact a victim or witness who reports a crime has with the criminal justice system. It is also available through Victim Support Scotland and Citizens Advice Bureaux.

I am advised by my noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate that, in January, the Crown Office and Procurator Fiscal Service in conjunction with the Scottish Court Service launched a Joint Statement on Crown Witnesses, outlining the joint and individual responsibilities of procurators and clerks of court in relation to Crown Witnesses cited in court. The document introduced an undertaking that witnesses at court would be provided with an update on the progress of their case at least once every two hours.

The Lord Advocate's Department also refined and improved the information that is provided to child witnesses and, in March 1998, he launched two new information leaflets for child witnesses who are cited to court. One leaflet is aimed at children under 12 and one is for use by children between 12 and 16. The leaflets provide information about what the child can expect when coming to court to give evidence.

A Scottish Office-led inter-departmental Working Group was set up in late 1997 to examine the issue of vulnerable or intimidated witnesses. The Group's report will be issued as a consultative document on 2 November 1998.

Spinal Treatment

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will fund the replacement of invasive procedures carried out in the course of spinal treatment with non-invasive practices. [55038]

Mr. Galbraith: Health Boards in Scotland are given an annual general revenue allocation and it is for the Health Boards themselves to decide on how best to deploy this funding in meeting the health care needs of their resident population.

Rent Arrears

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give a breakdown for rent arrears for each Scottish local authority indicating (a) the estimated stock on 31 March 1997, (b) the number of households in rent arrears, (c) the total rent arrears and (d) the percentage in each category of rental income. [55034]

Mr. Macdonald: The available information, taken from returns made by local authorities, is set out in the table.

Police Funding

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the total funding at current prices, made available or planned to Scottish police forces for each year from 1998–99 to 2001–02 (a) from central Government and (b) via local authorities; and if he will make a statement. [54929]

Mr. McLeish: Grant Aided Expenditure (GAE) figures and budgets for the Scottish police forces for 1998–99 are shown in the table.

£ million

	GAE	Agreed budget set by police authorities
Central	31.559	30.607
Dumfries and Galloway	19.353	19.353
Fife	37.631	36.028
Grampian	59.171	59.171
Lothian and Borders	124.833	124.833
Northern	36.465	34.074
Strathclyde	328.336	328.336
Tayside	53.652	52.536
Total	691.000	684.938

The GAE levels for the police in Scotland for future years have been set as follows:

£ million

Year	GAE
1999–2000	714.7
2000–01	741.9
2001–02	762.8

Decisions have not yet been made about the split of the GAE for individual forces for these three years. Central Government pay police grant of 51 per cent. of actual expenditure up to the specified GAE limit. Local authorities meet the balance with the assistance of revenue support grant from central Government. The amount of revenue support grant paid on police expenditure is not separately identifiable because it is paid on the total eligible expenditure of each local authority.

Scottish Parliament

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list each (a) liability, (b) undertaking and (c) contract with a value over £1 million of the United Kingdom Government that will be transferred to the Scottish Parliament. [54928]

Mr. Dewar: It is not possible to provide at this time a list of each liability, undertaking and contract with a value over £1 million which will transfer to Scottish Ministers. The items to transfer will depend on the situation pertaining at the time of transfer.

Property will be transferred by subordinate legislation under the provisions of the Scotland Bill when it receives Royal Assent. Work is underway to identify the categories of property which will transfer. It is expected that the property transfer orders will be laid before Parliament in the Spring of next year.

Beef and Sheep Premiums

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on delays in the payment of beef and sheep premiums to farmers. [54861]

Mr. Macdonald: Payments were made timeously, meeting established payment targets.

Cervical Smear Tests

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the average time taken for a patient to receive the results of their cervical smear test; and what percentage take longer than the recommended four weeks. [55208]

Mr. Galbraith: For the year ended 31 March 1998 the average reporting time for the results of cervical smear tests in Scotland was 17 days. Figures are collected only for the time from the date a smear test is received by the laboratory to the date the report is issued by the laboratory and does not therefore include the time it takes GPs, family planning clinics etc. to issue the results to patients once they receive them from the laboratory. For this reason, no information is available on the percentage of patients who take longer than 4 weeks to receive their results.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Child Support Agency

20. Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security many cases were raised by hon. Members with the Child Support Agency (a) in the 12 months from 1 May 1997 and (b) in each of the four previous 12 month periods. [53493]

Angela Eagle: In the twelve months to the end of April 1998, the Child Support Agency received 21,933 letters from hon. Members concerning operational issues. In the previous year the figure was 18,473. During the same two year period, the number of cases on the Agency's books rose by around 300,000.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many representations he has received from (a) organisations, (b) individual men and (c) individual women on the proposals in the CSA Green Paper. [53501]

Angela Eagle: The Green Paper sets out our proposals for a modern Child Support service. The Government want a wide debate on these proposals and welcome all views.

Responses to the consultation exercise should reach this Department by 30 November. Up to the end of September, 741 representations had been received, including 34 from organisations, 649 from individuals, 36 from Departmental staff and 22 from hon. Members.

It is not possible to state how many representations have been made by individual men and women since the gender of respondents cannot always be identified. Of the respondents, 119 gave a parent with care's perspective, 498 a non-resident parent's perspective and 124 were broadly neutral in their point of view.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if it is CSA policy to overrule divorce settlements which provide for higher maintenance payments than those calculated according to the CSA formula. [55498]

Angela Eagle: Parents with care who are receiving Income Support can be required to co-operate with the Child Support Agency in seeking maintenance unless they have good cause for not doing so. When a valid application is received the Agency is bound by law to assess child maintenance in accordance with the rules of the scheme.

In many cases, the liability that results is substantially higher than that agreed in divorce settlements, but there is no provision for retaining an existing divorce settlement where the child support assessment is for a lower amount.

Disabled People

21. Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the extension of the New Deal to people with disabilities. [53494]

Mr. Timms: This Government are committed to removing barriers to work and providing active help to people with a long-term illness or disability who want to work. That is why we introduced the New Deal for Disabled People, funded by £195 million from the Windfall Tax.

Over the next two years we will pilot a new Personal Adviser service in twelve areas which will offer support and advice to over a quarter of a million people on incapacity benefits. The first six pilots, to be run by the Employment Service, were launched on 28 September. A further six have been put out to competitive tender and should start early next year. In addition, we are testing ways of helping disabled people into work by funding a number of Innovative Schemes. 10 contracts to run schemes were announced in July and further contracts will be announced next year.

Lone Parents

22. Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what targets for cost-effectiveness for the new deal for lone parents have been set with regard to the cost per job of the scheme. [53495]

Angela Eagle: The New Deal for Lone Parents aims to help lone parents improve their employability and move from welfare to work. The cost-effectiveness of the New Deal for Lone Parents will be measured by various methods including the reduction in lone parents on Income Support over and above what would have happened in the absence of the programme, and through performance targets. Independent research already shows that the New Deal for Lone Parents is having a moderate but marked effect on the number of lone parents moving off Income Support.

A Cost Benefit Analysis of the New Deal for Lone Parents in the phase 1 prototypes will be available with the rest of the phase 1 evaluation results in Autumn 1999. It will look at the costs and benefits to the exchequer as well as performing an economy wide cost benefit analysis. The structure of the Cost Benefit Analysis for the phase 3 national roll out of the New Deal for Lone Parents is still in the planning stages. This will build on the Cost Benefit Analysis of phase 1, consider the resource implications of the programme generally, judge whether it is cost effective and explore its economic impact.

Income Support

23. Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much his Department spent on income support in the last three months; and what is the projected figure for 1999–2000. [53496]

Angela Eagle: The information is available annually. It is estimated that expenditure on income support will increase from £12.2 Billion in 1998–99 to £12.6 billion in 1999–2000. The figures are consistent with those set out in the Comprehensive Spending Review White Paper published by the Government on 14 July 1998.

Social Security Spending

24. Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what has been the annual real terms rate of increase in social security spending since April 1998. [53498]

Mr. Denham: The average rate of real growth of spending on social security benefits over the rest of this Parliament is forecast to be 2 per cent. a year.

Pensions

25. Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the publication of the Green Paper on pensions. [53499]

Mr. Denham: As set out in the Green Paper "New Ambitions for our Country: A New Contract for Welfare" (Cm 3805) we will publish a Green Paper on pensions later this year. There will be a period of further consultation before final proposals are developed.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his assessment of the cost of re-linking the annual calculations of the state pension based on (a) a 1980 and (b) a 1998 base line. [53490]

Mr. Denham: If the basic State Pension had been uprated in April 1998 in line with the higher of prices or earnings movements since 1979, the net additional cost would have been £9.5 billion in 1998.

If the basic State Pension had been uprated in April 1998 in line with the higher of prices or earnings movements over the preceding year only, the net cost would have been £130 million.

Pensioners

27. Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on his Department's assistance for pensioners. [53502]

Angela Eagle: The £2.5 billion package of measures we announced in July will help all pensioners, but particularly the poorest 1.5 million pensioners entitled to income support will benefit from an above-inflation increase next April and we will begin a programme of action to tackle the problem of pensioners' not claiming their income support entitlement. In addition, all pensioner households will receive an annual winter fuel payment of £20 and all pensioners will be eligible for free eye tests and concessionary travel.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his latest estimate of the number of (a) single male pensioners, (b) single female pensioners and (c) married pensioners who are aged (i) 60 to 64, (ii) 65 to 69, (iii) 70 to 74, (iv) 75 to 79 and (v) 80 or above, who are failing to take up the income support to which they are entitled; and what is the total amount unclaimed in each category. [55636]

Mr. Denham: The information is set out in the table. We recently announced a £2.5 billion package of help for pensioners. The package includes action to help pensioners get the Income Support to which they are entitled.

Welfare Dependency

28. Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans the Government have to reduce the number of families dependent upon welfare. [53503]

Angela Eagle: We are determined to do everything we can to help those who can work to do so. That is why we want to modernise the structure of working age tax and benefits to create the right incentives, to reward work while at the same time provide security for those who cannot.

The New Deal for Lone Parents offers a tailor-made service of help and advice for people who are bringing up children on their own to make the move from Income Support into employment. Around 4,000 lone parents have already used the New Deal for Lone Parents and gone on to get jobs. The final phase of the rollout of the service (to lone parents who were already on Income Support before April 1998) takes place on 26 October.

The New Deal for 18–24 year olds gives young unemployed people real help and choices to improve their employability and their chances of fully participating in the labour market. By the end of August over 23,000 young people had found jobs and over 8,900 are improving their job prospects in other New Deal options.

From June, we have introduced a New Deal for those aged 25 and over who have been unemployed for 2 years or more. This provides a £75 subsidy for employers who recruit people from this group and opportunities to undertake full-time education and training for up to a year while on benefit. From November, £129 million is being made available to pilot a further development of the New Deal approach over the next two years for people aged 25 and over, reaching the 12 and 18 month stages of unemployment and those unemployed for longer.

The Chancellor announced in the budget a New Deal for the partners of the unemployed. Partners of the unemployed who are themselves out of work (90 per cent. of them women) have not had access to employment programmes on the same basis as the claimant unemployed. To address this imbalance, the Chancellor has set aside £60 million from the Windfall Tax receipts to ensure that partners over 25 have the option to receive the help they need to get back to work. Childless partners aged under 25 will be included in the New Deal for Young People.

The Working Families Tax Credit will be introduced from October 1999 and will guarantee working families a minimum income, above and beyond the level of the minimum wage. The new childcare tax credit will increase substantially the support available for childcare.

From next April, the National Minimum Wage will begin to end the scandal of poverty wages without adversely affecting inflation or jobs.

Our objective is to help people prepare for and get work as well as making work pay.

Disablement Benefits

29. Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what progress has been made in the review of disablement benefits. [53504]

Mr. Timms: We continue to review benefits for sick and disabled people, in the context of our broader programme of welfare reform.

We will bring forward proposals for consultation in due course.

Benefits

30. Mr. Rhodri Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what arrangements he proposes to improve communication between his Department and local authorities in relation to the payment of (a) income support, (b) council tax benefit and (c) housing benefit when claimants move between welfare and work. [53505]

Angela Eagle: We recognise the need to modernise Housing Benefit and improve its delivery in ways which support the transition from welfare to work and transform the services provided to the public. We are testing ways in which staff from the Benefits Agency and local authorities can work across the boundaries of central and local government to deliver a more efficient customer focused service. We will make increasing use of new technology to help people through the system, including the move into work. We have already set up a project giving local authority staff on-line access to the Income Support and Jobseeker's Allowance data they require for their administration of Housing and Council Tax Benefits.

Scotland

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will assess the advantages of devolving responsibility for the administration of social security in Scotland to the Scottish Office. [53475]

Mr. Darling: It would be impracticable and inefficient to split responsibility for policy and administration of Social Security between Westminster and Holyrood. It is in Scotland's interest that the Social Security system covers the whole of the United Kingdom. Were Social Security spending to be devolved, the Scottish Parliament would have to find additional money to meet the substantial costs involved. These would have to be found from resources otherwise available for other priorities such as Health and Education.

Mrs. H. Nasrin

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security for what reasons he has not provided a substantive reply to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton, following his holding answer of 30 July 1998 with regard to Mrs. H. Nasrin, 58 Clitheroe Road. [55392]

Mr. Darling: A substantive reply was sent to my right hon. Friend the Member for Manchester, Gorton (Mr. Kaufman) on 16 September.

I have written today to all right hon. and hon. Members setting out targets for improving the Department's service in relation to correspondence.

Pensioner Income Series

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects to publish the next edition of the Pensioner Income Series. [55642]

Mr. Denham: We intend to publish the 1996–97 Pensioners' Incomes Series on 26 November 1998.

National Insurance

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will meet (a) the CBI, (b) the Institute of Directors and (c) other representative bodies to discuss the practice of employers paying staff offshore in order to avoid making payments to the National Insurance Fund; [55610]

(2) what estimate he has made of the cost in each of the past 10 years to the National Insurance Fund of the practice of employers paying staff offshore; and what plans he has to limit this practice; [55612]

(3) when he plans to meet the Chairperson and other directors of (a) Cable and Wireless and (b) P and O to discuss the payment of staff offshore and its impact on the National Insurance Fund; [55609]

(4) what representations he has received from operators of services on the Channel Tunnel about competitors' practice of paying some employees offshore to avoid employees' contributions being paid to the National Insurance Fund. [55611]

Mr. Timms: We are aware of the increasing use being made of offshore employment contracts by British shipping operators as a means of avoiding employers' National Insurance contributions for British resident seafarers. The issue of seafarers National Insurance contributions is one of a number of matters being considered in the context of the Government's strategy for reviving the shipping industry as announced in the White paper on the Future of Transport.

We have not received any representations from the operators of Channel Tunnel services about the use of offshore employment contracts by shipping operators; nor are there any plans to meet the CBI, the Institute of Directors or the Chairperson and other directors of Cable & Wireless and P&O about this matter.

The information requested about the National Insurance Fund could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what consideration his Department has given to taking the value of subsidised works canteens and refectories into account when assessing National Insurance contributions; [55604]

(2) what assessment he has made of the views contained in the First Report of the Low Pay Commission in relation to luncheon vouchers remaining free of National Insurance contributions; [55606]

(3) what safeguards are proposed to ensure that the impact of bringing luncheon vouchers and other non-cash vouchers into Class 1 National Insurance liability will not result in such benefits being consolidated into pay for those whose incomes are below the proposed national minimum wage; [55608]

(4) what assessment has been made of the impact on low-pay workers of the proposal to bring luncheon vouchers into Class 1 National Insurance liability; and if he will make a statement; [55614]

(5) if the consultation timetable and procedure embarked on on 13 August in relation to the draft regulations to bring non-cash vouchers and luncheon vouchers into Class 1 National Insurance liability, meets the requirements of the Better Regulation Guidance advice published on 10 August. [55607]

Mr. Timms: We announced on 22 July 1997, Official Report, columns 789–90, at second reading of the Social Security Bill our intention to bring non-cash vouchers into liability for Class 1 National Insurance in the same way as cash vouchers. The key principles of the proposals are to bring about greater alignment of tax and National Insurance and to bring greater fairness in the National Insurance treatment of earnings. We are currently considering our response to the points raised in the public consultation which ran from 14 August to 14 September.

We propose to continue to mirror the tax treatment of the value of subsidised works canteens and refectories.

The First Report of the Low Pay Commission suggested that the national minimum wage should not include non-cash vouchers. We are considering this point alongside other issues in the consultation exercise.

The vast majority of low paid workers do not receive luncheon vouchers and are therefore liable for National Insurance on all their earnings.

An explanatory and financial memorandum and a regulatory appraisal covering non-cash vouchers were published alongside the Bill in July 1997. A copy of that regulatory appraisal accompanied the consultation paper on the draft regulations issued in August. The four weeks consultation period should not be looked at in isolation as Ministers' intentions to introduce changes to the National Insurance Contributions liability on non-cash vouchers were clearly suggested in the passage of the Social Security Bill. We shall in due course present the draft regulations before the Social Security Advisory Committee as part of the Department's legislative consultation process.

Family Poverty

Mr. Goggins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on his Department's strategy for tackling family poverty. [53481]

Angela Eagle: We have already taken major steps towards tackling poverty amongst families. The best path out of poverty is work, where that is appropriate. Our initiatives such as the New Deal for Lone Parents, the working Family Tax Credit, the Childcare Tax Credit and National Childcare Strategy will help families into work and ensure that work pays. For those families who may be unable to work, or whose opportunity to maximise their income from work is limited, we are increasing the child personal allowance and family premium in the income related benefits. And, from April 1999, child benefit for the eldest child will be increased by £2.50 a week.

European Union (UK Presidency)

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on his Department's work and achievements during the UK presidency of the European Union. [54281]

Angela Eagle: The Department's objective for Social Security business during the UK Presidency was to promote measures which facilitated legitimate social protection coverage for EU citizens living and working in another Member State. This supported the UK's overall Presidency objectives of promoting employment, completing the single market and making the EU more relevant to its citizens.

Three Social Security measures were adopted by the Council in June.

(1) The Supplementary Pensions Directive is a first step in protecting the occupational and personal pension rights of EU citizens living and working in another Member State. It requires: preservation of pension rights for people moving to another Member State; the cross-border payment of pensions to pensioners living in another Member State; and the facility for people to remain in their "home" scheme while working for the same employer on a short-term basis in another member State.

(2) The existing Community provisions which co-ordinate statutory social security rights for EU citizens across the Member States—Council Regulation 1408/71—were extended to civil servants in special social security schemes, thus resolving an issue that had been under discussion in the Council for 7 years.

(3) A package of miscellaneous amendments to Council Regulation 1408/71, designed to keep the regulations in good working order, was adopted.

At a meeting of the Social Affairs Council on 7 April, the UK Presidency adopted Conclusions on the importance of proceeding with a wide-ranging review of Council Regulation 1408/71, to ensure that the co-ordination mechanism continues to meet the needs of today's citizens.

Outside the Council, Departmental officials took the opportunity of the UK Presidency to launch initiatives to improve the effectiveness of EU-wide bodies in which the Department represents UK interests, including the Administrative Commission on Social Security (which oversees the operation of Council Regulation 1408/71) and the advisory board which supervises the Consensus programme of technical assistance to central and eastern European states. The Department also hosted the bi-annual MISSOC (Mutual Information System on Social Security) conference in York in May.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list each Ministerial visit made outside Great Britain in connection with the UK presidency of the European Union. [54282]

Angela Eagle: Visits related to Social Security business are set out in the following table. My hon. Friend the Member for Manchester, Withington (Mr. Bradley), the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Social Security, made the visits in his capacity as the Minister responsible for co-ordinating the Department's EU social security business.

Date	Place visited	Purpose of visit
23 September 1997	Brussels	Allan Larsson, Director-General of Directorate-General V of the European Commission (employment, training and social policy)
8 October 1997	Bonn	Horst Gunther, German Minister for Labour and Social Affairs
17 December 1997	Strasbourg	Padraig Flynn, European Commissioner for Social Affairs and MEPs on the European Parliament's Employment and Social Affairs Committee
24 February 1998	Vienna	Eleonora Hostasch, Austrian Minister for Labour, Health and Social Affairs
28 April 1998	Paris	Raoul Briet, Director of Social Security

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the estimated total additional cost to his Department arising from meetings and events specifically connected with the UK presidency of the European Union. [54283]

Angela Eagle: The total additional expenditure was approximately £29,000, excluding the activities of the Ministers for Women.

Government Purchase Card

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what use (a) his Department and (b) its agencies are currently making of the Government Purchase Card; what savings he estimates are being achieved as a result; what plans he has to expand use of the card by his Department and its agencies; and if he will make a statement. [55168]

Mr. Timms: Since 1995 this Department has obtained Corporate Purchasing Cards under an existing banking services contract. All DSS business units have now agreed to transfer to the Government Procurement Card (GPC). A business case for this was prepared in July 1998. Subject to business case approval it is planned to run a competition for the DSS requirement between banks in the Treasury's GPC Master Framework.

Based on past experience in DSS cards like the GPC can improve the conventional order process and allow staff to achieve efficiency savings of about £10 per transaction. About 33 per cent. of DSS purchase orders are expected to be suitable for GPCs. The business case indicates potential efficiency savings of about £1 million per year. The cards will save staff time and allow them to focus on higher value activity. The use of GPCs and related benefits and savings will be piloted in selected business areas. Subject to successful evaluation of these pilots general roll-out is planned for mid 1999.

Funeral Payments

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what changes have been made to the Social Fund in respect of the payment of costs for funerals by his Department since May 1995; and what plans he has to make further changes. [55044]

Angela Eagle: The Funeral Payment scheme has been amended four times since May 1995. Details of the main changes are set out.

In June 1995, a £500 cap was placed on specified funeral directors' services, and the payment of reasonable costs for other specified disbursements was introduced. A new priority order reflected that the responsible person would be the surviving partner or, where there was no partner, a close relative or close friend. A contact test was also introduced to help determine whether it was reasonable for the claimant to have taken responsibility for the funeral costs where there was no surviving partner.

In October 1996, a number of minor changes were introduced, including adding income-based Jobseeker's Allowance to the list of qualifying benefits; making provision for a fee or donation for a minister, but restricting the amount allowed to that laid down in the Parochial Fees Order.

In April 1997, the scheme was simplified to allow the cost of a small number of specified items or services, plus up to £600 for other funeral expenses. The specified items included the necessary costs of a burial or cremation. A new "immediate family member" contact test was introduced where there was no surviving partner, to help determine whether it was reasonable for the claimant to have taken responsibility for the funeral costs. This change prevented payment if there were other immediate family members (parent, son or daughter of the deceased), and neither they nor their partner had been awarded a qualifying benefit.

In November 1997, following a decision of the Social Security Commissioner, the provision was extended to allow a Funeral Payment where a funeral took place outside the United Kingdom (UK), provided it was within the European Economic Area. In such cases, the amount allowed would be limited to that which would have been awarded if the funeral had taken place in the area where the deceased lived in the UK.

As with all areas of Government policy, this area is kept under review, but we have no immediate plans to make further changes.

Housing and Council Tax Benefits

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list for each local authority in Scotland, for 1996–97, housing and council tax benefit expenditure relating to (a) good cause backdated awards, (b) exceptional circumstances awards and (c) exceptional payments, under Regulation 61(1), indicating the percentage in each category as a proportion of overall housing and council tax benefit expenditure. [55035]

Angela Eagle: The information is in the tables. Regulation 61(1) does not relate to exceptional payments. Regulation 61(3) relates to Rent Allowance Exceptional Hardship payments. There is no equivalent Regulation for Rent Rebate or Council Tax Benefit.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give a breakdown of the reasons for refusal given to the applicants whose claim for housing benefit/council tax benefit extended payments were refused in the period January 1997 to December 1997. [55317]

Angela Eagle: The information is not available in the format requested. However, of the 163,000 claims for extended payments made between January 1997 and December 1997 140,000 (85 per cent.) were successful.

1. Caseload figures have been rounded to two significant figures, percentages to a whole per cent.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the cost of raising the earnings disregard in housing benefit and council tax benefit for lone parents to (a) £30, (b) £35 and (c) £40. [55582]

Angela Eagle: The information is in the table.

Lone parent earnings disregard	Housing benefit/council tax benefit cost (£ million)
(a) £30	15
(b) £35	30
(c) £40	45

2. Estimates rounded to nearest £5 million

Motorcycle Parking

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many motorcycle parking spaces exist at each office or site for which his Department is responsible; and how many are secure spaces. [55256]

Angela Eagle: The information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Such information as is available suggests that there are very few parking spaces on the general estate that are specifically designated for motorcycles. Invariably, most motorcyclists make use of car parking facilities or sheds where bicycles are secured. However, at the Department's major sites at Newcastle, Washington, Lytham and Preston a total of 29 secure motorcycle parking spaces are provided and a further 80 bays, in a secure environment, can be utilised for either motorcycles or bicycles.

Jobseekers Allowance and Income Support

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claims for income-based jobseekers allowance and income support were withdrawn in the period January 1997 to December 1997. [55316]

Angela Eagle: The information requested is not available.

Organophosphates

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the impact of organophosphorous compounds since 1 May 1997; which organisations are carrying out the research; and what is the timetable for its completion. [55338]

Mr. Timms: The Department of Social Security has commissioned no research on the impact of organophosphorous compounds since 1 May 1997. To ensure that policy is medically sound and based on the latest research, the Department's medical advisers regularly monitor the scientific and medical literature, and liaise with colleagues in other government departments, and in universities and research institutions. In June 1998, the report of the Official Group on Organophosphates was published by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food. This report contains a list of all research funded by Government Departments into organophosphates.

Childcare Disregard

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the cost to the Exchequer of the childcare disregard in family credit; and what proportion of that cost is in respect of childcare provided by grandparents or other relatives of the children concerned. [55388]

Angela Eagle: The annual expenditure in 1997–98 for extra awards made in Family Credit for formal childcare charges was £33.3 million.

Information on the proportion of that cost which is in respect of childcare provided by grandparents or other relatives is not available. However, for the purposes of the childcare disregard, Family Credit claimants can claim for help only with the cost of "formal" childcare. Formal childcare is classified as that provided by registered childminders and nurseries and by out-of-hours clubs on school premises, run by school or a Local Authority, and schemes run on Crown property. In most cases care provided by grandparents or other relatives is likely to be informal childcare and would not attract a disregard.

Independent Tribunal Service

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what factors led to the decision by the Independent Tribunal Service to employ a customer services manager; and if he will make a statement on the nature of the customer relationship which applies in the case of a judicial body. [55402]

Angela Eagle: This is a matter for the Independent Tribunal Service (ITS). The President of ITS, His Honour Judge Michael Harris, will write to my right hon. Friend shortly.

War Pensions

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the war pension disablement disregard was set at £10; and what it would be at current prices if it had been increased in line with inflation since then. [55488]

Mr. Timms: The war pension disregard was set at £10 in April 1990. It would now be worth £12.75 if it had been uprated by the RPI. However, as the war pension disregard is applied to earnings related benefits it would, therefore, have been updated by ROSSI and now be worth £13.15.

The £10 disregard is not the only disregard war pensioners may receive when claiming an income related benefit. There is also a total disregard of the whole of the supplementary pension of £54.70 per week awarded to "pre 1973" war widows (widows whose late husband's military service was completed before 31 March 1973 and who are not entitled to an attributable widow's pension from the Ministry of Defence), as well as a disregard of any mobility supplement and payment of war disablement pension based on the need for attendance.

Child Maintenance

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the cost of disregarding child maintenance for all (a) lone parent family credit and (b) working families tax credit claimants. [55581]

Angela Eagle: The information is in the table.

	Cost (£ million per annum)
Family Credit	40
Working Families Tax Credit	40

Notes:

1. Figures are rounded to the nearest £5 million and are at 1998/99 prices, benefit levels and caseloads
2. Based on the May 1998 5 per cent. scan of the Family Credit Computer System
3. Figures do not take into account the effect of the minimum wage
4. Costs include a small element of spousal maintenance which it is not possible to identify separately on the Family Credit dataset
5. Figures do not include couples

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the cost of a (a) £10, (b) £15 and (c) £20 child maintenance disregard in income support. [55580]

Angela Eagle: The information is set out in the table.

The estimated full year costs of child care disregard

Disregard (per week)	Cost (per annum)
£10	£100 million
£15	£140 million
£20	£170 million

Notes:

1. Figures are rounded to the nearest £5 million and are at estimated 1999–2000 caseloads.
2. There would be offsetting savings of around £20 million if the Child Maintenance Bonus were also to be abolished.

Luncheon Vouchers

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of those people in receipt of luncheon vouchers as part of their contract of employment (a) are categorised as being low paid and (b) have incomes below the level of the national minimum wage. [55605]

Mr. Timms: According to the latest Family Resources Survey (1996–97), less than 1 per cent. of all employees responding to the survey had received luncheon vouchers from their present employer in the last six months. Of these employees, in the region of 2 per cent. had calculated hourly earnings below levels consistent with the national minimum wage. This is based on an extremely small sample size and should therefore be treated with caution. The independent Low Pay Commission have concluded that there is no standard definition of low pay.

Pension Contributions

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the distribution of ages at which employees first make second tier pension contributions to schemes other than the state earnings-related pension scheme. [55635]

Mr. Denham: At present the information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, the Department has commissioned the Centre for Research in Social Policy, Loughborough University, to carry out an analysis, using data from the Survey of Family and Working Lives, of how people are building up pension rights over their lifetime. This analysis is looking at the age at which people join occupational and personal pensions. This work is expected to be completed by the end of this year, and the report will be published as soon as possible thereafter.

Households Below Average Incomes

Ms Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects the latest figures on households below average incomes to be published; and if he will make a statement. [55664]

Angela Eagle: The latest figures in the Households Below Average Income series, covering the period from 1979 to 1996–97, were published on 15 October 1998, and copies have been placed in the Library.

The figures bear out our belief that there is a need to tackle poverty by helping people into work, and by getting help to the poorest pensioners. By introducing the New Deals, the Working Families Tax Credit and the Guaranteed Minimum Income for pensioners we are making real progress in addressing this situation.

The figures also show that the ever increasing Social Security Bill has had little impact on reducing inequality. This confirms our approach that welfare reform is required.

Correspondence

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the hon. Member for Wakefield will receive a reply to his correspondence of 8 May 1998, on behalf of his constituent Mr. Wright, from (a) the Disability Living Allowance Unit and (b) the Benefit Agency Medical Service. [55032]

Mr. Timms: The administration of the Disability Living Allowance Unit and the Benefits Agency Medical Services is a matter for Peter Mathison, the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. David Hinchliffe, dated 19 October 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking when you will receive a reply to your correspondence of 8 May, concerning your constituent Mr. Wright, from (a) the Disability Living Allowance Unit (DLA) and (b) the Benefits Agency Medical Service (BAMS).

The Benefits Agency Customer Charter sets out targets for response to complaints. They are an acknowledgement within two working days and a full response within seven working days (twenty working days for BAMS). I am sorry, on this occasion, you have failed to receive the standard of service which you are entitled to expect.

Repiles to your letter were issued from the BAMS on 7 August 1998 and from the DLA Unit on 11 August 1998.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his Department's policy on future levels of incapacity benefit. [55434]

Mr. Timms: We are committed to modernising benefits for incapacity and disability. The current system has failed to give severely disabled people the support they need, failed to encourage and help sick and disabled people to work, and failed to keep pace with social and economic change. We will announce our proposals for reforming Incapacity Benefit in due course.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the impact on public funds of reducing incapacity benefit by £15 per week on recipients. [55435]

Mr. Timms: We estimate that the impact on public funds of reducing all the rates of Incapacity Benefit by £15 a week in the current year would have been a reduction in the region of £950 million.

HEALTH

Asbestos

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what sum from the money allocated to his Department following the Comprehensive Spending Review will be used to remove asbestos from buildings within the National Health Service. [51865]

Mr. Milburn: The National Health Service Estates Agency collects information on backlog maintenance which is recorded in three categories: physical condition, statutory and non-statutory standards, together with fire safety. The cost of removing asbestos is contained within the statutory and non-statutory standards element.

My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced additional resources for the NHS totalling £17.7 billion over the years 1999–2000 to 2001–02 on 14 July 1998, Official Report, columns 187–211. Details on the allocation of these resources will be announced in due course. However, ultimately it will be for trusts to determine what proportion of their backlog maintenance capital allocation should be apportioned to asbestos removal, depending on local circumstances determined as part of their health and safety risk management strategies.

Mental Health Act Services

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evidence he has assessed of the extent to which local authorities have been charging for section 117 Mental Health Act 1983 residential or domiciliary services; and if he will give guidance to those who have paid for such services. [54971]

Mr. Boateng: This information is not held centrally in the Department. Any individuals who think they have been wrongly charged for services provided under section 117 of the Mental Health Act 1983 can seek legal advice and take legal action if so advised.

Hospital Discharges

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what number and percentage of people admitted to hospital were readmitted within 28 days of being discharged (a) in total and (b) for those people aged (i) up to 64 and (ii) 65 years and over in the last year for which figures are available; [54972]

(2) what number and percentage of NHS trusts employ a hospital discharge co-ordinator or equivalent. [54975]

Mr. Boateng: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Hospital Aftercare

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many hospital aftercare schemes or hospital at home schemes exist within the NHS; and if he will provide a breakdown by NHS region; [54973]

(2) what number and percentage of hospital aftercare schemes or hospital at home schemes are run by (a) NHS trusts, (b) voluntary organisations and (c) others. [54974]

Mr. Boateng: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Vitamin B12

Mr. Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the relationship between vitamin B12 and the control of fibroids and the consequences of hormone replacement therapy for fibroids. [54684]

Mr. Boateng: The Department has not centrally directly commissioned or undertaken any evaluation into the relationship between vitamin B12 and the control of fibroids and the consequences of hormone replacement therapy (HRT) on fibroids.

The Government fund health and medical research through the Medical Research Council (MRC), the Department of Health's Policy Research Programme (PRP), and the National Health Service Research and Development (R&D) Programme.

The MRC is not currently funding any research directly addressing the problems of fibroids. It is supporting a major, long-term trial on the effects of HRT: this will include particularly close monitoring by general practitioners of participants at risk from fibroids, but is not specifically looking into the links between HRT and fibroids. Additionally, the MRC funds research into female reproductive biology, including menstrual problems, which is generally relevant to fibroids.

The Department's PRP and centrally managed NHS R&D programmes are not currently directly commissioning any work in this area. Information is not currently available about other, devolved programmes, including whether any NHS providers are using service support costs funded from the R&D levy to support work in this area. Data are currently being collected and will be available during 1999.

Cervical Screening

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he proposes to increase the take-up of (a) breast screening and (b) cervical cancer testing amongst women with learning disabilities. [54908]

Mr. Boateng: We are aware of the need to increase the take-up of breast and cervical screening amongst women with learning disabilities. Work is due to proceed in consultation with the Advisory Committees on Breast Cancer and Cervical Screening to develop good practice frameworks in order to improve equity of access for people with learning difficulties.

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when he expects to announce the findings of the Cervical Screening Action Team; [55300]

(2) if he will set out the terms of reference of the Cervical Screening Action Team; and if he intends to publish its report; [55299]

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to (a) receive and (b) publish the report of the action team convened by Sir Kenneth Calman on cytology services. [55140]

Mr. Boateng: The Cervical Screening Action Team (CSAT) was set up in December 1997 to monitor action to improve the quality of and public confidence in the National Health Service cervical screening programme; consider what action should be taken to address staff resource issues for the cervical screening programme nationally; and identify any particular areas of the cervical screening programme where further action is needed. Members of the team included representatives from the Women's Nationwide Cancer Control Campaign, the relevant professional bodies and the National Co-ordinating Office of the cervical screening programme.

The report of the Cervical Screening Action Team was published by the Chief Medical Officer on 24 August 1998. It noted the progress made so far, particularly in the areas of quality assurance and training. The team made a number of recommendations about further improvements in quality assurance; training of cytology and other staff; and information for women, the general public and health professionals.

Copies of the report are available in the Library.

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of recruitment and retention problems in cytology services. [55142]

Mr. Milburn: A research programme to assess future service needs and issues surrounding recruitment to and retention within the workforce involved in the provision of cytology services is to be commissioned. This will report to the National Health Service Executive through the National Advisory Group for Scientists and Technicians.

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what is the average time taken for a patient to receive the results of their cervical smear test; and what percentage take longer than the recommended four weeks; [55207]

(2) for each health authority in England, what is the average time taken for a patient to receive the results of their cervical smear test; and what percentage take longer than the recommended four weeks. [55212]

Mr. Boateng: This information is not available centrally. Officials are shortly to begin a formal review of the information available about the cervical screening programme and data collection will be included as part of this review.

Guidance issued by the national co-ordinating team for the National Health Service cervical screening programme state that at least 80 per cent. of women should receive their smear test results within four weeks of the smear being taken and 100 per cent. should receive their results within six weeks. As at 31 March 1997 (the latest information available), 77 per cent. of laboratories were reporting results within four weeks of the date of the smear test and 95 per cent. within six weeks.

Mr. Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cytology laboratories in England are sending their cervical smears to other laboratories for interpretation. [55301]

Mr. Boateng: The information requested is not available centrally.

However, the National Health Service cervical screening programme has recently conducted a survey of laboratories in England. Of 180 questionnaires sent out, 114 have been returned. Preliminary results show that 16 laboratories send cervical smear slides to other laboratories for assessment.

Pharmaceutical Wholesalers

Mrs. Irene Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many pharmaceutical wholesalers ceased to operate in each year between 1990 and 1998. [55182]

Mr. Milburn: The numbers of wholesaler dealers whose licences ceased are not available for the years 1990–1994. For subsequent years the numbers are:

	Number
Year ending 31 March 1995	77
Year ending 31 March 1996	131
Year ending 31 March 1997	78
Year ending 31 March 1998	73

Mrs. Irene Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many pharmaceutical wholesalers were established in the United Kingdom in each year between 1990 and 1998. [55162]

Mr. Milburn: The numbers of wholesaler dealers licensed are not available for the years 1990 and 1991. For subsequent years the number are:

	Number
Year ending 31 March 1992	109
Year ending 31 March 1993	125
Year ending 31 March 1994	123
Year ending 31 March 1995	161
Year ending 31 March 1996	146
Year ending 31 March 1997	135
Year ending 31 March 1998	94

Thalassaemia

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what support his Department has provided for research into thalassaemia. [55505]

Ms Jowell: Research may be ongoing in individual National Health Service units but there is currently no central funding for research into thalassaemia from either the Department's policy research programme or the central NHS research and development programmes. The Medical Research Council, which is funded by the Office of Science and Technology, commissions most of the Government's research into bio-chemical and clinical issues. The Council is not supporting any thalassaemia research at present but it is always willing to consider sound scientific proposals, in competition with other applications.

Vaccinations

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to make public funding available to meet the costs incurred by parents choosing to travel to France to obtain the single measles vaccination for their children, following its withdrawal from the United Kingdom. [55503]

Ms Jowell: None. Single measles vaccine has not been recommended in the United Kingdom since 1988. Measles, Mumps and Rubella vaccine is recommended to protect against measles.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if it is his Department's policy that parents who are concerned about the possible side effects of the MMR vaccination should have access to other forms of vaccination for their children. [55502]

Ms Jowell: The United Kingdom health departments are advised on immunisation policy by the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation, an independent expert statutory committee. The use of single vaccines in place of Measles, Mumps and Rubella is not recommended since there is no evidence that doing this has any benefit and it may even be harmful. This Department's policy is to ensure parents are provided with factual information about immunisation and that immunisation recommendations are backed up by sound scientific research. The administration of separate measles, mumps and rubella vaccines instead of MMR is not supported by any studies into its safety or efficacy.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions his Department has had with Pasteur Merieux MSD to discuss the withdrawal of the single measles vaccination from the United Kingdom (a) before and (b) since the withdrawal was announced. [55501]

Ms Jowell: On 20 August 1998, representatives of Pasteur Merieux informed Departmental officials that they had decided not to supply unlicensed measles vaccine to the United Kingdom. Single measles vaccine has not been recommended in the United Kingdom since 1988.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what contact he has had with the Pasteur Merieux Company concerning the withdrawal of general availability of the single measles vaccine. [55481]

Ms Jowell: Ministers have had no contact with Pasteur Merieux about this issue. On 20 August 1998, representatives of Pasteur Merieux informed Departmental officials that they had decided not to supply unlicensed measles vaccine to the United Kingdom.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the decision of some parents to take their children to other countries for the single measles vaccine. [55482]

Ms Jowell: Measles, Mumps and Rubella vaccine is readily available in the United Kingdom to protect children against not only measles, but also mumps and rubella, all of which are potentially serious diseases. Single measles vaccine has not been recommended in the United Kingdom since 1988.

Motorcycle Parking

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many motorcycle parking spaces exist at each office or site for which his Department is responsible; and how many are secure spaces. [55264]

Ms Jowell: The majority of buildings and sites for which the Department has management responsibility have facilities for parking motorcycles either in the form of dedicated secure spaces (see table) or by other local arrangements such as use of space in car parks.

Building	Dedicated secure motorcycle spaces

Government Purchase Card

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what use (a) his Department and (b) its agencies are currently making of the Government Purchase Card; what savings he estimates are being achieved as a result; what plans he has to expand use of the card by his Department and its agencies; and if he will make a statement. [55179]

Mr. Milburn: The Department is about to begin a study which will identify the scope for introducing the Government Procurement Card in the Department. A decision about the use of the card will be made in the light of this work.

Health Action Zone

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his announcement of a health action zone for Camden and Islington, how much money will be available for the project. [55520]

Mr. Milburn: Camden and Islington Health Authority has been invited to develop a full programme, with the expectation of being awarded second wave health action zone status from 1 April 1999, subject to a satisfactory programme being submitted. Second wave health action zones will receive a share of £15 million programme funding in 1999–2000. In 2000–2001, first and second wave health action zones will share £60 million programme funding.

Suicide

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many young people in care committed or attempted to commit suicide, broken down by social services authorities, in the last monitoring year; and what recording mechanisms are in place in the Social Services Inspectorate to monitor such data. [55362]

Mr. Boateng: Under paragraph 20 of Schedule 2 to the Children Act 1989, local authorities are required to notify the Secretary of State for Health of all deaths of children who are being looked after by the local authority.

Local authorities are also required under Regulation 19 (2) (a) and (c) of the Children's Home Regulations 1991 to notify the Department of the death of, or serious injury to, a child in a children's home.

There is no statutory requirement for the cause of death to be identified although local authorities generally do provide it. Information on the number of attempted suicides is not held centrally.

The Department's records show that two children committed suicide whilst being looked after by local authorities in 1997–98, the last monitoring year. One child was in the care of Somerset, the other in the care of the London Borough of Bromley.

These notifications, along with others relating to incidents of child deaths and serious harm where abuse is suspected, are recorded on the Department's Child Protection Database. This computer database links the Department's Social Care Regions and the Social Care Policy branches and has been operational since April 1998.

Spinal Treatment

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will fund the replacement of invasive procedures carried out in the course of spinal treatment with safer practices. [55041]

Mr. Boateng: Magnetic Resonance Imaging (MRI) is the methodology of choice in the investigation of spinal conditions; however, we have no plans to replace invasive procedures entirely. For some patients unsuitable for MRI invasive procedures may remain necessary. It is for clinicians to use their skill, knowledge and experience to weigh carefully the likely benefits of any treatment or procedure against the anticipated risk for the patient and, following discussion with the patient, to exercise their clinical judgment accordingly.

Adhesive Arachnoiditis

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will fund the greater use of chronic pain management programmes for sufferers of adhesive arachnoiditis. [55042]

Mr. Boateng: Multi-disciplinary pain management programmes have been shown to be effective. The funding of such services, including those for arachnoiditis sufferers, is the responsibility of health authorities in consultation with trusts and health professionals.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will investigate the alleged link between adhesive arachnoiditis and the use of Myodil. [55040]

Mr. Boateng: Arachnoiditis can arise from a number of causes. There are no plans to investigate links between Myodil and arachnoiditis: the association between the use of Myodil and the occurrence of arachnoiditis is recognised. The product information for Myodil contained a warning about the possibility of post-myelography arachnoiditis for many years.

Social Services (Liverpool)

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he intends to take to ensure that the criticisms of Liverpool Social Services contained in the recent Social Services Inspectorate report are addressed. [55235]

Mr. Boateng: Ministers have agreed an action plan with Liverpool Social Services which addresses the main issues raised by the report of the Social Services Inspectorate/Audit commission Joint Review, published on 23 July 1998. Progress is being monitored by the Social Services Inspectorate (SSI) and will be formally evaluated by SSI and the local auditors after six months.

Cardiac Surgery (Bristol)

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the terms of reference of the inquiry into cardiac surgery at the Bristol Royal Infirmary include the role played by his Department. [55229]

Mr. Milburn: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced the terms of reference of the Public Inquiry into heart surgery in Bristol on 12 August 1998 as follows:

To inquire into the management of the care of children receiving complex cardiac surgical services at the Bristol Royal Infirmary between 1984 and 1995 and relevant related issues; to make findings as to the adequacy of the services provided; to establish what action was taken both within and outside the hospital to deal with concerns raised about the surgery and to identify any failure to take appropriate action promptly; to reach conclusions from these events and to make recommendations which could help to secure high quality care across the NHS.

It is for the Inquiry to determine how it meets the terms of reference. We have instructed the Department to cooperate fully with the Inquiry and to make available all relevant documents.

General Dental Council

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what criteria he takes into consideration to ensure that the composition of the General Dental Council represents and reflects the public interest; [55196]

(2) if he will increase the number of lay persons serving on the General Dental Council. [55197]

Mr. Milburn: In the consultation document A First Class Service: Quality in the NHS published in July we suggested that, for professional regulation to continue to enjoy public confidence, regulatory bodies must be open to public scrutiny and responsive to changing clinical practice and public needs. In this context we welcomed proposals from the General Dental Council to make a significant increase in their lay membership.

Taxol

Ann Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice is to be given to the National Health Service following the review by the Standing Medical Advisory Committee of the use of Taxol/cisplatin for ovarian cancer. [55347]

Mr. Boateng: An updated analysis of the survival benefit of using Taxol in combination as a first line treatment of advanced ovarian cancer was presented at the May 1998 meeting of the American Society of Clinical Oncology. This research indicates that Taxol given in combination with platinum increases life expectancy by around one year. In July 1998 the Standing Medical Advisory Committee considered guidelines prepared by the Joint Council for Clinical Oncology (JCCO) which take into account these latest research results. The JCCO guidelines were published in September and sent to Oncologists in the United Kingdom. A letter updating regional directors of Public Health in England on this issue was sent out by the National Health Service Executive on 18 August 1998.

Hidradenitis Suppurativa

Ms Kingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what action his Department is taking to raise awareness and educate (a) the public and (b) general practitioners regarding the skin disease Hidradenitis Suppurativa; [55227]

(2) what action his Department (a) has undertaken and (b) is planning to take with regard to the skin disease Hidradenitis Suppurativa. [55226]

Mr. Boateng: The Department has not and is not planning to undertake action specifically relating to Hidradenitis Suppurativa. However, the National Health Service provides a wide range of services for people with skin diseases. It is for the clinician to decide exactly what treatments are appropriate for patients with these conditions and it is the responsibility of health authorities to assess the health care needs of their population and to commission services, including the provision of care for Hidradenitis Suppurativa.

The provision of general practitioners' education is the responsibility of the relevant professional statutory bodies, such as the Medical Royal Colleges.

Medicines (Children)

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 20 July 1998, Official Report, columns 407–08, what steps he is taking to monitor the way pharmaceutical companies comply with EU guidance on the licensing of medicines in children; which companies have so far complied with this guidance; which products are being developed in accordance with this guidance; and when the application of the guidance will be extended to products already on the market. [55199]

Ms Jowell: When an application for a new medicinal product is assessed by the Medicines Control Agency (MCA), the presence or absence of a paediatric section to the dossier is noted.

Some companies have already complied with the guideline but neither the MCA nor the European Medicines Evaluation Agency keeps a list of those who do.

The MCA does not hold information on those products which are being developed in accordance with the guidance. Companies are not obliged to reveal product development plans to regulatory agencies.

The scope of the guidance applies to marketed products as well as to products in development.

The guidance is not legally binding.

Ambulance Services

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money per head was allocated for ambulance services in each health region in England in each of the last three years. [55478]

Mr. Boateng: The information given in the table shows allocations in the form of ambulance trust income per head aggregated by National Health Service Region. Copies of the figures for 1997–98 will be placed in the Library when they become available.

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the amounts of money allocated to each ambulance trust in England in each of the last three years. [55479]

Mr. Boateng: The information given in the table shows allocations in the form of ambulance trust income for the years 1995–96 and 1996–97. Copies of the figures for 1997–98 will be placed in the Library when they become available.

National Institute for Clinical Excellence

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how the National Institute for Clinical Excellence will judge the cost-effectiveness of new drugs and treatments. [55272]

Mr. Boateng: Our proposals for the appraisal process will shortly be published for discussion with interested parties. The National Institute for Clinical Excellence will itself be responsible for developing the precise criteria to be applied in judging clinical and cost effectiveness, drawing on international experience and methodology and guidance on the methods of appraising effectiveness in public expenditure.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what account the National Institute for Clinical Excellence will take of royal colleges' recommendations in formulating best practices. [55271]

Mr. Milburn: The National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) has yet to be established. However, the Government's reforms for health, including the establishment of NICE, are centred around a partnership between the health professions (including professional bodies like the Royal Colleges), the public, the National Health Service and the Government themselves.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans the National Institute for Clinical Excellence has to ensure consistency in the response it receives on developing best clinical practices. [55274]

Mr. Milburn: The public and Government expect to see health services that are consistent with our research knowledge and best professional practice. The Government's proposals introduce a comprehensive National Health Service agenda for quality, with local duties to ensure quality, backed up by a new Commission for Health Improvement which will monitor clinical standards set by NICE.

National Performance Framework

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if NHS staff satisfaction surveys will be incorporated into the National Performance Framework. [55247]

Mr. Milburn: The National Framework for Assessing Performance focuses on outcomes for patients. The management and welfare of National Health Service staff is a direct responsibility of their employers at a local level. The results of staff satisfaction surveys will be used locally to provide benchmarks against which to measure and report local improvements in the quality of working life.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what account he will take of existing customer satisfaction programmes in NHS trusts in drawing up the National Performance Framework. [55245]

Mr. Milburn: The national framework for assessing performance provides a basis for assessing National Health Service performance over six areas: health improvement, fair access, effective delivery of appropriate healthcare, efficiency, patient/carer experience and health outcomes of NHS care. Over time, the framework will be supplemented by a range of high level indicators over all the dimensions to support benchmarking and performance improvement. Results from the first national survey of NHS patients will be used to develop comparative indicators of patient/carer experience. These high level indicators can be supplemented locally, for example by indicators from health authorities or NHS trust surveys of patient/carer experience.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if additional funding incentives will be given to the best-performing health authorities based on the standards achieved in the National Performance Framework. [55251]

Mr. Milburn: The White Paper "The New NHS: Modern and Dependable" stated that:

"... Health Authorities which demonstrate most progress against the targets and objectives agreed with the NHS Executive will be eligible for modest extra non-recurrent funding for local projects which support their Health Improvement Programme".

Progress in implementing the local improvement programme will be considered across the six areas of the national performance assessment framework.

Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the new national performance framework to tackle inconsistencies in health services will include abortion services. [55366]

Mr. Milburn: The national framework for assessing performance provides a basis for assessing the performance of the National Health Service across six dimensions: Health Improvement, Fair Access, Effective Delivery of Appropriate Healthcare, Efficiency, Patient/Carer Experience and Health Outcomes of NHS Care. The framework can be used to assess NHS performance at a number of levels—for example, by health authority or NHS trust, by client group (eg services for elderly people), or by disease area (eg cancer services). In reviewing local abortion services, health authorities, primary care groups and NHS trusts should seek to assess performance across all the dimensions of the framework to assess areas for improvement.

NHS Staff (Rewards)

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what financial rewards will be given to NHS staff who exceed quality standards set by NHS trusts. [55249]

Mr. Milburn: This is a matter for individual National Health Service trusts ensuring that any incentives for staff are based on efficiency and health gains as outlined in the Health Improvement Programme.

National Survey of NHS Patients

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to break down the results of the National Survey of Patient and User Experience into individual health trusts. [55304]

Mr. Milburn: As stated in the White Paper "The New NHS: Modern and Dependable", the Government will be publishing the results of the survey at national and health authority level. In addition, consideration is currently being given to how information from the survey relating to individual NHS trusts can best be made available.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who will undertake the National Patient and User Experience Survey; and what was the selection procedure. [55273]

Mr. Milburn: As announced on 12 August, a consortium led by Social and Community Planning Research, with Imperial College and Picker Europe Ltd. has been selected to undertake the National Survey of NHS Patients.

The Department's requirement for this work was advertised in the European Journal of the European Communities in accordance with European Commission and General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade rules on public procurement on this scale. The contract award was based on the most economically advantageous bid in terms of technical quality, service delivery and experience.

NHS Trusts (Clinical Governance)

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he will take to ensure NHS staff are consulted on the implementation of clinical governance for each NHS trust. [55250]

Mr. Milburn: The White Paper "The New NHS: Modern and Dependable" stated that local clinical governance arrangements should engage professionals at ward and clinical level. The consultation document "A First Class Service: Quality in the new NHS" (copies of which are available in the Library) set out in more detail our proposals on clinical governance. Further guidance on clinical governance will be issued later in the year.

Consultants

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 30 July 1998, Official Report, columns 506–07, regarding consultants, if he will list the number of consultants by specialty and for each specialty their ratio to population in each shire county health authority. [55302]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested will be placed in the Library. The data have been calculated by aggregating the annual census figures collected from trusts within the geographical area covered by the respective health authorities. The tables will need to be interpreted with care as some trusts provide services to residents of other health authorities.

NHS Staff (Process Management)

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what training is planned to be given to NHS staff on process management and process improvement. [55246]

Mr. Milburn: Training on process management and process improvements is a matter for local employers and can have a role in the continuous professional development of health professionals.

Professional Self-regulation

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he will take to ensure that professional self-regulation will be subject to public scrutiny under the proposals in the White Paper "A First Class Service". [55270]

Mr. Milburn: The Government are committed to working in partnership with the health care professions, the National Health Service and patient interest groups to modernise the systems of professional self-regulation. We have already opened the dialogue with the regulatory bodies to find the best way to ensure that the legal framework is responsive to changing public expectations of greater openness and accountability.

Hospital Admissions

Mr. Pollard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list the numbers of (a) day cases and

(b) in-patient admissions indicating the average lengths of stay of residents of (1) St. Albans, (2) Dacorum, (3) Watford, (4) Hertsmere and (5) Three Rivers local authority districts in acute, geriatric and maternity departments in (i) St. Albans and Hemel Hempstead hospitals, (ii) Watford and Mount Vernon hospitals, (iii) the West Hertfordshire Community Trust, (iv) East Hertfordshire/Queen Elizabeth II Hospital, Welwyn Garden City, (v) North Hertfordshire/The Lister Hospital, Hitchin, (vi) the Luton and Dunstable Hospital, (vii) Stoke Mandeville Hospital, (viii) Barnet Healthcare Trust, (ix) Chase Farm, (x) Wellhouse Trust, (xi) Northwick Park Hospital, (xii) The Royal Free Hospital, (xiii) other NHS hospitals and (xiv) private hospitals for each of the past five years for which data are available; [55325]

(2) if he will list the numbers of in-patient episodes of length (a) less than one, (b) 1, (c) 2 to 3, (d) 4 to 7, (e) 8 to 14, (f) 15 to 21, (g) 22 to 30, (h) 31 to 60 and (i) 61 days and over in (i) acute, (ii) geriatric and (iii) maternity departments in (1) St. Albans and Hemel Hempstead hospitals, (2) Watford and Mount Vernon hospitals and (3) West Herts Community Trust, for each of the past five years for which data are available; [55375]

(3) if he will list the numbers of (a) day cases and (b) in-patient admissions and the average lengths of stay of (x) residents of (1) Hertfordshire local government districts other than St. Albans, Dacorum, Watford, Hertsmere and Three Rivers, (2) Greater London, (3) Bedfordshire, (4) Buckinghamshire, (5) Berkshire and (y) those resident elsewhere in acute, geriatric and maternity departments in (i) St Albans and Hemel Hempstead hospitals, (ii) Watford and Mount Vernon hospitals and (iii) West Herts Community Trust for each of the past five years for which data are available; [55374]

(4) if he will list the numbers of (a) day cases and (b) in-patient admissions indicating the average lengths of stay for (1) acute, (2) geriatric, (3) mental illness, (4) people with learning disabilities and (5) maternity in (i) St. Albans and Hemel Hempstead hospitals, (ii) Watford and Mount Vernon hospitals, (iii) the West Hertfordshire Community Trust, (iv) the Horizon Trust, (v) East Hertfordshire/Queen Elizabeth II Hospital, Welwyn Garden City, (vi) North Hertfordshire/The Lister Hospital, Hitchin, (vii) the Luton and Dunstable Hospital, (viii) Stoke Mandeville Hospital, (ix) Barnet Healthcare Trust, (x) Chase Farm, (xi) Wellhouse Trust, (xii) Northwick Park Hospital and (xiii) The Royal Free Hospital for each of the past five years for which data are available. [55324]

Mr. Milburn: The available information requested has been placed in the Library. However, the Department does not collect information on activity in private hospitals.

NHS Trust Chairmen

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many chairmen of NHS trusts appointed since 1 May 1997 are retired (a) civil servants and (b) local government officers; and what has been the percentage change in the figures for (a) and (b) relative to the previous year. [55358]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Former British Child Migrants

Ms Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he plans to respond to the third report from the Health Committee of session 1997–98 on the Welfare of Former British Child Migrants (HC 755); and what discussions he has held on this matter with (a) the Australian and (b) the New Zealand Government. [55165]

Mr. Boateng: Officials in the Department have approached officials in the Governments of Australia and New Zealand through our High Commissions in Canberra and Wellington. The discussions are ongoing.

The Department is considering the report of the Health Select Committee on the Welfare of Former British Child Migrants carefully. The Government will publish their response shortly.

Infertility Services

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of access to investigation for infertility in health authorities. [55141]

Ms Jowell: No formal assessment has been made but we are aware of the annual surveys of the funding and provision of infertility services commissioned by the National Infertility Awareness Campaign. Like most National Health Service treatments, infertility treatment is funded through the general funding of health authorities, and decisions about the allocation of resources and about who should be eligible for treatment are the responsibility of individual authorities.

The Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists (RCOG) is shortly to issue the first two (of three) sets of clinical guidelines on the management of infertility. The guidelines will assist clinicians and health authorities in providing clinically effective infertility treatment. The Department will be issuing advice to the NHS to accompany the publication of the RCOG's guidelines.

CABINET OFFICE

Information Technology

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Minister without Portfolio how much his Department spent on IT itemising (a) personal computers, (b) main-frame, (c) mini-computers and (d) file servers in the last year for which figures are available. [52893]

Mr. Mandelson: I refer my right hon. Friend to the reply given to him by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on 30 July 1998, Official Report, column 502.

This answer is in respect of my duties when Minister Without Portfolio.

2 Marsham Street

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the future of the former Department of the Environment building at 2 Marsham Street. [55201]

Mr. Kilfoyle: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated under the terms of the Framework Document to the Property Advisers to the Civil Estate. I have asked its Chief Executive, Mr. John Locke, to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from John C. Locke to Mr. Harry Cohen, dated October 1998:

The Parliamentary Secretary for the Cabinet Office, Peter Kilfoyle, has asked me as Chief Executive of PACE with management responsibilities for 2 Marsham Street, to respond to your Parliamentary Question about the future of this building.

2 Marsham Street is a Government freehold property which until April this year was occupied by the Department of Environment, Transport and the Regions (DETR). While it remains vacant, this Agency is responsible for its general upkeep to ensure it remains wind and watertight and is not subjected to vandalism of any kind.

There is a possibility that Marsham Street will be used as temporary decant accommodation for another Government Department while its premises are refurbished. A decision on this is expected early in the New Year. If reuse of the building cannot be justified in Exchequer terms, the building will be demolished. This is expected to take some eighteen months following the letting of a contract.

Motorcycle Parking

Mr. Brake: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many motorcycle parking spaces exist at each office or site for which his Department is responsible; and how many are secure spaces. [55266]

Mr. Kilfoyle: The Cabinet Office, its Agencies and the Central Office of Information, for which my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office has Ministerial responsibility, have a total of 65 motorcycle parking spaces in their buildings, of which 61 are secure.

Government Purchase Card

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what use (a) his Department and (b) its agencies are currently making of the Government Purchase Card; what savings he estimates are being achieved as a result; what plans he has to expand use of the card by his Department and its agencies; and if he will make a statement. [55172]

Mr. Kilfoyle: The information is as follows:

(a) Cabinet Office has completed an assessment of the potential for using the Government Procurement Card (GPC) in the Department. It will be commissioning shortly a detailed study to determine the arrangements for the introduction of the card.

(b) i. CCTA introduced the card on 1 October.

The Buying Agency has no immediate plans to use the card for the small number of domestic purchases.

It has actively encouraged acceptance of the card by the suppliers with whom it contracts on behalf of all government purchasers.

The other Cabinet Office Agencies are at various stages of the implementation process for the GPC. The extent of GPC usage will depend upon the outcome of the trials and reviews being undertaken by each Agency.

ii. The Central Office of Information will be introducing the GPC into an area this year on a trial basis. Further introductions will depend on the result of this trial.

Government Policies

Mr. Luff: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list those policies in which he has played a co-ordinating role; and if he will make a statement. [54685]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: My role is to assist the Prime Minister and Ministerial colleagues in the implementation and co-ordination of Government policy and its effective presentation. In accordance with the House's resolution on Ministerial Accountability of 19 March 1997, it is for individual Ministers to account for the policies, decisions and actions of their departments and Next Step Agencies. I shall, of course, answer questions on my own responsibilities for the work of the Cabinet Office, including the Better Government agenda.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Non-departmental Public Bodies

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the non-departmental public bodies in existence on 1 May 1997 that (a) have been disbanded, (b) will be disbanded in the next 12 months, (c) have had their functions transferred to (i) another non-departmental public body and (ii) a democratically elected body, (d) have been renamed but continue to perform a similar role and (e) have been unchanged; if he will indicate in (c) (ii) the relevant successor body; what new non-departmental public bodies have been established since 1 May 1997; and how many non-departmental public bodies his Department currentiy is responsible for. [53867]

Mr. Tony Lloyd [holding answer 30 July 1998]: The answers are as follows.

a) None

b) None

c) i) None

ii) None

d) None

e) The FCO is responsible for twelve non-departmental public bodies. These are:

Britain-Russia Centre

British Association for Central and Eastern Europe

British Council

Commonwealth Institute

The Great Britain-China Centre

Marshall Aid Commemoration Commission

Westminster Foundation for Democracy

Diplomatic Service Appeal Board

Government Hospitality Fund Advisory Committee for the Purchase of Wine

Wilton Park Academic Council

Foreign Compensation Commission

Intelligence Services Tribunal.

The Government are committed to keeping the number of NDPBs to a minimum and to ensuring that those which remain are open, accountable and effective.

Lockerbie

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the proposals which the United Kingdom and United States of America have made for the trial of the Lockerbie suspects in The Hague; and if procedures have been introduced to enable the Libyan Government to clarify the issues involved. [55309]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The Governments of the United Kingdom, the United States and the Netherlands continue to do all they can to take forward the initiative for trial of the two accused in the Netherlands, as announced on 24 August. United Nations Security Council Resolution 1192 has been adopted unanimously, the UK Order in Council made, the UK/Dutch treaty signed, and the site for the trial designated.

The Libyan Government have sought and are obtaining clarification on a number of issues through the UN Secretary-General's Office—the channel specified in UNSCR 1192.

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs where it is intended that persons found guilty in the proposed trial of the Lockerbie suspects at The Hague will be imprisoned.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: In the event of the Libyans accused of the Lockerbie crime being convicted by the Scottish court in the Netherlands, they would continue to be held at the Scottish facility pending any appeal; subject to which they would serve the remainder of their sentences in Scotland. [55310]

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if witnesses participating in the proposed trial of the Lockerbie suspects at The Hague will be protected during travel to The Hague from arrest in respect of other alleged crimes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The Agreement between the United Kingdom and the Netherlands, signed on 18 September, makes clear that any witnesses attending the trial of the two Libyans accused at the Scottish court, in the Netherlands would be immune from arrest in respect of any offence committed prior to their arrival in the Netherlands. [55312]

Sudan

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received on the welfare of British nationals resident in Sudan. [55437]

Mr. Fatchett: Due to the withdrawal of UK staff from the British Embassy in Khartoum we are no longer able to provide consular assistance to British nationals in Sudan. All British nationals currently in Sudan were advised on 27 August to leave unless they have a compelling reason to remain. We are also still advising against all travel to the Sudan.

Some British Nationals have chosen to stay in the Sudan. We are not aware of any who are in distress.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what support the United Kingdom representative at the United Nations gave to the Sudanese request for an early site inspection of the Sudanese pharmaceutical factory. [55439]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: This issue has only been raised during informal consultations of Security Council members. The United Kingdom did not contribute to the consultations and no consensus was reached. We continue to encourage the Sudanese to sign up to the Chemical Weapons Convention, which requires members to be open to international inspections by the Organisation for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons.

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when Her Majesty's Government first had evidence that chemical weapons were being manufactured in Sudan. [55484]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We are aware of a number of reports, mainly from opposition groups, of Sudanese involvement in chemical weapons. We are concerned about these reports and will continue to monitor them.

Amsterdam Treaty

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what EU funding has been provided for the (a) yes and (b) no vote campaign in the Danish Referendum on the Amsterdam Treaty; through which bodies such funding has been issued and according to what criteria; what proportion of the cost has been borne by the United Kingdom; and what has been the cost to United Kingdom public funds to date. [55376]

Ms Quin: No EU funding was provided for political campaigning in the Danish referendum on the Amsterdam Treaty. There was therefore no cost to UK public funds.

European Community Legislation

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 12 March 1998, Official Report, column 277, what proportion of European Community legislative acts which do not pass before the Council of Ministers do not fall into the category of detailed market management measures; and if he will list the categories they fall into. [55389]

Ms Quin: The majority of Commission legislation is made under specific implementing powers delegated to the Commission by the Council. In certain circumstances, proposed implementing measures can be referred back to the Council. The majority of Commission implementing legislation is concerned with detailed market management measures, in particularly in implementing the Common Agricultural Policy. Implementing measures which do not fall into the category of detailed market management measures cover a broad range of policies. Policy areas covered by implementing legislation are listed in the General Budget of the European Union (pp.500–517 of the 1998 Budget). This is published in the Official Journal of the European Communities (No. L44, 16 February 1998).

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 12 March 1998, Official Report, columns 277–

78, on how many occasions since 1 May 1997 a Minister of his Department has intervened in the negotiations on Community legislative Acts being agreed outside of the Council of Ministers before that Act received final ministerial approval; on what proportion of occasions a Minister has rejected an agreement reached in this manner when presented with the final agreement; and what form of scrutiny by Ministers takes place during the course of the negotiations. [55398]

Ms Quin: Most Commission implementing measures are introduced under specific powers delegated by the Council of Ministers under primary legislation. Much of this legislation is of a technical and routine nature and does not involve Ministerial consideration.

Motorcycle Parking

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many motorcycle parking spaces exist at each office or site for which his Department is responsible; and how many are secure spaces. [55263]

Mr. Fatchett: This Department has 25 motorcycle spaces at our offices in London and 17 at Hanslope Park (near Milton Keynes). The spaces are within either security controlled parking areas or security controlled grounds.

Government Purchase Card

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what use (a) his Department and (b) its agencies are currently making of the Government Purchase Card; what savings he estimates are being achieved as a result; what plans he has to expand use of the card by his Department and its agencies; and if he will make a statement. [55178]

Mr. Fatchett: We plan to pilot use of the Government Procurement Card within the London-based procurement group of our overseas estate department in January 1999. Discussions have been held with several banks concerned with the scheme. Internal management information on volume and pattern of transactions with a value of up to £500 is being collated prior to an agreement with one of the banks being finalised. Guidelines to ensure satisfactory internal controls are also being developed.

Once agreement is finalised the successful bank will need to ensure that the suppliers we use have the equipment necessary to handle the more sophisticated management information requirements of the Procurement Card compared with those needed for a personal use credit/charge card.

Plans to roll out use of the card more fully and savings accruing from them will depend on our assessment of the results of the pilot.

Malaysia

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Malaysia concerning the arrest and imprisonment of the Deputy Prime Minister. [55522]

Mr. Fatchett: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary raised the case with the Malaysian Prime Minister on 21 September and the Malaysian Foreign Minister on 24 September. We have also consulted our EU partners, and the Austrians, as Presidency, issued a declaration on 2 October expressing deep concern about reports of physical mistreatment of Anwar and calling upon the Malaysian authorities to guarantee the rule of law and to respect the human rights of Anwar Ibrahim.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what (a) contacts have been made and (b) meetings have been held by the High Commissioner and High Commission staff with human rights groups in Malaysia. [55521]

Mr. Fatchett: The High Commission has regular and close contact with a wide range of human rights groups in Malaysia.

Malawi

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to encourage independent international monitoring of next year's presidential and parliamentary elections in Malawi. [55198]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The success of next year's elections will be important in consolidating multi-party democracy in Malawi.

We have been monitoring developments in the run up to the elections, working closely with the Electoral Commission, and will continue to do so. We will encourage independent international monitoring should the Electoral Commission, and all political parties involved, agree that it is desirable.

In the meantime, we shall be funding an adviser to the Chief Elections Officer.

UNITA

Ms Kingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what actions his Department has taken to close the UNITA London office and ensure the removal from the United Kingdom of the UNITA representative Mr. Kandeya. [55228]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Officials have visited Mr. Kandeya's commercial premises and satisfied themselves that there was no sign of any continuing association with UNITA. The situation is being kept under review. As far as we are aware, there are no offices or premises being maintained in the United Kingdom under the name of UNITA.

The Home Office have refused Mr. Kandeya's application for further leave to remain. Notice has been given that the Home Secretary intends to commence deportation proceedings against him. He has the right of appeal against this decision.

EU Enlargement

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the progress made by Austria's presidency of the EU on enlargement. [54858]

Ms Quin: EU enlargement remains a key priority for the UK, and the EU. We welcome progress already made during the Austrian Presidency. The General Affairs Council agreed on 5 October to open substantive negotiations with Poland, Hungary, the Czech Republic, Slovenia, Estonia and Cyprus on 10 November. Initially negotiations will focus on seven chapters of the acquis. We will continue to support the Presidency in its efforts to make further progress before the Vienna European Council.

Meanwhile, the analytical examination of the acquis with those countries not yet in negotiations (Latvia, Lithuania, Bulgaria, Romania and Slovakia) continues. All the applicants are receiving pre-accession assistance within the targeted framework of the Accession Partnerships.

The Austrian Presidency also organised a meeting of the European Conference at Foreign Minister level (for the EU, the 10 Central Europeans and Cyprus) on 6 October which agreed a number of actions in the fight against organised crime (especially child pornography) and regional cooperation on the environment.

Israel

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations Her Majesty's Government have made to Israel concerning nuclear disarmament. [55414]

Mr. Fatchett: We continue to urge Israel to accede to the Non-Proliferation Treaty, and to place all its unsafeguarded nuclear facilities under IAEA safeguards, in order to allay international suspicions about her nuclear activities.

Iraq

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the answer to the right hon. and learned Member for Folkestone and Hythe (Mr. Howard) of 16 July 1998, Official Report, columns 248–49, if he is able to provide details of the assessment of samples taken from Iraqi warheads undertaken in France and Switzerland. [55452]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The UN Special Commission has now received the final reports on the analyses of the Iraqi missile warhead fragments carried out in France and Switzerland. The results will be reviewed at a seminar of international experts in New York on 22 and 23 October, after which UNSCOM will report to the Security Council.

Pakistan (Climbers)

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when his Department was first aware that two climbers were missing in North East Pakistan; what steps were taken to alert the Pakistan authorities and organise a search; on what date such a search began; when the first helicopter search was made; and for what reasons a helicopter search was not made earlier. [55483]

Mr. Fatchett: We first heard of the disappearance of the two climbers on 14 August, when Mrs. Lisette Rendle told the Department and the High Commission in Islamabad that Ian Rendle and Gordon Campbell had failed to catch their flight home. On 15 August the High Commission alerted local police who agreed to check all hotels and police posts on the climbers' itinerary.

On 20 August the British Mountaineering Council confirmed that the two men were insured for any necessary searches and requested a helicopter search. The Pakistani Ministry of Tourism told the High Commission that the Ministry's helicopter was for rescue only, and not searches.

The Ministry advised the High Commission to ask the Pakistani Army to search with one of their helicopters but warned that permission could take 15–20 days. The Defence Section of the High Commission submitted a request the same day.

The Deputy High Commissioner called on the Ministry of Foreign Affairs on 22 August to reinforce the request for military help. The High Commission sent a further written request on 27 August.

The High Commission made simultaneous inquiries with a private company about chartering a helicopter. This proved impossible as the company's helicopters were not equipped to fly at an altitude high enough to enable the search to be carried out.

On 31 August the Government of Pakistan gave the Army authority to conduct a helicopter search. Bad weather and use of the helicopters for military purposes delayed the search until 8 September, and it then had to be abandoned because of low cloud. Bad weather again set in but the search was resumed and completed on 16 September. No trace of the two men was found. Two foot searches were also conducted, one from 22 August to 1 September and the other from 14 to 28 September. The High Commission acted with the families and tour companies to get these searches organised. Neither found any trace of the missing men. A third foot search is being organised at the families' request.

Diplomatic Service

Mr. Syms: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many of the successful candidates for the recent recruitment of middle managers for the Diplomatic Service were (a) men, (b) women and (c) over the age of 40 years. [55001]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Of the 13 candidates successful at the Middle Managers Recruitment Board, 69 per cent. (9) were men, 31 per cent. (4) were women and 31 per cent. (4) were over the age of forty.

President Hegdar Aliev

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the visit to the UK of President Hegdar Aliev of Azerbaijan. [55022]

Ms Quin: President Aliev visited the United Kingdom from 19 to 24 July 1998. The visit helped to strengthen the commercial and political relationship between the United Kingdom and Azerbaijan. President Aliev was granted an audience of HM The Queen, and paid calls on my right hon. Friends the Prime Minister, the Foreign Secretary, the Secretary of State for Defence, and the President of the Board of Trade; three major oil contracts were signed with British companies, as well as other agreements.

Discussions with President Aliev also focused on the conflict in Nagorny-Karabakh, democratic reform and human rights in Azerbaijan.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Secondary and Further Education (West Midlands)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the average size of A-level classes in (a) secondary schools and (b) further education colleges in (i) the West Midlands and (ii) Staffordshire in each of the last five years. [46304]

Dr. Howells: The average sizes of classes of pupils aged 16 and over taught by one teacher in maintained secondary schools in the West Midlands and Staffordshire Local Education Authority (LEA) area are shown in the table. Information on the size of classes in further education colleges is not collected centrally.

Average size of classes of pupils aged 16 and over taught by one teacher in maintained secondary schools

Position in January each year	West Midlands LEA area	Staffordshire LEA area
1994	10.5	9.9
1995	10.3	9.6
1996	10.3	10.6
1997	10.7	10.6
1998 (provisional)	10.5	[1] 11.4

[1] Stoke became a unitary authority separate from Staffordshire in April 1997; the provisional figure for the Stoke LEA area in January 1998 was 9.0

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the average amount spent per pupil studying A-levels in (a) secondary schools and (b) further education colleges in (i) the West Midlands and (ii) Staffordshire in each of the last five years. [46305]

Dr. Howells: The information is not collected in the form requested.

Higher Education Funding Council

Ms Dari Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will undertake a Quinquennial Review of the Higher Education Funding Council for England. [43631]

Dr. Howells: In accordance with the Government's policy of quinquennial reviews of non-departmental public bodies, the Department will conduct a review of the Higher Education Funding Council for England in 1998. The first stage of the review will take the form of a 'prior options' study with the following terms of reference:

- to review the Higher Education Funding Council's functions and the likely need in future for those functions;
- to consider the powers, terms of reference, constitutional status, membership and activities of the Higher Education Funding Council for England; and
- to consider whether some or all of the functions of the Higher Education Funding Council for England can be performed through other means.

The second stage, depending upon conclusions from the prior options study, will involve a review of the system of financial management and control within the Higher Education Funding Council for England.

The review will take account of recent relevant studies, including the report of the Dearing Inquiry.

Anti-discrimination Legislation

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his answer of 18 November 1997, Official Report, column 164, what assessment his Department has made of the anti-discrimination legislation relating to disabled people in (a) Australia, (b) New Zealand and (c) Canada; and what visits officials from his Department have made to these countries to study the impact of such legislation there. [46405]

Mr. Alan Howarth: The Department has not made a comprehensive assessment of the Australian Disability Discrimination Act, or of those parts of the New Zealand Human Rights Act and the Canadian Human Rights Act which cover disability discrimination.

The Disability Rights Task Force, which I chair, is considering how best to secure comprehensive, enforceable civil rights for disabled people within the context of our wider society. A recent discussion paper presented to the Task Force drew heavily on the approach to the definitions of disability and discrimination in other countries, in particular the Australian Disability Discrimination Act which was cited as an example in each part of the paper. This paper also included summaries of the relevant parts of the New Zealand and Canadian Human Rights Act. The paper is available on the Internet on www.disability.gov.uk.

Officials have not visited these countries. The Australian Human Rights and Disability Rights Commissioner recently visited the UK to present a seminar on disability rights in Australia which was attended by officials and by several members of the Task Force. I myself met the Commissioner who also met senior officials working on disability policy.

EU Social Fund

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has for the transfer of responsibility for the European Social Fund to the Welsh Office; what are the proposed financial arrangements for the transfer; and if he will make a statement. [45457]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Following the announcement made by the former Secretary of State for Wales on 29 February 1996, Official Report, columns 1035–37, officials have been discussing the arrangements for transfer of the administration of Welsh European Social Fund programmes to the Welsh Office. Some functions have already been transferred and as soon as the financial arrangements have been agreed the rest will follow. We aim to have these arrangements completed as soon as possible.

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what projects have received funds from the EU Social Fund in the Lincolnshire County Council area. [55342]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Projects that have received funding from the European Social Fund in 1998 are shown in the table. This shows that the amount of ESF funding allocated to projects in the Lincolnshire County Council area so far this year is £2,241,746.80. This total excludes Objective 4 funding as the results of the 1998 application round will not be known until later in the year.

National Curriculum

Mr. McCabe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will publish the 1997 National Curriculum assessment results in English, mathematics and science for seven, 11 and 14-year-olds aggregated at LEA level; and if he will make a statement. [27373]

Ms Estelle Morris: The 1997 National Curriculum assessment results in English, mathematics and science for 7, 11 and 14-year-olds, aggregated at local education authority level, are contained in a number of tables, copies of which have been placed in the Library.

We have set challenging targets for 11-year-olds' attainment in literacy and numeracy by 2002. We have recently agreed local literacy targets with each LEA, and we will be agreeing later this year similar targets for numeracy. We want to share and maximise the use of National Curriculum assessment data. These data reflect the key role local education authorities have in supporting schools to raise standards.

Departmental Vehicles

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much his Department expects to spend in each year from 1998–99 to 2000–01 on vehicle replacements. [54986]

Mr. Mudie: The Department, together with the Employment Service (ES), is constantly looking at the efficiency and effectiveness of the vehicle fleet and replace vehicles only where there is a clear business need to do so. Following reviews of officially provided vehicles in both DfEE and ES earlier this year, more stringent requirements have been introduced for the use of vehicles. These are likely to result in a significant reduction in the need to purchase replacement vehicles.

In DfEE we now expect to spend less than £250,000 during 1998–99 while ES will spend about £1m during the same period. The budget for future years has yet to be agreed and will be based on operational needs of both DfEE and ES. Early indications are that the allocations will continue to decline.

EU Projects

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on the merging of Youth for Europe and the European Voluntary Service after 1999, with reference to the continuation of projects designed to foster European identity. [55343]

Mr. Mudie: The Youth for Europe and European Voluntary Service programmes provide opportunities for young people to forge links with others in the Community who share their interests and concerns and thereby to gain greater understanding of other cultures and ways of life. Such activities contribute to the personal and social education of young people and to the development of responsible citizenship. The programmes are scheduled to conclude at the end of 1999. The Commission has published proposals for a successor youth programme which would incorporate youth exchange and voluntary service activities and other measures. The Government are participating positively in negotiations with other Member States on the terms of the new programme which is intended to come into force in the year 2000.

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the introduction of the Europass to record work-related training; and if the Europass will contain (a) a microchip and (b) a photograph. [55404]

Mr. Mudie: The Europass will be a voluntary community-wide document, recording periods of work-linked training undertaken in a Member State other than the one in which the training is based. It comes into effect on 1 January 2000. The period of training will count towards a course of training being undertaken in the home Member State. It will complement at European level national systems for recording vocational training.

It falls to each Member State to implement the Europass. My officials are currently considering which agency is best placed to manage this process over the next 15 months.

There is no requirement for the Europass to contain a microchip or a photograph when it comes into effect.

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the function and purpose of (a) the Eurodesk and (b) the youth card network of the Youth for Europe programme. [55379]

Mr. Mudie: These are matters for the European Commission.

Music Services

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is his Department's current policy towards safeguarding local education authority music services; and what changes his Department proposes to make. [55018]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Government recognise the important contribution made by LEA music services; that is why we proposed new arrangements to safeguard them in our "Fair Funding" consultation document.

We are considering the responses to this consultation and we will be making an announcement on the future funding of LEA music services in the near future.

Schools (Gravesham)

Mr. Pond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list, for each of the schools in Gravesham, the amount of funding received in 1997–98 and for 1998–99 to improve security. [55322]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Kent Local Education Authority received £535,700 in 1997–98 and £445,458 in 1998–99 to improve school security. Information on amounts allocated to individual schools is not collected centrally.

Primary Classes

Shona McIsaac: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the primary schools in Cleethorpes constituency which have benefited from extra money to reduce class sizes. [55145]

Ms Estelle Morris: Schools in the Cleethorpes constituency benefiting from capital allocations to reduce infant class sizes are:

Coomb Briggs Primary: £55,178

Elliston Infants: £70,682

Healing Primary: £81,367

Humberston CE Primary: £56,410

Humberston Cloverfields Primary: £65,222

Reynolds Infants: £65,222

Stanford Infant and Junior: £65,222.

Education Budgets

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list for (a) Buckinghamshire County Council and (b) Milton Keynes Unitary Council since 1 May 1997, (i) the increase in money provided for non-HE and FE education under the SSA, (ii) the additional funding for non-HE and FE education provided in specific grants and (iii) the additional spending on non-HE and FE education allocated by each local authority. [55144]

Ms Estelle Morris: The information requested is set out in the table.

£ million

	LEA
	Buckinghamshire	Milton Keynes
Year-on-year education SSA change	+7.8	+3.2
Year-on-year specific grant change	+1.9	+0.6
Year-on-year education spending change	−2.1	+8.3

Notes:

1. All the figures show the year-on-year changes between 1997–98 and 1998–99.
2. The education SSA figures take account of income from nursery vouchers in 1997–98.
3. The specific grant figures show the year-on-year change in the total amount allocated through the Grants for Education Support and Training (GEST) programme in 1997–98 and through the Standards Fund in 1998–99. The figures therefore include the LEA contribution as well as the grant.
4. The spending figures represent the year-on-year change in budgeted net revenue expenditure on education, adjusted for income from nursery vouchers. The figures have been derived from each authority's General Fund Revenue Account (RA) returns. They exclude expenditure financed by specific grants but include the LEA contribution towards such expenditure. The figures also include a pro rata share of certain heads of expenditure, notably capital expenditure charged to the revenue account, which cannot be attributed to individual services.

Maintained Schools

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list each LEA area in order of the performance of its maintained schools at (a) A Level and (b) GCSE. [55476]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The GCE A level and GCSE information requested in respect of LEA areas is shown in the table. The results relate to 1997 exams. The results for the 1998 exams will be published later this year.

Motorcycle Parking

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many motorcycle parking spaces exist at each office or site for which his Department is responsible; and how many are secure spaces. [55259]

Mr. Mudie: The number of motorcycle parking spaces in DfEE HQ sites is 30.

	Number
Darlington	6
London	13
Runcorn	3
Sheffield	8
Total	30

The spaces at the London HQ offices can be designated as secure as these are in an underground car park. Other HQ parking facilities are monitored by CCTV.

The Employment Service (ES) does not keep records of motorcycle parking spaces at its 1,200 properties which cover a wide range of locations. Where a need is identified, and it is feasible, spaces are made available for staff use.

New Deal

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the delivery of the New Deal Programme by (a) the Employment Service and (b) TECs. [54864]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Employment Service is responsible for the delivery of the New Deal across Great Britain with a distinct lead role for specific private sector providers in some areas. In every area partnerships of key local bodies play a vital part in the development of delivery of New Deal. TECs play a role to varying extents in each of those partnerships in England and Wales.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the contracting procedure in the voluntary sector option of the New Deal. [54854]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Voluntary Sector Option contracts are for three years with an annual break clause. Contracts for this sector may guarantee a minimum volume of participants. 158 main contracts have been signed with the Voluntary sector. We are working closely with the sector continuously to improve the contracting procedures.

Training Courses

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will assess the advantage of introducing shorter, employment-specific, training courses in the New Deal. [54853]

Mr. Andrew Smith: New Deal is designed to meet individual need, and to contain the widest possible range of help to enhance employability. Employment specific training is available through each of the New Deals, which are all being rigorously evaluated.

Transport Costs

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if (a) grant-maintained and (b) locally managed schools are permitted to use money from their school budget to provide transport for children to school. [55281]

Ms Estelle Morris: Yes, in both cases.

Cambridge University

Mr. Rammell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what consultations he has held with the Vice-Chancellor of Cambridge University about measures to widen access in respect of undergraduate admissions. [55527]

Mr. Mudie: The issue of access has been raised alongside discussions about future funding. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has welcomed initiatives being taken by the University to attract applications from a wider range of potential students.

TECs and Chambers of Commerce

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what guidance he has issued to TECs and chambers of commerce about future applications for mergers; and if he will make a statement. [55151]

Mr. Mudie: The Government have announced that they will not be taking any further decisions on applications to merge from the TECs and Chambers of Commerce, until they have completed their consultation on the future rule of Training and Enterprise Councils and had time to consider the outcome. The only exceptions were those applications that had been formally received by Government for approval at the time this moratorium was announced.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the number of applications for mergers by TECs and chambers of commerce (a) received, (b) approved, (c) rejected and (d) awaiting ministerial approval to date. [55152]

Mr. Mudie: The Government have received a total of 18 applications to merge from TECs and Chambers of Commerce of which two have been withdrawn by the merger partners; 16 merger applications have been approved; no merger applications have been rejected; and no merger applications are currently awaiting ministerial approval.

Prince's Trust (Exhibition)

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if his Department has considered making an application for an Exhibition relating to the Prince's Trust to be displayed in the Upper Waiting Hall. [55543]

Mr. Mudie: I understand that the hon. Member is sponsoring a parliamentary exhibition on the Prince's Trust next week. I recommend that hon. Members visit the exhibition to learn about the excellent work of the Trust, which works with the Department in a variety of areas ranging from study support to secondment of officials.

Eleven Plus

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make secondary schools responsible for the payment and administration of the eleven plus examination; and if he will make a statement. [55021]

Ms Estelle Morris: LEAs and schools which test pupils for selective admission by ability will continue to make their own arrangements for administration and payment of costs.

Child Care

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the number of children aged (a) 0 to 4, (b) 5 to 10, (c) 11 to 12 and (d) 13 years or above whose child care during the hours of parental employment is provided primarily by a grandparent or other non-parental family member. [55387]

Ms Hodge: Estimates of the number of children in the relevant age bands whose child care during the hours of parental employment is provided primarily by a grandparent or other non-parental family member are not available. The British Social Attitudes Survey conducted in 1994 by independent researchers at Social and Community Planning Research asked working parents about their child care arrangements. The survey found that, in families where the youngest child was aged less than 5, 21 per cent. of children were cared for by relatives other than parents. Where the youngest child was between 5 and 12 years old, 18 per cent. were cared for in this way.

We know that many parents prefer their children to be cared for by relatives whilst they are at work. This is why our National Childcare Strategy seeks to improve support for such carers.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on his Department's plans to improve child care. [53474]

Ms Hodge: The Green Paper "Meeting the Childcare Challenge", which was published in May, sets out the Government's plans for a National Childcare Strategy to raise the quality of care, to make child care more affordable, and to make it more accessible.

The range of tasks envisaged in the National Childcare Strategy can be achieved only by drawing on the commitment and expertise of a wide range of partners with local knowledge and experience. We are therefore setting up in each English local authority area an Early Years Development and Childcare Partnership to take forward the local planning to implement the strategy.

Last week I announced the launch of the 1999–2000 planning guidance for the partnerships and informed each about the funding available to them from the Department for child care development next year. The partnerships are currently assessing the local demand for child care and the supply of places available to meet it and will be going on to produce plans to begin filling the gap between the two. These plans will be sent to the Department by 1 February 1999, for approval prior to delivery from 1999 onwards.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales has parallel plans for Wales.

Supported Placement Scheme

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list for each year since 1993–94 (a) the number of places supported by his Department in the supported placement scheme, (b) the cost per place to the Department, (c) the annual percentage increase in funding to placement sponsors and (d) the annual percentage increase in annual earnings of those supported by the scheme. [55572]

Mr. Andrew Smith: I have set out the answers to the hon. and learned Member's questions in the table.

Year	(a) Number of SPS places	(b) Cost per place (£)	(c) Annual % increase in funding
1993–94	7,461	3,480	6.4
		4,310	4.1
1994–95	7,748	4,420	2.7
			4.1
1995–96	8,036	4,530	2.5

Year	(a) Number of SPS places	(b) Cost per place (£)	(c) Annual % increase in funding
1996–97	8,191	4,610	1.8
1997–98	8,448	4,680	1.5

[1] Local Authorities
[2] Voluntary Bodies

Information on the annual earnings of supported employees and the annual percentage increase is not collected from supported employment contractors and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost to the Department and to its contractors. However, it is one of the fundamental conditions of the Supported Employment Programme that sponsors will, in placing disabled people with host employers, ensure that disabled people are paid the same wages as non disabled colleagues doing the same work.

Inner London Education

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations he has received concerning the funding for colleges of further education in Inner London; and if he will make a statement. [55517]

Mr. Mudie: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has received a number of representations about funding. The further education sector, including Inner London colleges, will benefit from the additional £255 million for 1999–2000, announced as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations he has received concerning the ethnicity factor in the school funding formula for Inner London; and if he will make a statement. [55518]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Government have received a number of conflicting representations regarding the ethnicity factor in the education Standard Spending Assessment formula. Decisions as to the formula for 1999–2000 will be announced later this year.

Government Purchase Card

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what use (a) his Department and (b) its agencies are currently making of the Government Purchase Card; what savings he estimates are being achieved as a result; what plans he has to expand use of the card by his Department and its agencies; and if he will make a statement. [55176]

Mr. Mudie: The Department for Education and Employment plans to implement the Government Procurement Card (GPC) on a pilot basis before the end of 1998. As the Department and its next steps agency, the Employment Service, already make extensive use of national contracts and electronic invoicing, DfEE will want to evaluate the pilot before considering full roll out of the GPC.

Age Discrimination

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to prevent age discrimination in the workplace. [55154]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Our plans are given in the report of the consultation we carried out earlier this year on age discrimination and employment. The report, "Action on Age", was published on 13 August and a copy has been placed in the Library. We are developing a draft code of good practice with key partners, including the TUC, Age Concern, Institute of Personnel and Development and the CBI. It will cover recruitment, selection, promotion, training, redundancy and retirement. It will be issued shortly for wider consultation and a final version published early next year.

PE Teachers

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the sports which trainee physical education teachers specialised in to gain their qualifications in the last year for which figures are available. [55403]

Mr. Charles Clarke: This information is not available in the form requested. 1,644 students entered physical education Initial Teacher Training in England in 1997/98; however, the Department does not collect information on the sport in which these students specialised.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many qualified physical education teachers there are in English schools. [55377]

Mr. Charles Clarke: There were some 26,000 full and part-time teachers in maintained secondary schools in 1996/97 who had a post A level qualification in physical education. Similar information for primary schools is not available. However, primary teachers are trained to deliver the whole primary curriculum including physical education.

Primary Schools

Shona McIsaac: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to assist small rural primary schools. [55146]

Mr. Charles Clarke: We fully recognise the important contribution made by rural schools and have made it clear that under both the existing arrangements for deciding statutory proposals and those coming into force in September 1999 there will be a presumption against the closure of rural schools. Our educational policies are designed to assist all schools in raising standards, including small rural primary schools. Smaller infant class sizes will mean that all children get the best start at school, and the new information and communications technology we are supporting will be of particular help to rural schools in opening up new possibilities for enriching children's learning and overcoming rural isolation. The National Literacy Strategy, which began in schools this term, and the National Numeracy Strategy, to be implemented from 1999, are designed to raise standards in all primary schools.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Kakadu National Park

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what representations she has received from the Mirrar peoples of Australia in respect of the proposed development of the Jabiluka uranium mine in the Kakadu National Park. [55413]

Clare Short: I have received no such representations.

Government Purchase Card

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what use her Department is currently making of the Government Purchase Card; what savings she estimates are being achieved as a result; what plans she has to expand use of the card by her Department and its agencies; and if she will make a statement. [55216]

Clare Short: We do not use the card at present but my Department is looking into introducing the Government Purchasing Card later this year for purchases in the UK. We are also considering a pilot operation of the Card overseas.

It is not yet possible to say what savings would result from use of the Card.

Motorcycle Parking

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many motorcycle parking spaces exist at each office or site for which her Department is responsible; and how many are secure spaces. [55262]

Clare Short: The Department for International Development has six dedicated motor-cycle spaces at its 94 Victoria Street headquarters all of which are in a garage block under the scrutiny of cameras and custody guards. The Department also has three dedicated spaces at its East Kilbride Headquarters which are relatively less secure.

UNESCO

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what progress has been made on the setting up of a UK National Commission for UNESCO; and what role the (a) Department for Education and Employment, (b) Department of Trade and Industry, Office of Science and Technology and (c) Department for Culture, Media and Sport will have in selecting appropriate non-Governmental members of the Commission; [55231]

(2) if she will list the Government departments which participate in UNESCO's activities and on what matters; [55230]

(3) how many (a) officials, and (b) NGOs have attended UNESCO-related conferences on the United Kingdom's behalf since the UK rejoined UNESCO; and what encouragement she has given to groups outside Government to participate in these conferences. [55232]

Clare Short: I refer my hon. Friend to my letters of 7 August 1998.

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of the (a) contribution made by and (b) benefits obtained by each Department which has participated in UNESCO's activities since the UK's resumption of UNESCO membership on 1 July. [55292]

Clare Short: Since the resumption of UK membership of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organisation (UNESCO), the financial costs of which are borne by my Department, a range of Government departments have contributed to activities of specific interest to them. We will be publishing a strategy paper in 1999 outlining our priorities for our work with UNESCO.

Indonesia

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, pursuant to the answer of 15 June 1998, Official Report, column 98, in relation to the Cikampek to Padalarang toll road project in Indonesia, what expenditure has been (a) allocated and (b) incurred by her Department to date; what impact the delay to the project will have on the effectiveness of her Department's support for the project; and if she will place in the Library copies of the project appraisal, monitoring and evaluation reports completed to date. [55225]

Clare Short: I refer my hon. Friend to my letter of 16 August 1998.

China and Vietnam

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on her visits to China and Vietnam. [55030]

Clare Short: I refer my hon. Friend to my letter of 7 August 1998.

Sudan

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of the welfare of British aid workers engaged in relief work in Sudan. [55436]

Clare Short: The Security Unit of the UN Operation Lifeline Sudan is responsible for co-ordinating security procedures for all relief workers operating in southern Sudan. British NGOs active in Sudan are content with the support provided. Since February we have contributed £300,000 to the Unit.

Britain has also contributed to the drawing up of a code of best practice in the management and support of aid personnel. This includes a commitment to the protection and well-being of aid personnel working in difficult and dangerous operations. Agencies seeking emergency funds for Sudan (or elsewhere) are asked to stipulate how they apply Code standards. Many of the NGOs offer advice and counselling as necessary to staff working in difficult circumstances such as those in southern Sudan.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Evans: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much money has been spent to date on advertising relating to the millennium bug problem. [46146]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 25 June 1998]: The total media spend by Action 2000 from launch of its advertising and publicity campaign in mid July to end of September has been £3.76 million.

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will take steps to require listed companies to disclose their plans for the millennium compliance of their computer systems and associated contingency plans; and if she will make a statement. [50049]

Mrs. Roche: I have no plans to do so.

In March, the Urgent Issues Task Force, a subcommittee of the Accounting Standards Board, published an abstract on accounting and disclosures in relation to Year 2000. The abstract (UITF abstract 20) explains that entities should disclose (a) the risks and uncertainties associated with the Year 2000 problem; if no such assessment has been made it should be stated, and (b) general plans to address Year 2000 issues relating to business and operations, and if material, their relationships with customers, suppliers, and other relevant parties.

Although no legally binding abstracts issued by the UITF are authoritative. Abstract 20 has been endorsed by the Stock Exchange who have drawn it to the attention of all listed companies.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received from the Software Reliability Unit at City University, London, about computers at nuclear power plants failing to recognise the year 2000. [54682]

Mr. Battle: The Government have received no such representations. I understand, however, that Professor Bev Littlewood of the Software Reliability Unit at City University, London, and a member of the Health and Safety Commission's independent expert advisory body on nuclear safety matters, the Nuclear Safety Advisory Committee (NuSAC), has suggested that NuSAC consider the implications of the century date change for nuclear safety at a forthcoming meeting of the committee. This is, of course, a matter for NuSAC to consider.

All UK nuclear operators have initiated major programmes of work to address the century date change problem. These programmes are being closely monitored by the UK's independent nuclear safety regulator, the Health and Safety Executive (HSE), which has made it clear that it is satisfied with the actions being taken by operators. Operators anticipate that all essential work to address the problem will be completed by the end of April 1999.

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the extent and cost of the current Get Your Business Ready for the Bug awareness campaign; if he will include a leaflet in telephone bills to businesses; and if he will make a statement on progress on awareness. [55148]

Mrs. Roche: The cost of the current Action 2000 advertising and publicity campaign to end of September was £3.76 million, made up as follows:

	£000
Outdoor posters	720
National press	1,220
Regional press	120
TV	1,700

The reach and frequency achieved were:

Outdoor Posters: seen by 51.5% of ABC1 adults on average 27 times.

National Press: seen by 96% of businesspeople with responsibility for 10–300 employees on average 13 times.

Regional Press: seen by 6.4% of ABC1 adults on average 2.6 times across UK.

TV: seen by 84.2% of ABC1 adults on average 4.5 times.

A number of free channels of communication to businesses via key influences have been used by Action 2000 with the following results:

Barclays Bank has included Action 2000 leaflets with bank statements to reach over 400,000 business customers.

NatWest Bank sent a message on all statements to 300,000 business customers highlighting the Millennium Bug and Action Line number. This was followed by a special letter about Action 2000 and giving Year 2000 advice to 500,000 business customers.

BT published an article in its business customer magazine 'Talking Business' with a circulation of 160,000 copies.

West of Scotland Water will include an Action 2000 leaflet with the water bills of all 27,000 business customers.

Thames Water will send a letter to 170,000 commercial customers signposting Action 2000.

Cable and Wireless will include leaflets in a mailing to 170,000 business customers.

British Midland are distributing flyers in Business Lounges and check-in desks at UK airports on an on-going basis.

The third phase, its 'state of the nation' survey is presently being completed, and the results will be announced by Action 2000 on 22 October.

Oil Exploration (Sudan)

Dr. Tonge: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the United Kingdom companies involved in the exploration for oil in Southern Sudan. [51773]

Mr. Battle: [holding answer 21 July 1998]: To the best of our knowledge there are no British companies exploring for oil in Southern Sudan although we understand that two companies, Weir Pumps and Allen Power, supply equipment to the major exploration consortium in Sudan headed by CNPC of China.

Textile Industry

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many people were employed in textile finishing (a) in 1979, (b) in 1989, (c) in 1995 and (d) at the latest available date. [49622]

Mr. Battle: The number of people employed in the textile finishing industry were 23,500 in 1989, 18,800 in 1995 and 19,900 in 1996. Data for 1979 are not available on the same basis.

Source:

Office for National Statistics, Annual Production and Construction Inquiries (PACSTAT).

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the total output of grey unfinished cloth in Britain for each of the last 10 years for which figure are available. [49616]

Mr. Battle: This information is not available from official statistics.

Foresight Panels

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what changes have been made to the remit of Foresight panels since 1 May 1997. [50018]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 20 July 1998]: None. Panel activities are currently based on action plans developed in the early part of last year and for the most part published before 1 May 1997. These focus in particular on action to engage business at all levels, including SMEs, and to promote cross working between Panels. This, in turn, is one of a range of initiatives designed to raise the profile of the Foresight Programme, both generally and within Government under the overall direction of the Ministerial Foresight Group. The progress report published in June describes the advances which have been made since the Foresight Audit was carried out last summer. Copies of the progress report are available in the Library of the House.

Decisions on the scope and structure of the next round of Foresight will be taken shortly. The proposals currently out to consultation suggest, however, that there should be a new focus on themes relevant to quality of life as well as wealth creation and that issues such as education skills and training and sustainable development should be on the agenda of all Panels. The proposals also underline our intention to broaden the basis of participation in Foresight, in particular by encouraging contributions from young people and from individuals, SMEs and organisations with specialist expertise to offer.

Civil Servants

Dr. Gibson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many civil servants in her Department (a) have a degree in science and (b) have held a position using that expertise. [50895]

Mr. Battle: Systematic and reliable data in the form requested are not available for the Department as a whole.

However, there are currently 27 staff within the Department's Fast Stream grades who have science degrees, of whom 23 have held positions where this expertise is likely to have been relevant to the content of the post.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has asked the Chief Executives of the Agencies of the Department to reply to my hon. Friend direct.

Letter from Peter Joyce to Dr. Ian Gibson, dated 19 October 1998:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply to your question about the number of staff in the Insolvency Service who (a) have a degree in science and (b) have held a position using that expertise.

I regret that the information held centrally by the Service on its staff is not maintained in a form which would provide details of those who have a science degree except at disproportionate cost.

Letter from David Hendon to Dr. Ian Gibson, dated 16 July 1998:

You asked the President of the Board of Trade, how many civil servants in her Department (a) have a degree in science and (b) have held a position using that expertise. I have been asked to answer that question in respect of the Radiocommunications Agency.

I am afraid that the Agency does not have available comprehensive data that would allow me to identify which of its staff have science degrees. I can inform you, however, that the Agency has 45 engineering staff with engineering degrees of various types. In addition, there is a small number of generalist administrators with a science or engineering degree who may find their specialist expertise relevant to some extent to the particular work the Agency does.

I hope this is helpful.

Letter from Ian Jones to Dr. Ian Gibson, dated July 1998:

I have been asked to reply in respect of the Employment Tribunals Service to your question of 15 July 1998 to the President of the Board of Trade concerning civil servants who hold a science degree.

We have no information readily available about the numbers of staff in the ETS with science degrees.

Letter from P. R. S. Hartnack to Dr. Ian Gibson, dated July 1998:

I am replying for the Patent Office to your Parliamentary Question to the President of the Board of Trade about civil servants in her Department who have a degree in science and have held a position using that expertise.

A total of 217 of the 750 Patent Office permanent staff have degrees in science—ie in science, engineering or mathematics. Of these 207 are professional patent examiners who make use of their expertise on a day to day basis either in examining patent applications or in a supervisory capacity. Most of the remaining 10 staff with science degrees have at one time or another been patent examiners and are now in supervisory positions elsewhere in the Patent Office dealing, for example, with procurement contracts. For completeness I should add that we also have a small number of graduates in science-related subjects such as geography, botany and environmental studies who do not make use of their expertise on a day-to-day basis.

Letter from Dr. Seton Bennett to Dr. Ian Gibson, dated July 1998:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply on behalf of the National Weights and Measures Laboratory to your question about the number of civil servants with science degrees.

More than half of the staff in this Agency hold technical qualifications of one sort or another, but we have no readily accessible reliable data on the number with science degrees.

Letter from John Holden to Dr. Ian Gibson, dated July 1998:

I have been asked to reply to your question to the President of the Board of Trade regarding the number of civil servants with a degree in science and would respond as follows:

(a) 15 employees have a science degree.

(b) One who has previously held a position using that expertise.

United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade in what capacity Dr. Douglas Graham is employed by UKAEA; and what is the nature of his duties. [50255]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 14 July 1998]: Dr. Douglas Graham is employed by the UKAEA at Dounreay as the Waste Strategy and Studies Department Manager in the Waste Studies Group. He is responsible for waste strategy and studies for the waste management group, including studies of technologies and waste treatment, and managing the investigation of records.

Encryption

Mr. Cohen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to her answer of 27 April 1998, Official Report, column 26, if it is her intention, as part of her proposals to regulate the use of encryption on public networks, to impose the escrow of encryption keys for data which comprises patients' personal medical information. [51793]

Mrs. Roche: No. The proposals we hope to bring forward in relation to secure electronic commerce will set up a voluntary licensing regime for organisations offering cryptography services to the public. It would be only those organisations seeking licences to provide confidentiality services that would be required to keep copies of the encryption keys of clients.

Departmental Vehicles

Mr. Burstow: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list for (a) her Department and (b) bodies listed in the National Asset Register, how many vehicles are currently (i) owned and (ii) leased; if he will indicate their (A) fuel types and (B) engine cubic capacities; and how many vehicles are expected to fall due for replacement in each of the years (1) 1998–99, (2) 1999–2000 and (3) 2000–01. [49230]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 6 July 1998]: Disaggregated information in the form requested is not available for the core Department and the other bodies listed in the National Asset Register, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

I have asked the Agency Chief Executives to reply to the hon. Member, as they have their own management responsibility for assets.

Letter from P. R. S. Hartnack to Mr. Paul Burstow, dated July 1998:

I am replying for the Patent Office to your question to the President of the Board of Trade about vehicles that are owned or leased.

The Patent Office does not own any vehicles. We lease one 2500cc diesel-engined van which is due for replacement in the period 1999–2000 and, as yet, have made no decisions on whether it will in fact be replaced or by what type of vehicle.

Letter from Ian Jones to Mr. Paul Burstow, dated 19 October 1998:

I have been asked to reply in respect of the Employment Tribunals Service to your question of 23 July 1998 to the President of the Board of Trade asking how many vehicles owned or leased will be replaced by vehicles using petrol, diesel, gas, electric batteries or other.

The vehicles which are due for replacement in 1999–2000 will be considered for replacement only if replacement provides the most cost effective means of travel for the Employment Tribunals Service. At the present time the vehicles are not expected to be replaced.

Letter from Dr. Seton Bennett to Mr. Paul Burstow, dated July 1998:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply on behalf of the National Weights and Measures Laboratory to your questions about: i) vehicles owned or leased by the Agency and, ii) what type of vehicle will be any replacement.

The information you requested on vehicles owned or leased is set out in the following table:

Engine cc	Fuel type	Owned	Leased	Replacement 1998/99	1999/2000	2000/01
1994	Diesel	—	1	—	—	1
2500	Diesel	1	—	—	—	—

As regards the type of replacement vehicle: it is envisaged at this stage that the vehicle due for replacement in 2000/01 will be of similar type. At the time of replacement, reliable alternative technology would be considered.

Letter from John Holden to Mr. Paul Burstow, dated 19 October 1998:

In response to your Parliamentary Questions concerning vehicles owned or leased within the Department of Trade and Industry, I can confirm that in the Companies House Agency:

1 We own a solitary 2 litre diesel Ford Transit panel van in Companies House colours and bearing the CH logo.

2 There are no plans to replace this vehicle in the period 1998–2001.

Letter from Peter Joyce to Mr. Paul Burstow, dated 19 October 1998:

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has asked me to reply to your question about vehicles due for replacement by The Insolvency Service.

The Service has no vehicles and no plans to acquire any so that the issue of replacement does not arise.

Letter from David Hendon to Mr. Paul Burstow, dated 19 October 1998:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me in my capacity at Chief Executive of the Radiocommunications Agency to reply to your two Parliamentary Questions 97/4281 and 97/4630 about the number of vehicles owned and leased by this Agency, and the Agency's vehicle replacement programme.

The Agency is responsible for the management and enforcement of the radio spectrum. Vehicles carry large amounts of specialist equipment; most are saloon cars but there are also mobile laboratories and off road vehicles.

The information you requested is set out in the following table:

Engine cc	Fuel type	Owned	Leased	Replacement due 1998/99	1999/2000	2000/01

		119	0	25	24	17

Notes:
1. All 66 vehicles being replaced between 1998/99 and 2000/01 will be with diesel models
2. Not all the Agency's vehicles will be replaced during the three years in question

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many of the vehicles due for replacement by (a) his Department and (b) bodies listed in the National Asset Register in (i) 1998–99, (ii) 1999–2000 and (iii) 2000–01 will be replaced by vehicles using (1) petrol, (2) diesel, (3) natural gas, (4) electric batteries and (5) other. [52614]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 28 July 1998]: Disaggregated information in the form requested is not available for the core Department and the other bodies listed in the National Asset Register and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

I have asked Agency Chief Executives to reply to the hon. Member as they have their own management responsibility for assets.

Mr. Mandelson: Information in the form requested, which is not held centrally within the Department, could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

I have asked Agency Chief Executives to reply to the hon. Member as they have their own financial responsibility for vehicles.

Letter from P. R. S. Hartnack to Mr. Paul Burstow, dated 19 October 1998:

I am replying for the Patent Office to your question to the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on expected spend on vehicle replacements.

During 1998–99 the Patent Office expects to spend £3840 on the lease of the diesel-engine van which it uses. It is possible that the Office will incur similar costs in following years but, as yet, it has taken no decision on whether to replace the van in 1999.

Letter from John Holden to Mr. Paul Burstow, dated 19 October 1998:

In response to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry concerning how much his Department expects to spend on vehicle replacements, I can confirm that in the Companies House Agency there are no plans to replace vehicles in the period 1998–2001.

Letter from Ian Jones to Mr. Paul Burstow, dated 19 October 1998:

I have been asked to reply in respect of the Employment Tribunals Service to your question of 31 July 1998 to the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry requesting how much the Agency expects to spend in each year from 1998–99 to 2000–01 on vehicle replacements.

We will review whether there is a continued need for the use of the three vehicles leased by the ETS before they are due for replacement in 1999–2000. No decision has yet been taken on this matter.

Letter from Peter Joyce to Mr. Paul Burstow, dated 19 October 1998:

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has asked me to reply to your question about expected spend on vehicle replacements by The Insolvency Service.

The Service has no vehicles and no plans to acquire any, so that the issue of replacement does not arise.

Letter from B. A. Maxwell to Mr. Paul Burstow, dated 12 October 1998:

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has asked me in my capacity as Director of the Radiocommunications Agency, an Executive Agency 3, to reply to your Parliamentary Question 97/4916 about expenditure on Agency vehicle replacements in each year from 1998/99 to 2000/01.

The information you requested is as follows:

Year	£
1998–1999	402,000
1999–2000	455,000
2000–2001	342,000

Most of the above vehicles will be saloon cars but there will also be two mobile laboratories and five off road vehicles.

In order to set this answer in context, I thought you might welcome a copy of the answer to your previous questions and it is attached.

Letter from David Hendon to Mr. Paul Burstow:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me in my capacity at Chief Executive of the Radiocommunications Agency to reply to your two Parliamentary Questions 97/4281 and 97/4630 about the number of vehicles owned and leased by this Agency, and the Agency's vehicle replacement programme.

The Agency is responsible for the management and enforcement of the radio spectrum. Vehicles carry large amounts of specialist equipment; most are saloon cars but there are also mobile laboratories and off road vehicles.

The information you requested is set out in the following table:

Engine cc	Fuel type	Owned	Leased	Replacement due 1998/99	1999/2000	2000/01

3500	Petrol	2	—	—	—	1
		119	0	25	24	17

Notes:
1. All 66 vehicles being replaced between 1998–99 and 2000–01 will be with diesel models
2. Not all the Agency's vehicles will be replaced during the three years in question

Letter from Dr. Seton Bennett to Mr. Paul Burstow, dated 19 October 1998:

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has asked me to reply on behalf of the National Weights and Measures Laboratory to your question about our expected spend on vehicle replacements.

I expect NWML to be replacing its car under the present leasing agreement in March 2001. Under the present leasing agreement the payments are set at £2,588.00 plus VAT per annum and every effort will be made to obtain the best possible rate of renewal.

Investors in People

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the current status of (a) Companies House, (b) the Employment Tribunals Service, (c) the Insolvency Service, (d) the National Weights and Measures Laboratory, (e) the Patent Office and (f) the Radiocommunications Agency in respect of Investors in People. [49968]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 17 July 1998]: Responsibility for Investors in People in the Department's Agencies lies with the chief executives. I have asked the chief executives to write to the hon. Member in respect of Investors in people in their respective agencies. This will also update the answer given by the then Minister for Competition and Consumer Affairs, my hon. Friend the Minister for Edinburgh, South (Mr. Griffiths), on 15 June 1998, Official Report, columns 97–98.

Letter from Ian Jones to Mr. David Chidgey, dated 19 October 1998:

I have been asked by the President of the Board of Trade to reply, in respect of the Employment Tribunals Service (ETS), to your question on the current status in respect of Investors in People.

The Employment Tribunal Service is committed to training and developing all staff and has made a written commitment to meeting the Investors in People standard and will be seeking formal assessment in October 1998.

Letter from David Hendon to Mr. David Chidgey, dated 17 July 1998:

To ask the President of the Board of Trade, if she will make a statement on the current status of (a) Companies House, (b) the Employment Tribunals Service, (c) the Insolvency Service, (d) the National Weights and Measures Laboratory, (e) the Patent Office and (f) the Radiocommunications Agency in respect of Investors in People. 49968

1. I have been asked by the President of the Board of Trade to respond to the above Parliamentary Question.
2. The Agency made a formal commitment to achieve IiP in August 1996. It has just had its trial assessment and is on course for its target of full assessment in January 1999.

Letter from John Holden to Mr. David Chidgey, dated July 1998:

I have been asked to reply to your question to the President of the Board of Trade regarding the current status of Investors in People.

Companies House committed itself to progress towards IiP accreditation some 18 months ago. An initial diagnostic survey was undertaken at the start of our programme and steps taken to address issues which this raised.

Companies House has subsequently had several reviews to measure our progress towards the IiP National Standard and will have a full pre-assessment in the Autumn of this year. If this shows that the Agency is close to meeting necessary standards, the intention would be to undertake a full assessment later in the year.

Letter from Peter Joyce to Mr. David Chidgey, dated July 1998:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me as Inspector General and Chief Executive to reply to your question about the current status of The Insolvency Service in respect of Investors in People (IiP).

The Insolvency Service formally committed to work towards accreditation in June 1996 and is looking to assessment and recognition by December 1998, within the timescales set out by the Government's Development & Training White Paper.

Letter from Dr. Seton Bennett to Mr. David Chidgey, dated July 1998:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply on behalf of the National Weights and Measures Laboratory to your question about the status of IIP at NWML.

NWML was assessed in March 1998, but recognition was deferred. The proposal is to apply for re-assessment towards the end of the year.

Letter from P. R. S. Hartnack to Mr. David Chidgey, dated July 1998:

I am replying for the Patent Office to your question to the President of the Board of Trade about the current status of Department of Trade and Industry agencies in relation to Investors in People. The position is that the Patent Office is currently being assessed for Investors in People status and I hope that we will shortly be accredited as an Investor in People.

Internet

Mr. Cotter: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what role her Department is playing in the development of Internet technologies for small and medium-sized businesses. [52907]

Mrs. Roche: Many recent studies have emphasised the crucial importance of new technologies to the competitiveness of smaller firms. Within DTI, we have a comprehensive package of programmes to encourage greater awareness and use of information and communication technologies (ICTs), including the Internet, by both business and individuals in the UK. The ISI Programme for Business places particular emphasis on offering access and awareness opportunities for SMEs at locations throughout the UK, and on fostering the development of innovative multimedia products and services, frequently involving Internet technologies, through award schemes such as the Multimedia Demonstrator Programme and Information Society Creativity Awards.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the impact of charges for local telephone calls on the development and use of internet services. [54643]

Mrs. Roche: Competition is already delivering lower call charges in the UK and, with liberalisation across the European Union, this is spreading across Europe too. The charging of services should not necessarily be regarded as a disincentive to access the Internet. It is not unusual in countries where there is no usage charge for people to be unable to access the Internet because some users remain permanently connected. Internet Service Providers have only a finite number of modems to which customers may connect, so customers who remain permanently connected can block access by others. Having a modest charge for the local telephone call required to connect to the Internet should therefore inconvenience only those who remain connected for long periods even when not actively using the Internet. In turn, this should help ensure that the majority are not prevented from accessing the Internet for extended periods of time.

Cycling

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what parking facilities for cycles exist at each office or site for which his Department is responsible and for each agency for which he is responsible. [52666]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 28 July 1998]: Full parking facilities for cycles are available for the Department and each Agency as shown in the table.

Location	Parking facilities
Departmental HQ buildings	All offices
Departmental buildings outside London	All offices
Employment Service Agency	11 out of 29 offices
Insolvency Service	14 out of 33 offices
NMWL	Yes (one office)
The Patent Office	All offices
Radio Communications Agency	6 out of 22 offices (but all could provide storage if required)
Companies House	All offices

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proportion of the employees of his Department and of the employees of each agency for which he is responsible cycle to work; and what measures he plans to increase that proportion. [52667]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 28 July 1998]: The proportion of staff cycling to work is set out in the table. Measures to increase that proportion are being developed in the context of the preparation of the Department's green Transport policy.

Location	Percentage
Departmental HQ buildings	4
Departmental buildings outside London	4
Employment Service Agency	3
The Insolvency Service	3
NWML	19
The Patent Office	1
Radiocommunications Agency	2
Companies House	2

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 27 July 1998, Official Report, column 55, if he will make a statement on the security reasons prohibiting the leaving of bicycles around his Department's offices. [53903]

Mr. Mandelson: The proximity of my Department's offices to the Palace of Westminster and to other sensitive locations requires us to take a number of precautions such as this.

Diesel

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what incentives he is providing for United Kingdom companies to produce ultra-low sulphur diesel. [53561]

Mr. Battle: At the last Budget, the Government increased the duty differential between ULSD and conventional diesel from one to two pence per litre.

Post Office

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) when he expects to implement the EU Postal Liberalisation Directive; [53983]

(2) what plans he has to lower the £1 threshold for the postal monopoly. [53975]

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the effect of the EU postal liberalisation directive on the position of the UK Post Office. [54469]

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to lower the Post Office's current £1 monopoly threshold. [54244]

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what plans he has to reduce the Post Office's current monopoly threshold; [54210]

(2) if he will make a statement on the EU's postal liberalisation directive. [54452]

Mr. Mandelson (holding answer 31 July 1998): EU Directive 97/67/EC, the "Postal Services Directive", set out a common framework for postal services in the countries of the European Union.

The Directive will not require major changes in the UK but the Government will need to modify the Post Office monopoly and introduce some other amendments. Officials in my Department are discussing with the Post Office the precise arrangements which will be necessary. The final proposals will be announced later this year.

The Government must transpose the directive into UK law by February 1999. We expect to do this through secondary legislation using the European Communities Act 1972.

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will announce his policy for the future of the Post Office. [54852]

Mr. Ian McCartney: Work on the Government's review of the Post Office is proceeding apace, and we will announce our plans as soon as we are ready to do so.

Competitiveness

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the Governments' policy on business competitiveness. [54070]

Mr. Mandelson: The issue of business competitiveness is being considered within the context of the Competitiveness White Paper which I intend to publish later this year.

Mr. C' ope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the current membership of the competitiveness working party for encouraging innovation; when it last met; what matters were discussed; and when it will next meet. [54505]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 31 July 1998]: The Competitiveness Working Party for Encouraging Innovation is chaired by my hon. Friend the Minister for Energy and Industry and has the following members.

Bevan Braithwaite OBE, Chairman, TWI

Dr. Peter Doyle CBE, FRSE, Director, Zeneca Group plc.

John Golding, Chairman, Hewlett-Packard Ltd

No date has been arranged for any further meetings of the Working Party.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent representations she has received on the impact of legislation on competition in the media. [54857]

Dr. Howells: During the passage of the Competition Bill, the Department has received a number of representations concerning the Bill and pricing practices in the newspaper industry. These representations have been from members of the public, newspaper companies and members of both Houses. The Department has also received a small number of representations regarding the newspaper merger provisions of the Fair Trading Act 1973 and also general representations on individual merger cases involving the media.

Employees Over 60

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many (a) men and (b) women employed by (1) his Department and (2) his Department's agencies have contracts of employment which permit them to retire after their 60th birthday. [53056]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 30 July 1998]: The normal retirement age of staff in the Senior Civil Service is 60, as it is for staff in Pay Band C (senior managers) and Pay Band B (junior and middle managers). Staff in Pay Band A (administrative and support staff) have a normal retirement age of 65. The headquarters of the Department currently has 445 men and 694 women in this Pay Band.

I have asked Chief Executives of the Department's Agencies to reply to the hon. Member separately.

Consistent with the Departmental policy, the right to retire in NWML after 60 is linked to grade/range. The Government are working closely with the music industry on this issue and on action against CD piracy more generally. The Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport is responsible for wider issues concerning the music industry, whilst my Department is responsible for copyright legislation.

Responsibility for one executive body, the Policyholders' Protection Board, has been transferred to HM Treasury.

Companies (Trademark Names)

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the procedure to be followed by a foreign company applying to register a trademark name currently used by a British company. [54709]

Dr. Howells: The procedure for registering a trade mark in the UK is defined by the Trade Marks Act 1994. Anyone can apply for registration, but any applicant must be using or intend to use the mark in the United Kingdom. However, a mark is registered only when the Trade Marks Registry has established that there is not a conflict with earlier marks. Where conflicts with earlier marks are identified it may be possible for the application to proceed to registrations by use of the provisions in Article 37 of the Trade Marks Act 1994. These provisions include restricting the goods and/or services for the mark applied for, or demonstrating honest concurrent use of the mark applied for with the earlier mark.

Further information on the trade mark application process is available from the Trade Mark Registry[1] at the Patent Office.

Insider Trading

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what powers he has to order (a) BT and (b) other phone companies to disclose records of telephone calls made by an individual under investigation by his inspectors for alleged insider trading. [54440]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 31 July 1998]: Under section 177(3) of the Financial Services Act 1986 inspectors appointed to investigate insider dealing can require information, including documents, from any person they consider may be able to assist their investigation. This will include information from telephone companies.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if inspectors' reports of alleged insider dealing carried out under the Financial Services Act 1986 are passed to the Public Record Office; and when they can be released for public scrutiny. [54439]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 31 July 1998]: Reports of insider dealing inspections are not passed to the Public Record Office and are not published. There are strict legal restrictions on disclosure of all information obtained in such inspections.

EU Directives (Costs)

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment his Department has made of the cost to United Kingdom businesses which will arise from (a) the Parental Leave Directive, (b) the Works Councils Directive and (c) the Part Time Work Directive. [54246]

Mr. Ian McCartney [holding answer 31 July 1998]: Compliance Cost Assessments were attached to the Explanatory Memoranda submitted to this House and another place on 28 October 1997 (in relation to the Parental Leave and European Works Councils Directives) and 17 March 1998 (in relation to the Part Time Work Directive).

We shall be carrying out further analysis to refine these estimates. The Government consider that these measures will benefit employers and employees alike, and will not impose under costs or burdens upon business.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the costs of the (a) Parental Leave Directive, (b) Works Council Directive and (c) Part Time Work Directive to British business. [53974]

Mr. Mandelson (holding answer 31 July 1998): I refer the right hon. Gentleman to the reply given today to Question 54246 from his hon. Friend the Member for Altrincham and Sale, West (Mr. Brady).

Manufacturing Industry

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to assist manufacturing industry. [54658]

Mr. Mandelson: The best way that Government can assist industry as a whole, including manufacturing, is by providing macroeconomic stability. This Government have put in place a credible framework for macroeconomic policy to deliver low inflation and sound public finances which are the necessary basis for high and sustainable levels of growth and employment. In addition, my Department is working in partnership with industry, including manufacturing companies, to improve the competitiveness of our firms in domestic and overseas markets.

Aerospace Industry (Gloucestershire)

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many people within Gloucestershire were employed by the United Kingdom aerospace industry in each of the last five years. [54641]

Mr. Battle: This information is not available. Although the Office for National Statistics collects data on employment in aerospace businesses in Gloucestershire as part of the Annual Employment Survey and Annual Census of Production, the figures cannot be released because they would identify particulars of an individual undertaking, which are confidential under section 9 of the Statistics of Trade Act 1947.

Manpower

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many meetings Ministers in his Department have had with Manpower since 1 February; and on what matters. [54395]

Mr. Ian McCartney [holding answer 31 July 1998]: Ministers, their Special Advisers and other civil servants meet many people in the course of their work. This properly includes meetings with interest groups outside Government. This liaison is intended to help Ministers draw upon outside contributions—from academics, think-tanks, trade and industry associations, private sector organisations, trade unions and others, as well as relevant experience from other countries—during the process of policy analysis and development. But they must observe the requirements of propriety: for instance, they must not provide confidential information without authorisation, or allow improper influence on policy. It is not our policy to make information on meetings or their content public.

New Millennium Experience Company

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action he will take in respect of his possible involvement in a regulatory role in respect of corporate sponsors of the New Millennium Experience Company Limited. [54397]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 31 July 1998]: As the hon. Member will be aware I wrote to him on 6 August enclosing a copy of the Press Notice regarding the BA/AA Alliance and my responsibilities for the New Millennium Experience Company. I have placed a copy in the Library of the House.

Action 2000

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate Action 2000 has made of the number of businesses in (a) each region and (b) in total, which have yet to take action against the millennium bug. [54125]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 31 July 1998]: Action 2000 do not undertake monitoring on a regional basis. The research is aimed at providing a picture of the current state of UK preparedness by relevant sectors, size of business and other factors.

The results of the second wave of monitoring carried out on a national basis under Action 2000's quarterly 'State of the Nation' research programme, primarily targeted at businesses with 1–500 employees, were announced by Action 2000 on 21 July.

The findings showed that 29% of the total had yet to implement a formal Year 2000 programme.

Awareness of the Millennium Bug is 100% but the Action 2000 research shows that there is a 'reality gap' between being aware and comprehension of the potential impact.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what budget Action 2000 has allocated for poster board advertising in (a) 1998–99 and (b) 1999–2000. [54124]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 31 July 1998]: Poster advertising to date has incurred a total spend of £670,000 net media cost.

The business packages for poster advertising purchased with the contracting companies have been targeted at industrial parts/sites and important commuting routes in order to maximise coverage against a key target audience identified by Action 2000.

At present no further activity utilising poster sites is planned for this or the next financial year until a full evaluation of the impact and response has been carried out.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what budget Action 2000 has allocated for poster board advertising (a) in each region and (b) in total. [54126]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 31 July 1998]: The poster packages purchased by Action 2000 were targeted at business areas and key commuting routes. The total allocation of spend to date on this activity is £670,000 net media cost.

Regional breakdown of that spend is:

	Percentage
London	47
Midlands	10.5
North West	10.5
Yorkshire	7.5
Scotland	7.5
Wales and The West	4.5
Southern	4.5
East of England	3
North East	3
Northern Ireland	1
South West	0.9
Border	0.1

Export Forum

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with (1) the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and (2) the Department for International Development about the impact of the Export Forum's recommended target markets on their policies with regard to (i) development and (ii) democratisation in (a) Eastern Europe, (b) Africa and (c) South America. [53463]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 31 July 1998]: Although the Department works closely with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the Department for International Development it has had no discussions with either on these issues. The Export Forum's recommendations for target markets related solely to their potential for the promotion of exports and had no bearing on the Government's policies on development and democratisation.

Nuclear Reactors

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has (a) to close the nuclear reactors at Chapelcross and Calder Hall and (b) to replace them with new reactors. [53756]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 31 July 1998]: The future operation of the Chapelcross and Calder Hall nuclear power stations is a matter for their owner, British Nuclear Fuels plc, subject to meeting the relevant regulatory requirements. I understand from BNFL that they intend to operate these stations for the 50 year lifetimes approved by the regulator, subject to it being safe and economic to do so, and that BNFL currently have no plans to build any new nuclear power stations.

Wind Turbines

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to support the development of the British manufacture of wind turbines. [54848]

Mr. Battle: Under the Non-Fossil Fuel Obligation (NFFO) the Government are supporting the commercial development of wind energy in the UK. At 30 June 1998, there were 55 wind projects operational, comprising 132 MW Declared Net Capacity. In addition a further 69 wind projects, comprising 368 MW of contracted capacity will be developed in England and Wales under the NFFO-5 Order which I announced recently.

As part of my current New and Renewable Energy Policy Review, I am considering both the status of the UK wind industry including its prospects in both the home and export markets and its potential contribution to meeting industrial and employment goals, and the need for further research and development. I expect to make an announcement later this year.

Departmental Publications

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many of his Department's publications have been made available in (a) Braille, (b) audio tape and (c) large print in 1997–98; and what percentage of the total number of publications this represents. [54272]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 31 July 1998]: Comprehensive information on the number of documents published in alternative formats is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

However, the Department of Trade and Industry has produced a publication entitled "Read Me" to provide guidance to staff about making publications available to the general public in alternative formats.

The Department also has a range of information about its policies, programmes and publications on the Internet (www.dti.gov.uk). It is possible to print all DTI pages from the Internet in large print. The pages are also available in audio to those who have access to a Talking Computer.

Electricity Industry

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many section 36 planning applications for clean coal technology power stations in England are under consideration. [53669]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 31 July 1998]: None has been submitted by any power generators.

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the impact on (a) gas-fired electricity generators and (b) the offshore gas supply industry if the present policy on new consents for gas-fired power stations continue beyond the electricity regulator's target date of April 2000 for the completion of market reforms; and if he will make a statement. [55238]

Mr. Battle: On 8 October, the Government published their White Paper Conclusions of The Review of Energy Sources for Power Generation (Cm 4071), which sets out the Government's broad energy policy, including radical reforms to the electricity market and, in the interim, a new stricter policy on consents for power stations. These reforms will bring greater competition to electricity generation and lower prices for consumers. Paragraphs 8.8–8.11 and 10.30 of the White Paper refer respectively to the possible impact on the offshore industry of the policy and to the fact that the interests of the promoters of particular new power generation projects will be one of the factors to be taken into account when applying the new consents policy.

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry by what date he estimates that emissions from clean coal technology in power stations will be reduced to the level of gas-fired power stations. [53319]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 31 July 1998]: Although commercial clean coal plant can be made to operate to a very high environmental standard, as shown by a number of advanced supercritical plants now in operation around the world, as well as a number of gasification plants at the demonstration scale, for reasons of basic chemistry and economics, it is not practicable to match all the emissions to the levels of natural gas-fired plant.

The table illustrates the differences in emissions between a commercially available combined cycle gas turbine plant with 55% thermal efficiency and those of a potential commercial clean coal plant with an assumed efficiency of 42%.

Emissions	Clean coal plant with 42% efficiency	Combined cycle gas plant with efficiency of 55%
CO_2	800g kWh^{-1}	360g kWh^{-1}
SO_2	600mg kWh^{-1}	0
NO_x	600mg kWh^{-1}	less than 300mg kWh^{-1}

Note:
Lower levels of emissions of SO_2 and NO_x are possible with more advanced coal plant now at the demonstration stage and which are expected to become commercially available over the next few years.

PowerGen plc.

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimates he has evaluated of the cost of fitting FGD technology to all existing United Kingdom coal-fired power stations currently without FGD. [53310]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 31 July 1998]: The cost of fitting Flue Gas Desulphurisation equipment (FGD) to coal fired power stations is very site specific, but approximates to around 10% the cost of new plant. There is also a number of different technologies that could be used depending on the level of sulphur removal required. If a limestone-gypsum process was used the estimated costs would probably lie within a range of £80-£100 per kw. Assuming an average cost of £90 per kw, it would cost some £1.8 billion to fit FGD to the remaining 20GW of UK coal fired capacity. These costs exclude the additional running costs associated with coal fired plant subsequently fitted with FGD.

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what reports he has received about the progress of the complaint to the European Commission against discrimination in favour of coal-fired generation in Spain and Germany. [53668]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 31 July 1998]: The UK Government formally complained to the European Commission in September 1997 that state aid paid to the Spanish coal industry is distorting, or is likely to distort, competition between producers in the single market. We argued that a subsidy of 1 peseta per kilowatt-hour for Spanish electricity plants using Spanish coal should also be available for the use of UK coal if discrimination between ECSC coal producers was to be avoided. We understand the European Commission broadly share this view, and we are pressing the Spanish Government for confirmation that the subsidy will be available on a non-discriminatory basis in respect of all ECSC coals.

In the case of Germany, we drew the Commission's attention in September 1997 to the possibility of distortion against UK anthracite in the German power station market. Formal complaints against German state aid for power station anthracite were subsequently submitted by Consolidated Coal and Evans and Reid (the agents for Tower Colliery) and by RJB Mining in respect of state aids for German coal production more generally. In June 1998 the Commission approved state aid of DM 10.4 billion for German coal production. I understand that RJB Mining is lodging an appeal to the European Court against this Decision.

Boardroom Pay

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if his proposals for the public utilities to link boardroom pay to consumer performance standards will include linkage with the protection of vulnerable consumers; and if he will make a statement. [54057]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 31 July 1998]: The Government's proposals for encouraging a direct link between boardroom pay and consumer standards (set out in their response to the consultation on the Green Paper, A Fair Deal for Consumers: Modernising the Framework for Utility Regulation) will require price-regulated utility companies to disclose the nature of any links between the pay of the directors of the regulated business, and the service standards attained by that business, and if there is no such link, that fact. The proposals do not involve Government determining the nature of these links, which will be for individual regulated companies to decide.

Minimum consumer performance standards are set for utility companies by the regulators following public consultation. These standards are concerned mainly with standards of service to all consumers, although a small number relate to the disadvantaged. Obligations to provide special services to the disadvantaged are generally imposed by the regulator through licence conditions, enhanced in some areas with voluntary industry initiatives. Licence conditions can be enforced in the event of a breach.

European Health and Safety Reports

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what response his Department has made to the reports of (a) the European Foundation for the Improvement of Living and Working Conditions (Dublin) 1997 and (b) the Bilbao European Agency for Health and Safety at Work 1997; and if he will deposit in the Library a list of all programmes initiated as a result of (a) and (b). [55345]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The various reports of the Dublin Foundation do not require a formal Government response, but are used by the Department to inform its policies. Details of the Foundation's activities are provided on its internet website at http://www.eurofound.ie. Matters concerning the European Agency for Safety and Health at Work are largely a matter for the Health and Safety Executive, which is sponsored by the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to receive the conclusions of his review of renewable energy. [54030]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 31 July 1998]: I am currently considering options for the future development of renewables alongside other ongoing reviews. I expect to make an announcement later this year. In the meantime I announced the fifth Non-Fossil Fuel Obligation (NFFO-5) Renewables Order in England and Wales on 24 September 1998. 261 projects comprising 1,177 MW of capacity have been contracted under NFFO-5.

At 30 June 1998, 235 projects, comprising 570 MW (declared net capacity) of renewables generating capacity had been commissioned under the four Non-Fossil Fuel Obligation (NFFO) Orders for England and Wales, two Scottish Renewables Obligation (SRO) Orders and two Northern Ireland NFFO (NI-NFFO) Orders.

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much was spent on research into renewable energy technologies in each of the last five years. [55282]

Mr. Battle: Spend under the DTI New and Renewable Energy Programme, including research, development, dissemination and demonstration in each of the last five years (covering expenditure agreed before 1 May 1997) is shown in the table.

£ million

Year
1993–94	25.2
1994–95	19.1
1995–96	18.1
1996–97	[1]14.8
1997–98	[1]10.9

[1] These figures allow for the payment and recovery of VAT

Since coming into office, I have reversed the planned cuts in the overall programme budget set by the previous Government, increasing provision for 1998–99 by £2 million to £11.1 million (net). Beyond 1998–99 expenditure will depend on the outcome of the current policy review.

EPSRC commitment, through the General Engineering and Engineering for Infrastructure, the Environment and Healthcare Programmes, by financial year, for research into renewable and clean electricity generation is shown in the table.

£ million

Year
1993–94	1.576
1994–95	0.506
1995–96	1.935
1996–97	2.338
1997–98	3.114

The figures for both the DTI New and Renewable Energy Programme and EPSRC include research into fuel cells—considered to be a clean generation technology.

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to commission research into renewable energy technologies using the extra funding announced for the research councils in the Comprehensive Spending Review. [55283]

Mr. Battle: The current New and Renewable Energy Policy Review, which is considering the need for further research into renewable energy technologies, is taking account of the outcome of the Comprehensive Spending Review.

The Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council (EPSRC) is currently developing a new managed programme in "Renewables and New Energy Technologies". The programme is taking account of the progress of the Government's current New and Renewable Energy Policy Review. It is likely to cover fuel cells, photovoltaics, energy storage and recovery, and research into other renewable energy sources. The programme is due to be launched in 1999.

EU Auto Oil Programme

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on progress in adoption of the EU Auto Oil Programme. [54671]

Mr. Battle: The Directives on passenger car emissions, light commercial vehicle emissions and fuel quality, all of which are part of the EU Auto Oil programme, were agreed and adopted on 17 September 1998 and will be published in the Official Journal in due course.

The Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions is responsible for implementing these directives in UK law.

National Minimum Wage

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what arrangements will be put in place to monitor (a) how long individuals remain on the national minimum wage and (b) the average annual wage increment for people previously receiving minimum rates; [54899]

(2) what arrangements will be put in place to monitor the numbers of employees receiving the minimum rate of pay set out in the national minimum wage. [54898]

Mr. Ian McCartney: In her statement of 18 June 1998, Official Report, columns 507–19, announcing the Government's response to the Low Pay Commission's recommendations, the then President of the Board of Trade announced that the Government will be asking the Low Pay Commission to monitor and evaluate the introduction and impact of the minimum wage.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the statements by the Bank of England about the inflationary implications of the minimum wage. [54455]

Mr. Ian McCartney [holding answer 31 July 1998]: The Bank of England is fully aware of the Government's labour market policies, including the National Minimum Wage. Any statements by the Bank on those policies are a matter for them. The Government do not believe that the decisions they have taken on the National Minimum Wage will have an adverse effect on inflation.

Green Transport

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 6 April 1998, Official Report, column 59, on departmental transport arrangements, what further changes he has made. [54018]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 31 July 1998]: My Department is working towards the target announced in the White Paper 'A New Deal for Transport', that all headquarters buildings and main buildings occupied by Executive Agencies and Government Offices for the Regions should have green transport plans by March 1999 and all other key buildings by March 2000.

Recent activities have included the drafting of a Green Transport Plan, the undertaking of a Travel to Work survey, arrangements for provision of a DETR speaker to all Property Centres on Green Transport Plans, registering with the Cyclists' Touring Club's "Post a Pot-Hole Campaign" and carrying out a traffic survey in the main car park in 1 Victoria Street building.

Henly and Dennis Groups (Merger)

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will refer to the Office of Fair Trading the proposed merger between the Henly Group and the Dennis Group. [55313]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry announced on 13 October 1998 that he had decided, in accordance with the advice given by the Director General of Fair Trading, not to refer the proposed acquisition of Dennis Group plc by Henlys Group plc to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission.

National Broadband Strategy

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to introduce a national broadband strategy. [55275]

Mrs. Roche: The Government set out their strategy in this area in the policy statements 'Our Information Age' and 'Broadband Britain' which were published in April. The latter dealt specifically with the issue of lifting the broadcast restrictions from BT and other Public Telecommunications Operators. On this issue and in our Information Age strategy, more generally, we are committed to encouraging investment in both advanced communications infrastructure and new services, and ensuring widespread access to services at affordable prices. To ensure that we keep pace with these issues we have also launched a Green Paper reviewing the regulatory framework for telecommunications and broadcasting in response to digital convergence. I also expect, later this year, to launch a consultation on the use of significant additional radio spectrum for the delivery of broadband services which will help address those areas of the country currently with limited competitive provision. Just as important as provision of broadband is uptake and use. We promote this through our Information Society Initiative Programme for Business which now has 60 regional and local Support Centres. I have also relaunched the IT for All programme with £2.75 million of additional money, and now 2,700 access sites across the country.

Vibration White Finger

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to have a handling arrangement in place to deal with claims for compensation against British Coal with regard to vibration white finger. [55487]

Mr. Battle: Following the Court of Appeal judgment handed down at the end of July, my officials, in conjunction with external advisers, have been considering how best to effect the court's findings in the comprehensive draft handling arrangements for the more than 25,000 claims involved. Our proposals on one of the most critical issues have been sent to the solicitors representing the mass of claimants and early discussions are expected to follow.

We are keen to reach agreement as rapidly as possible on handling arrangements which are fair to all concerned and sufficiently robust to be able to process such a large group of claims.

Multilateral Agreement on Investment

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress has been made in consultation and negotiation on the Multilateral Agreement on Investment; and if he will make a statement. [53902]

Mr. Wilson: At the recent OECD Ministerial meeting (27–28 April 1998), it was agreed that negotiations should continue, seeking a successful and timely conclusion; no deadline was set but I foresee work continuing until the next Ministerial in May 1999, including a period for assessment and further consultation.

My hon. Friend the Minister for Small Firms, Trade and Industry reported to the Commons Select Committee on European Legislation on the negotiations on the Multilateral Agreement on Investment (MAI) on 8 July and undertook to keep the Committee informed of further developments in negotiations.

Nuclear Material

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 29 July 1998, Official Report, columns 357–58, if he will indicate the exact (a) quantities, (b) origins and (c) types of nuclear materials withdrawn permanently from safeguards; and if he will list those occasions when nuclear materials were put directly to military uses. [55444]

Mr. Battle: As part of the outcome of the Strategic Defence Review (SDR) the Government initiated a process of declassification and historical accounting for defence fissile material production. Linked to this will be a study of data on past withdrawals from safeguards to determine what additional information on these withdrawals can be made public. In addition, as indicated in the announcement of the SDR, information on future withdrawals of nuclear material from safeguards will be published from time to time.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to the answer to my hon. Friend the hon. Member for Bury, North (Mr. Chaytor) of 16 July 1998, Official Report, column 282, what research his Department has carried out into the ways of safeguarding vitrified plutonium; and what assessment he has made of safeguards applied by (a) the International Atomic Energy Agency and (b) Euratom. [55451]

Mr. Battle: My Department has not undertaken detailed examination of the safeguards aspects of vitrification as an option for disposal of separated plutonium (UK experience has, to date, been in respect of using separated plutonium in the manufacture of MOX fuel and the measures necessary to safeguard the kind of facilities which are involved). We have, however, contributed to more general international studies, involving both the IAEA and Euratom, of safeguards issues associated with the disposal of irradiated fuel in geological repositories; i.e. issues not dissimilar to those raised by the vitrification option for disposal of separated plutonium. The output from these studies is being assessed by the international safeguards inspectorates.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what quantities of uranium the Energy Resources of Australia company proposes to import into the United Kingdom; how much has been imported to date; and what is the role of Euratom in respect of such imports. [55418]

Mr. Battle: The companies concerned regard information on the quantities imported as commercially confidential. I am satisfied that there is a reasonable expectation that disclosure of this information would harm their competitive position and that, in accordance with the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information, the information requested should be protected from disclosure.

The role of Euratom is set out in the Agreement between the European Atomic Energy Community and the Government of Australia concerning transfers of nuclear material from Australia to the European Atomic Energy Community which was signed in 1981 (Cmnd. 8799). Under the terms of the 1957 Euratom Treaty the uranium imported, like all civil nuclear material in the UK, is subject to Euratom Safeguards. In addition the imports are notified to the Euratom Supply Agency which monitors the supply of nuclear material to the Community.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority changed the name of its decommissioning and radioactive waste management programme from Drawmops to Safer; and when he expects to respond to the report by Arthur D. Little consultants on the programme, published on 19 August. [55419]

Mr. Battle: The UKAEA announced the change in name of its decommissioning and radioactive waste management programme from DRAWMOPS (Decommissioning and Radioactive Waste Management Operations) to SAFER (Safe Environmental Remediation) in December 1997 via its staff newspaper "Nucleus". The change of name is for UKAEA internal purposes; the DTI and other government Departments refer to this programme as the UKAEA Nuclear Decommissioning programme.

The response, in the form of an implementation plan, of the DTI and the UKAEA to the report by Arthur D. Little consultants on the programme was included with the full evaluation report, released on 19 August 1998. Publication arrangements were set out in the DTI press releases P/98/646 and copies of both the summary and full reports are available in the House library.

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether there is currently any Japanese highly enriched uranium spent fuel on site at BNFL's Sellafield plant which is due to be transferred to the United States of America; whether any further Japanese highly enriched uranium spent fuel is due to arrive at Sellafield on its way to the United States of America; and under what agreement this temporary storage of Japanese spent fuel at Sellafield takes place. [55491]

Mr. Battle: For many years it has been US policy that high enriched uranium fuel supplied by the US for research reactors in Japan and other countries should, when spent, be repatriated for safe management. BNFL have had contracts to ship the spent fuel from Japan (and elsewhere) to the US. This reactor fuel forms part of larger shipments of other material destined for Sellafield and for operational reasons has been taken there in preparation for transhipment to the US. There is at present no fuel of this sort at Sellafield nor are any shipments scheduled (though they may take place in future). This and all other activities at Sellafield are regulated under the Nuclear Site Licence granted by the Nuclear Installations Inspectorate.

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much highly enriched uranium spent fuel owned by foreign customers remains on site at Dounreay; how much is due to be transferred to the United States of America; and what is the condition of this spent fuel. [55490]

Mr. Battle: I have asked the Chairman of the UKAEA for this information and his reply will be placed in the Library of the House.

Working Time Directive

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will extend the date of implementation for the Working Time Directive to 1 January 1999 to allow employers more time to implement the framework for compliance. [55370]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Regulation implementing the Working Time Directive came into force on 1 October in line with the Government's timetable announced in February.

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to assist employers with the additional costs incurred as a direct result of the Working Time Directive. [55369]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Government are adopting a broad range of policies with the central aim of boosting the competitiveness of UK industry. Implementation of the Working Time Directive should help competitiveness through combating stress and absenteeism by ensuring that workers receive proper rest, and so reducing costs to industry. The CBI estimate that £25 billion was lost in 1996 due to absenteeism. The London School of Economics also suggest that current staff turnover levels cost employers up to £1,800 million per year. The Working Time Regulations should assist in reducing such figures.

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the definition of the term continuous employment under the Working Time Directive. [55340]

Mr. Ian McCartney: Any worker who has worked continuously with their employer for 13 weeks will be entitled to 3 weeks' annual leave. Continuous employment is considered to be a period of time in which a worker has a contractual relationship with the employer.

Silver (Lion Mark)

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has made to the EC Commission on the use of the lion mark for British silver; and what proposals he has in respect of the future use of the lion mark for British silver. [55548]

Dr. Howells: During negotiations on a Commission proposal for a directive on the approximation of the laws, regulations and administrative provisions of Member States relating to articles of precious metal, my Department has consistently sought to ensure that the lion mark can continue to be struck on Sterling silver. Because single market rules now require the United Kingdom to accept a wider range of standards of finenesses for silver, I am, however, proposing to amend the Hallmarking Act to require that the fineness of silver articles be shown millesimally (as is already the case for gold) to aid consumer understanding. However, where requested, the UK assay offices would continue to strike the lion on Sterling silver alongside the figures "925".

Regional Selective Assistance

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the maximum cost-per-job offered in grant under regional selective assistance was in 1997–98 in England. [55425]

Mrs. Roche: The maximum cost per job offered was £15,000.

Assisted Areas

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the criteria to be used in the review of assisted area status; how the review will be conducted; who will be consulted; and if he will make a statement. [55288]

Mrs. Roche: On 30 July I launched a 3 month period of public consultation on the criteria and the geographical units which should be used in drawing up the new Assisted Areas map. In making a decision on both the geographical units and the criteria to be used, we shall be looking particularly at ways in which we can best target areas where regional industrial assistance is both needed and is an effective policy response. The consultation period finishes on 30 October and we shall listen carefully to views expressed. No decisions have yet been taken on the criteria to be used.

4,800 copies of the public consultation document were produced. The document has been given a wide circulation to local authorities, business support organisations, Regional Development Agencies, rural development bodies, employers' and employees' organisations, academics, research bodies, members of the public and other interested parties. The document is also available on internet and, to date, 145 people have accessed the site.

The review will be conducted in accordance with the Commission guidelines.

Agenda 2000

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on Agenda 2000 reforms to EU structural funds. [54855]

Mrs. Roche: Discussions are continuing between Member States and the Commission on the reform of the Structural and Cohesion Funds.

The Cardiff Council at the end of the UK Presidency set a deadline of March 1999 for agreement on the Agenda 2000 package. The UK will make every effort to ensure that this deadline is met.

Under the UK Presidency, we reached agreement on a number of principles for making the administration of the Funds simpler and more effective.

In the discussions starting again this autumn, the UK will continue to seek an outcome that is fair and affordable to all future and existing Member States, but particularly the UK.

Lord Sainsbury of Turville

Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) when Lord Sainsbury of Turville (a) took up his duties as Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State at his Department, (b) relinquished his business responsibilities and (c) divested himself of his beneficial shareholdings; [55280]

(2) what arrangements he has made to ensure that there can be no conflict of interest between the ministerial duties of Lord Sainsbury of Turville and his business connections and shareholdings; and if he will make a statement. [55279]

Mr. Mandelson: Lord Sainsbury issued the following statement on 31 July that answered these questions:

"When I was appointed as a Minister in the DTI on 28 July, I was still Chairman of J. Sainsbury plc and the owner of a major shareholding in the company together with a variety of lesser financial interests.

In order to avoid any actual or potential conflict of interests with my Ministerial responsibilities I have arranged my private interests, in consultations with the Permanent Secretary.

I resigned as Chairman of Sainsbury's yesterday, and prior to that date saw no official papers. I now hold no other company directorships.

I have today created a blind trust into which I am placing all my shareholdings, including my shares in Sainsbury's. Overseas trusts, the income of which I am a beneficiary, are being treated similarly. I have today exercised my options over shares in Sainsbury's which have been sold.

The size of my shareholding in Sainsbury's means that I shall retain, and know that I retain, a beneficial interest in that company via the blind trust. I shall therefore stand aside from decisions or discussions having any specific effect on the company, including eg competition decisions concerning the company or questions of planning policy, and my officials have been instructed to keep issues giving rise to potential conflicts away from me. On generic issues such as competition policy or corporate governance, I shall have to use my judgment, as have Ministers in the past, to decide whether the issues at stake involve the possibility of particular advantage for Sainsbury's, and whether I therefore need to stand aside.

Ministers are not involved in decisions on individual science projects in accordance with the long established Haldane principle, such matters being for decision by the Research Councils; and Research Councils funding goes to universities and scientific institutes rather than firms. The wider science issues with which I shall be dealing are generic, and I am advised are unlikely to lead to potential conflicts of interest. In the event of such a potential conflict, decisions would be taken by the Secretary of State or another DTI Minister."

Animal Experiments

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 29 July 1998,

Official Report, column 355, if he will list the scientific and industrial organisations consulted by his Department about the impact on the United Kingdom science base and the competitiveness of the United Kingdom's science-based industries of the increasing burden of regulation on applications for research and development projects involving animals. [55380]

Mr. Battle: The Department of Trade and Industry has not consulted any organisation specifically about the changes to the regulations in the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 and its impact on the UK science base and industry.

The Home Office, who lead on this regulation, has received a number of representations on this subject. Both Ministers and Civil Servants have been in discussion with individual companies and representative associations on this matter and will continue to do so.

Indonesia

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to the answer of 23 July 1998, Official Report, column 610, on the export of Hawk aircraft to Indonesia, how many export licences were granted for each of the ancillary equipment controlled under each type of the entries; and when each type of those licences was granted. [55224]

Mrs. Roche: In my answer to my hon. Friend on 23 July 1998, Official Report, column 610, I stated that a number of licences were issued on 2 January 1996 and on 22 November 1996 covering the export to Indonesia of Hawk aircraft and ancillary equipment, and that the export of that ancillary equipment was controlled under entries ML4, ML5, ML10, ML15, ML16, ML18, ML22 and PL5017 of the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994, as amended.

Seven licences were issued on each date, covering Hawk aircraft, weapons systems and spares: four covered equipment controlled under entries ML10, ML15, ML16, ML18, ML22 or PL5017; two covered ancillary equipment controlled under entries ML4, ML5 or ML10; and one covered Hawk aircraft and ancillary equipment controlled under entry ML10.

Export Licences

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the application of the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1989 to the issuing of licences by United Kingdom companies for production overseas. [55217]

Mrs. Roche: A UK company does not require a licence under the Export of Goods (Control) Order to allow production of its products in another country. If, however, in order to enable the production to go ahead the company needed to supply controlled technology from the UK, it would need a licence. The export of most specialised components of controlled goods is also controlled.

Government Purchase Cards

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what use (a) his Department and (b) its agencies are currently making of the Government Purchase Card; what savings he estimates are being achieved as a result; what plans he has to expand use of the card by his Department and its agencies; and if he will make a statement. [55170]

Mr. Mandelson: My Department plans to introduce the Government Procurement Card through Company Barclaycard November 1998—initially in four pilot areas. Assuming a successful pilot, full roll out throughout the Department is planned from February 1999 onwards. Consultants undertook a study in the Department in the summer of 1998 that indicated that process savings of up to 53 per cent. could be made by adopting the card for minor purchases.

Of the Department's agencies, the Radiocommunications Agency will introduce the GPC if the planned pilot demonstrates the value of doing so. The other agencies are awaiting the results of the central Department's adoption of the Card to assess its potential use in their areas.

Trade (China)

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the implementation of the recommendations of the Davies report on China trade promotion. [55474]

Mr. Wilson: Implementation of the main recommendations of the report on China trade promotion is now well underway:

from 1 September the renamed China British Business Council (CBBC), under its new President Sir Charles Powell, began the task of identifying key sectors of business on which to focus the main thrust of our trade promotion effort;

the CBBC is in the process of identifying a new Chief Executive, with the aim of appointing a suitable applicant before the end of the year;

a major conference will take place on 8 December to assess the results of the recent visit by the Prime Minister to China, and how these can most effectively be followed up;

during his visit the Prime Minister announced the appointment of Michael Heseltine to head the British side of the new China Britain forum;

the Prime Minister secured the agreement in principle of the Chinese Government, to the opening of a new British Consulate in Chongqing which will further enhance our commercial and diplomatic efforts in inland China.

These steps, and others currently being considered by the Government and other interested parties, are aimed at helping more capable British companies, in particular SMEs, to benefit from the continuing opportunities in the Chinese market along the lines recommended in the Davies report.

Redundancies

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the number of notified redundancies in each of the last three years among (a) 18 to 24, (b) 25 to 35, (c) 36 to 54 and (d) over 54 year olds. [55153]

Mr. Ian McCartney: This information is not available as employers notifying of prospective redundancies under the statutory duty are not required to specify the ages of those employees who may be affected.

Motorcycle Parking

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many motorcycle parking spaces exist at each office or site for which his Department is responsible; and how many are secure spaces. [55267]

Mr. Mandelson: Dedicated spaces which can accommodate a flexible number of motorcycles are provided in two locations on the Departmental estate where car parks are small. In all other locations there is ample space within car parks to meet demand on the Departmental estate without dedicating spaces for the purpose of motorcycle parking. All of the Department's car parks are secure.

Arbitration

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the role of (a) trade associations and (b) the Office of Fair Trading in respect of the referral of disputes to arbitration. [55586]

Mr. Ian McCartney: A number of trade associations offer consumers who have unresolved complaints with their members the option of using arbitration to settle the matter.

The Director General of Fair Trading encourages trade associations and others operating voluntary regulatory systems to adopt independent dispute resolution mechanisms to deal with such complaints and advises consumers of the existence of such schemes. He has no formal role in the referral of specific individual disputes to such arbitration or Ombudsmen schemes.

Use by consumers of arbitration schemes is optional. The consumer may decide to litigate. There are advantages of both arbitration and litigation and it is for consumers to decide which option suits them best.

Business Links

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to disseminate best practice amongst Business Links. [47143]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 25 June 1998]: The Business Link Network Company Ltd., together with the Business Links and National Partners, has developed a Good Practice Campaign to build upon the activity already taking place. The campaign is expected to be launched in the summer.

The methods for dissemination of the resulting best practice include Best Practice Champions, workshops, case studies and the BLNC's Intranet site.

British Coal

Caroline Flint: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is her Department's policy on the use of the proceeds from the sale of British Coal land and assets. [52448]

Mr. Battle: The net proceeds generated from the sale of British Coal's land and subsidiary undertakings were retained to help meet the Corporation's liabilities. The disposal programme was effectively completed by March 1998.

Millennium Dome (Sponsors)

Mr. Spring: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what is the total level of sponsorship funding for the Dome's contents which has been contractually agreed; and if he will list the sponsors and the sums involved. [50736]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 16 July 1998]: The New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) have identified over £100m of sponsorship, from companies such as BT, BSkyB, Manpower, Tesco, Marks and Spencer, BA and BAA. Negotiations on the detailed contracts between these companies and the NMEC are at an advanced stage. The unique scale of this project, including the sponsorship target, inevitably means that both sponsors and the NMEC are breaking new ground and careful and detailed work is therefore required before contracts can be confirmed.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Cattle Cull

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the progress of the cattle cohort cull, indicating (a) his original estimate of the number of animals to be slaughtered, (b) the number slaughtered to date and (c) the number remaining to be slaughtered; and if all of (c) have been identified. [51927]

Mr. Rooker: With regard to the estimate of the total number of animals to be slaughtered under the cull, I refer the right hon. Member to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for High Peak (Mr. Levitt) on 19 March 1998, Official Report, columns 727–28, when a forecast of 80,000 to 85,000 animals was provided.

The selective cull is progressing very well, with well over 74,000 animals slaughtered in the UK. The cull of animals in Northern Ireland is already complete.

The number of animals which will ultimately be slaughtered under the cull depends on a variety of factors, including: the proportion of animals in the voluntary cohort year which are offered up for slaughter, and the number of animals sold out of their original herd which, when traced, are found to be already dead. Accordingly, while it is difficult to estimate the number of animals still to be slaughtered under the cull, it will be considerably less than the remaining 12,000 animals identified as being eligible for slaughter.

Cereal Seeds

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many tonnes of British cereal seed were used in the United Kingdom in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [52773]

Mr. Rooker: The Ministry does not collect statistics on the tonnage of cereal seed used in the United Kingdom but the majority used for sowing is produced in this country.

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of imports to the United Kingdom of cereal seed comes from the USA; and if he will make a statement. [52771]

Mr. Rooker: In 1997, only 0.027 per cent. of cereal seed imported into the United Kingdom came from the USA. This figure, which is calculated on the basis of volume, includes imports of common wheat, meslin, barley, maize and sorghum seeds. The import of cereal seed into the United Kingdom from the USA is an extremely small proportion of total imports of cereal seed and has not fluctuated significantly in recent years.

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his policy regarding the use of British cereal seed in the United Kingdom. [52772]

Mr. Rooker: The use of British or imported cereal seed is a matter for individual growers. I welcome the fact that the majority of cereal seed for sowing used in the United Kingdom is produced in this country.

Growth Promoters

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of carcases in abattoirs are checked to ensure that antibiotics, coccidiostats, medical substances and growth promoters are not present in quantities above the maximum permitted levels. [54664]

Mr. Rooker: The Veterinary Medicines Directorate (VMD) is responsible for the surveillance of veterinary residues under Council Directive 96/23/EC. This requires Member States to carry out large scale sampling, on-farm and at slaughterhouses, to look for a wide range of veterinary medicinal products including antibiotics, coccidiostats, medicinal substances and growth promoters. Member states are required to take samples amounting to fixed percentages of animals (0.275% of cattle, 0.05% of pigs, 0.05% sheep, and for poultry 1 sample per 200 tonnes of dead-weight production, of which 90% are taken from abattoirs). The actual number of samples to be taken in a given year is determined by the number of animals slaughtered in the previous year, or which the Competent Authority forecasts will be slaughtered during the year, so that, within prescribed confidence limits, Member States can be satisfied that the results obtained are representative of what is happening nationally.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will ensure that meat from animals reared on growth promoters is labelled as such. [54666]

Mr. Rooker: The use of hormone growth promoters in food producing animals has been banned in the European Community since 1988. Any third country which permits the use of growth promoting hormones is required to guarantee that no animals to which they have been administered and no meat from such animals will be exported to the Community. Imports must be certified accordingly and Commission inspectors verify compliance with all the requirements.

Antibiotic growth promoters used in animal feed act in the gut of animals and are not absorbed. Residues would not therefore be expected in meat. Antibiotics used in veterinary medicine are all subject to a period of withdrawal before treated animals may be slaughtered for human consumption, or their products are marketed, to ensure no residues are present.

Given the above information, I do not believe it necessary to consider labelling.

Pigs (Artificial Insemination)

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what amendments to Schedule 6 of the Domestic Pig AI Regulations he is proposing to control the use of on-farm AI to reduce the risk of disease spreading through the movement of unlicensed semen. [54827]

Mr. Rooker: Schedule 6 of the draft Pig Artificial Insemination Regulations sets out revised controls on the unlicensed supply of porcine semen. The proposed controls would be more stringent than those currently in place. The Schedule received mixed reactions from the Industry at consultation and will be considered further when work on the draft Regulations is resumed.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food for what reasons the review of the Domestic Pig AI Regulations has not been completed. [54826]

Mr. Rooker: The review of the Artificial Insemination of Pigs Regulations was suspended on 14 April in order to allow the temporary re-deployment of staff to work on the lifting of the EC beef export ban. The work has not yet been resumed.

Alternative Crops

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what programmes of support his Ministry is currently making available for the development of alternative crops. [54828]

Mr. Rooker: This year, we have increased grants for the establishment of short rotation coppice near the UK's first biomass-fuelled power station. The Ministry has promoted alternative crops at agricultural shows, seminars, workshops and through a dedicated Website. Expenditure on strategic research and development totals £1.1 million annually.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food for what reasons he has not requested that alternative crops are afforded the same treatment under the IACS payment scheme as existing comparable crops under Agenda 2000. [54830]

Mr. Rooker: The European Commission has undertaken to produce a report on non-food and energy crops within the context of Agenda 2000. The Government are considering their approach towards this.

Departmental Vehicles

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much his Department expects to spend in each year from 1998–99 to 2000–01 on vehicle replacements. [54988]

Mr. Morley: The Ministry expects to spend just under £1.5 million in 1998–99 on vehicle replacements. Following the outcome of the Comprehensive Spending Review, plans for future years have yet to be finalised.

Organophosphates

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the use of humans in trials involving organophosphates. [55029]

Mr. Rooker: The Government do not require data from trials carried out on human volunteers to be submitted by applicants for pesticides approvals or veterinary medicines licences.

Applications for marketing authorisations for human medicines require data from trials in human volunteers; however regulatory approval is not required prior to undertaking such studies.

Any trials that are carried out in the UK are subject to two levels of control. First, the Control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations 1988 (made under the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974) apply as they would to any workplace activity. Second, good practice in respect of ethical standards is set down by the Helsinki Declaration and guidance from the Royal College of Physicians. Under these guidelines, studies require the approval of an ethics committee which takes full account of the rights of the volunteers.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his Department's current evaluation of the extent to which (a) short-term and (b) long-term exposure to organophosphorus compounds produces chronic illnesses. [55336]

Mr. Rooker: The Government are advised by the Advisory Committee on Pesticides (ACP) in relation to pesticides, and by the Veterinary Products Committee (VPC) in relation to veterinary medicines. On current available evidence it seems very likely that exposure to high doses of organophosphorus compounds can result in long term ill health (in addition to acute toxic effects). The range of effects is described in paragraphs 2.4 to 2.6 of the Official Group on OPs Report to Ministers (copies of which are in the Library of the House). What is more open to question and now being reassessed by our advisory committees is the long term effect of low level exposure.

As part of this reassessment the Government have invited a specialist sub-group of the Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment (COT) to consider a range of issues surrounding short term and long term exposure to OP compounds in general, including what evidence exists that chronic illness arises from long term exposure to OPs. The sub-committee has already begun its task.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the reviews and research into the effect of organophosphorus compounds on human health which his Department has initiated since 1 May 1997, indicating who is carrying out the research and when it is expected to be completed. [55337]

Mr. Rooker: Since 1 May 1997, we have commissioned a study at the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency on the dose effect profiles for OP sheep dips on brain electrical activity and cognitive performance in non-human primates. This is due to be completed in May 1999.

As part of the national arrangements for the review of existing approved pesticides, the regulatory Departments responsible for pesticides announced on 13 May 1998 the start of a review of those organophosphorus and carbamate pesticides approved for agricultural use. The first stage of this review is expected to be completed by January 1999.

The use of OP sheep dips was last reviewed by the Veterinary Products Committee (VPC) in February 1997. The VPC confirmed earlier advice that, provided they are used safely and in accordance with manufacturers' instructions, there is no scientific justification for withdrawing them from the market.

Loan Guarantee Scheme

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he is taking to expedite the proposal for the establishment of a loan guarantee scheme under EAGGF Measure 3.1; what obstacles regarding the state aid criterion in this matter have been raised; and if he will make a statement. [55222]

Mr. Rooker: We have recently received a draft outline proposal detailing how the proposed loan guarantee scheme under the Objective 5b Programme for the South West region would operate. This is currently being considered by officials. If it is decided to proceed with the Loan Guarantee Fund Parliamentary approval will be required, as will the formal clearance of the Fund as a State Aid from the European Commission. The agreement of the Commission will also be required to amend the Single Programme Document (SPD) for the South West to enable the Loan Guarantee Fund to be included within the Objective 5b Programme.

Rural Communities (Job Losses)

Mr. Hood: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the net job losses in rural communities resulting from the BSE crisis. [55036]

Mr. Rooker: In March 1997, UK Agriculture Departments and HM Treasury commissioned an independent study from DTZ Pieda Consulting to assess the economic impact of BSE on the UK economy. The study was completed in March of this year and a copy of the published report has been placed in the Library of the House.

The report did not separately identify rural employment impacts, but concluded that, whilst the potential for job losses across the economy was high, actual job losses as a result of BSE were limited. Some 1,000 net job losses (less than 0.5% of the jobs involved in the meat production process) were identified in the 12 months following the outbreak of the crisis. The shift in demand to substitute meats, and the provision of subsidies and compensation payments, both helped to retain jobs. However the report drew attention to the likelihood of future adjustments as the crisis support measures are gradually withdrawn.

Milk Quotas

Mr. Hood: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the European Commission's progress on the pooling of milk quotas. [55033]

Mr. Rooker: Pooling of milk quotas would presumably involve over-production of milk by some member states being netted-off by the under-production of others. This is not provided for in the European Commission's Agenda 2000 proposals on the reform of the CAP dairy regime and there is little evidence of any enthusiasm for such a measure amongst member states.

BSE

Mr. Hood: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his most recent estimate of the total cost to public funds of the BSE crisis. [55017]

Mr. Rooker: The current estimated cost of the BSE crisis is £4.6 billion over the period 1996/97 to 2001/2002. About 45 per cent. of this sum will be reimbursed by the European Community.

Farmers (Compensatory Payments)

Mr. Hood: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make an application to the EU for compensatory payments to farmers for the effects of the current value of sterling. [55223]

Mr. Rooker: The Government fully recognise the effect that the recent strength of sterling is having on the agricultural industry. The EU agrimonetary rules permit the UK to pay compensatory aid within a maximum ceiling to offset the income effects of revaluations of the sterling "green" rate. Following sterling revaluations in 1997 and 1998 about £165 million of aid is currently available to the UK, most of which is payable only to the cereal and beef sectors. The operation of the UK's EU budget abatement means that even paying the EU-reimbursed element of this aid carries significant public expenditure implications for the UK exchequer. Broadly speaking, the UK exchequer would bear around 71 per cent. of the costs of the £118 million EU-reimbursed element of this aid, and 100 per cent. of the costs of the £47 million national element making up this package.

It is against this background—and a tight position on public spending—that we have to take decisions about agrimonetary compensation. In recognition of the special circumstances facing the livestock sector, we announced on 18 December 1997 a one year, one-off package of aid to the beef and sheep sectors worth £85 million. This aid has provided substantial additional assistance to this sector.

My colleagues and I continue to keep the situation under review and are listening to the representations being made by the farming unions.

Cyber Fish

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research he has conducted on the (a) ethics and (b) economics of the cyber fish developed by a Norwegian scientist to lead fish into stationary nets. [55242]

Mr. Morley: MAFF has not undertaken any research into the ethics or economics of cyber fish, nor has it plans of doing so.

Fisheries

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer to my hon. Friend the Member for East Yorkshire (Mr. Townend) of 17 March 1998, Official Report, column 539, for what reasons the derogation in respect of the 6 and 12 miles limits will continue after 2002; and if he will list those Governments who have indicated they do not support extension. [55401]

Mr. Morley: It is clear that other Member States share our interest in protecting inshore fleets and therefore value the restrictions on access within 6 and 12 mile limits. None has indicated that it will not support the continuation of these provisions beyond 2002 and the European Commission has confirmed that it expects them to be maintained. There was unanimous agreement the last time they were renewed in 1992.

Green CAP

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the expansion of co-financible activities for a green common agricultural policy in accordance with Com (97) 620. [55327]

Mr. Rooker: The European Commission's report of December 1997 on the implementation of agri-environment schemes within the European Union (Com (97) 620) made a number of suggestions for the strengthening of agri-environment programmes both in financial terms and in terms of quality. It notes that these should be considered in the context of the proposals arising from Agenda 2000.

Under the UK Presidency, Member States agreed that agri-environment measures should remain an important part of the CAP reform process, and also began detailed consideration, as part of the Agenda 2000 process, of the Commission's proposal for the future development of agri-environmental and rural development policy. This has brought together amended measures from nine existing Council regulations and aims to be the second pillar of the Common Agricultural Policy. The proposed rural development regulation will allow Member States to prioritise their requirements for environmental action, structural adjustment, diversification and other measures in support of rural communities. The Commission propose the allocation of an extra 180 million ecu (£124.2 million) for agri-environmental measures. Such measures will be a compulsory element of development plans drawn up under the regulation.

In England, the results of the Comprehensive Spending Review for MAFF, which were announced by my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on 29 July 1998, Official Report, columns 341–45, established measures to sustain and enhance an attractive and accessible countryside as a key priority for MAFF. We will continue to expand the areas under agreement under the major agri-environment schemes.

In the long term, we would like to see the Common Agricultural Policy reformed to phase out production linked support, allowing European farming to develop into a competitive industry that can survive and prosper in increasingly open markets. We would wish to see part of the savings from a reduction in production support diverted to measures which will protect and enhance the environment and help the rural economy adjust, particularly in more fragile rural areas.

Pigs

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to press the European Commission to introduce measures to limit the growth in pig numbers in the European Union. [55489]

Mr. Rooker: None, as I do not believe that it would be in the United Kingdom pigmeat industry's best interests to do so. However, in response to representations from the UK and other Member States the Commission have extended and increased export refunds for pigmeat, and introduced a private storage aid scheme.

Quarantine

Mr. Key: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many (a) private pet owners and (b) commercial dog and cat breeders were prosecuted, and on what charges, under anti-rabies quarantine legislation in each of the last five years. [55470]

Mr. Rooker: Information on the breakdown of prosecutions between those of private pet owners and those of commercial dog and cat breeders is not held centrally. The number of prosecutions under the Rabies (Importation of Dogs, Cats and Other Mammals) Order 1974 reported to this Department by local authorities in each of the last five years is:

1993: 53
1994: 71
1995: 64
1996: 66
1997: 50.

Genetically Modified Crops

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his oral statement of 30 July 1998, Official Report, columns 621–30, if he will make a further statement about progress on genetically modified crops. [55675]

Mr. Rooker: In my statement on 30 July I reported fully on the background to MAFF's non-enforcement of regulation 11(3) of the Seeds (National Lists of Varieties) Regulations 1982. I stated then that I intended to put in hand immediate action to remove the requirement in regulation 11(3) to provide replicated trials data which is redundant and serves no useful purpose. I also indicated that we were considering urgently how the position of varieties already added to the National List or currently in tests and trials without replicated trials data should be regularised.

A formal consultation on the revocation of regulation 11(3) was launched on 6 August, and a further consultation was launched on 17 September setting out proposals for the regularisation of varieties already added to the National List or currently in tests and trials. The proposals contained in the 17 September consultation would have regularised the position of varieties already added to the National List, but would have continued to require replicated trials data, albeit submitted after applications had been received, from tests and trials carried out prior to the date of application.

However, in the light of representations received during the consultation process we concluded that there are no good reasons for differentiating between the treatment of varieties already on the National List, and those that are only part way through statutory tests and trials. Accordingly, we therefore issued revised proposals on 8 October which would revoke the requirement to submit replicated trials results (as already proposed in the 6 August consultation), and permit Ministers to determine all applications not yet determined by the date the regulations come into force, notwithstanding the absence of replicated trials data. These proposals are fully in line with the comments of the Court of Appeal that the position ought now to be resolved speedily and decisively across the board. The Court of Appeal also said that it would seem surprising if at least the possibility of retrospective amendment were not to be considered.

This latest consultation will end on 30 October, following which Ministers will give careful consideration to the views expressed by respondents before deciding on the final form of the amending Statutory Instrument. In the meantime the data requirements of regulation 11(3) are being operated. (Copies of all three consultation documents have been placed in the Library of the House).

So far as genetically modified varieties are concerned controls are addressed under separate legislation, the Environmental Protection Act 1990 and the regulations made under it. Genetically modified varieties are not accepted into National List tests unless they have been given the appropriate consents under this legislation.

In my statement I also spoke of the need to ensure that organic farmers are not adversely affected by the introduction of GMO crops. I said that MAFF and DETR would be working with the farming community and representatives of organic farming to ensure that the expansion of organic farming was not compromised by the introduction of genetically modified crops. The Government's aim is to promote dialogue between the organic and GM sectors so that practical steps can be taken to avoid problems.

This commitment is being taken forward in a number of ways. MAFF is commissioning research on the factors affecting the likelihood and consequences of gene transfer between genetically modified and organically produced crops and factors influencing the probability of such transfer. This research is being commissioned so that those concerned with defining and regulating organic crop production are able to draw on relevant data and information.

Cattle Tracing System

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress has been made at the British Cattle Movement Service since the launch of the computerised Cattle Tracing System for Great Britain on 28 September. [55676]

Mr. Rooker: The British Cattle Movement Service (BCMS) launched the new Cattle Tracing System for Great Britain on 28 September 1998. As of 14 October, the BCMS has issued 120,666 passports and processed

26,520 notifications of cattle movements. The BCMS has also dealt with over 50,000 calls to the local call rate Helpline since it opened on 1 July 1998.

Passport production peaked on 10 October when 23,747 passports were issued. The busiest day for the Helpline was 29 September when 1,914 calls were received.

Genetically Modified Organisms

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are the objectives of the forthcoming consultation exercise on genetically-modified organisms; and if it will include consultation about (a) genetically modified organisms in human food products, (b) genetically modified organisms in animal foodstuffs and (c) labelling of products derived from genetically modified organisms. [53386]

Mr. Battle: I have been asked to reply.

The public consultation exercise will seek the views of the general public on advances in the biosciences, including genetic modification. It will not initially focus on any specific area such as health or food, but will ask for views on the information available on genetics and its applications. We will seek to explore the way that people use this information to inform their judgments relating to risk and trust. For example, we expect to explore the role of Government, industry and others in the public perception of the biosciences and seek views on how effective current mechanisms are.

DEFENCE

Sexual and Ethnic Discrimination

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to reduce sexual and ethnic discrimination within the armed forces. [55360]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The Government are committed to eliminating all forms of ethnic and unlawful sexual discrimination within the Armed Forces. Together with the Chiefs of Staff, we are determined to provide a working environment that is free from any form of racial or unlawful sexual discrimination. We will be unremitting in our efforts to remove any racist or sexist attitudes, racially and sexually discriminatory practice, behaviour and language—and this has been made absolutely clear to all Service personnel.

All three Services are implementing Equal Opportunities Directives and Action Plans to put our commitment into practice.

We consider that robust equal opportunities training is an important component of our determination to challenge prejudice. To this end, I opened a tri-Service Equal Opportunities Training Centre at the Royal Military College of Science, Shrivenham on 25 September 1998. The centre provides equal opportunities training for dedicated equal opportunities advisers, and all senior personnel—both Service and civilian. The Centre will complement the wide range of equal opportunities training and initiatives already undertaken by my Department.

The Naval Service has produced a video on sexual and racial harassment, and bullying. It will be distributed to all ships and establishments this month. The video will be accompanied by a supporting letter and feedback questionnaires.

The Army is introducing mandatory Individual Training Directives (ITDs) for all its personnel. All personnel will be required to undertake a minimum of two 40-minute training sessions on equal opportunities each year.

The RAF is currently reviewing how it may better convey its policy of 'Zero Tolerance' of harassment and discrimination.

In addition, personal guides and leaflets on equal opportunities are distributed throughout the Armed Forces and confidential telephone support lines for Service personnel have been introduced.

RAF Northolt

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to consult local authorities on the future of RAF Northolt. [51863]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Any proposals emerging from work currently under way which may affect the future of RAF Northolt will be subject to maximum consultation, which will include local authorities and other interested parties.

Cyprus

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions his Department has had with President Clerides on the subject of a demilitarisation of the Island of Cyprus; and if he will make a statement. [55615]

Mr. Doug Henderson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence met President Clerides in Nicosia on 5 October. They had a wide-ranging discussion covering a number of subjects of mutual interest. My right hon. Friend took the opportunity to reassure President Clerides of the UK's continuing and steadfast commitment to supporting UN efforts to bring about a settlement.

CBDE Technical Papers

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment Technical Notes series of documents (a) started and (b) finished; how many documents were produced in this series; and how many of the documents are currently unclassified. [55328]

Mr. Spellar: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 20 October 1998:

I have been asked to reply to your question about the series of Technical Notes produced by DERA's Chemical and Biological Defence sector (CBD).

The series of internal reports known as the CBD Technical Notes started in 1969 and finished in 1997. The reports were numbered sequentially from 1 to 1629 although not all numbers were used. There are some 440 unclassified reports in the series, 6 of which are in the Public Record Office in the WO 189 class list.

I hope this is helpful.

Strategic Defence Review

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence following the Strategic Defence Review, the withdrawal of troops from Germany and the creation of a sixth new AS 90 regiment, what options for new facilities in Wiltshire (a) he and (b) his Department have assessed; and when he expects to make a decision. [54916]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 19 October 1998]: My Department is in the process of assessing a range of options for the basing of newly created units, and units which will be relocated from Germany following the Strategic Defence Review. Decisions will be announced as soon as possible.

Sixth AS 90 Regiment

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence where the new sixth AS 90 regiment will be based; and if he will make a statement. [54917]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 19 October 1998]: The Strategic Defence Review identified the requirement to create a sixth AS90 regiment to support the new UK based Mechanised Brigade. No decisions have yet been taken on where the new regiment will be based. An announcement will be made as soon as possible.

Mine Action Technologies Centre

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in what areas the British Government are (a) contributing to and (b) participating in, the creation of a centre for mine action technologies at the Defence Research Establishment in Suffield, Canada; and if he will make a statement. [55468]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 19 October 1998]: The recently opened Centre for Mine Action Technologies at the Defence Research Establishment in Suffield, Canada, is a national initiative in which the British Government have not been involved. The Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA) conducts research into counter mine warfare on behalf of the British Government, and makes publicly available any results relevant to humanitarian de-mining. The Ministry of Defence and the Department for International Development are also actively involved in the international exchange of information and co-operation on mine clearance technologies and will continue to contribute to international work on humanitarian mine clearance.

Logistic Information Systems Agency

Mr. Olner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key targets have been set for the Chief Executive of the Logistic Information Systems Agency 1998–99. [55735]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The Chief Executive of the Logistic Information Systems Agency has been set the following Key Targets for 1998–99:

Key Target 1—To deliver the agreed levels of service within budget levels defined by the customer.

Key Target 2—To achieve a reduction in unit costs of 3.0% by April 1999.

Key Target 3—To improve delivery performance to customer requirements such that:

95% of Requests for Change are assessed within 7 days.

The average period required for Request for Change Authorisation is reduced by 10%.

85% of Requests for Change are moved from the Tasking Phase to the Implementation Phase within 90 days.

TREASURY

Economic and Finance Council

Mr. Derek Twigg: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the Council meeting of the Economic and Finance Ministers of the European Union held on 12 October. [55671]

Mr. Gordon Brown: I attended the Economic and Finance Council—ECOFIN—of the European Union in Luxembourg on 12 October.

The Council started in restricted session with a discussion of the Finnish Stability programme and the Greek Convergence programme which are part of the implementation of the stability and growth pact. These programmes are important to ensure that the launch of the euro is successful. There was agreement to Council opinions for Greece and Finland.

On preparation of stage 3 of EMU, three items designed to improve multilateral surveillance were approved. The first was a letter by the chairmen of the Monetary Committee and the Economic Policy Committee on the broad economic policy guidelines. The Commission expressed support for a debate in Council in February. The second item was an opinion of the Monetary Committee on the content and format of stability and convergence programmes. The third item on multilateral surveillance was an opinion of the Economic Policy Committee on the content and format of reports on structural reform. The Presidency reminded member states that commitment to reform was essential at the highest levels and that the Economic Policy Committee would report again to ECOFIN on 15 March.

The Commission presented a report on the Community's Own Resources. There followed a discussion where interest was expressed by some member states in the concept of co-financing the Common Agricultural Policy. In response to criticism by some member states of the UK rebate, I emphasised that, even after the rebate, the UK remains a larger net contributor to the EU budget than Member States with a greater capacity to pay. The UK rebate remains fully justified.

The Presidency presented a paper on the future financial framework. There was significant support for real terms stabilisation of the financial perspective by 2006 at around current real-terms levels and for this to be reflected in the ECOFIN report to Vienna.

The chairman of the Economic Policy Committee summarised a statement from the Committee on some key employment policy issues. This statement was accepted by the Council.

The Finance Ministers of the EFTA member states joined ECOFIN Ministers for lunch. A range of topics were discussed including international economic issues.

Customs Information System

Mr. Caplin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the Government have, in addition to Her Majesty's Customs and Excise, designated additional competent authorities with direct access to the Customs Information System (C.I.S.) as referred to in Article 29(2) of EC Regulation 515/97 on mutual administrative assistance. [55776]

Dawn Primarolo: In addition to Her Majesty's Customs and Excise, I have designated the Intervention Board Executive Agency, the Home Office, and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, as competent authorities to have direct access to the Customs Information System (C.I.S.).

The Data Protection Agency has agreed to be designated as the national supervisory authority responsible for carrying out independent supervision of personal data included in the C.I.S., and it has access to the system for this purpose. (Article 37).

Pension Mis-selling

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on progress in the review of personal pensions mis-selling. [55930]

Ms Hewitt: Further advances have been made towards completion of the first phase of the review.

Of the 29 firms whose results are set out in the table only four have resolved less than 75 per cent. of their cases. All firms have now resolved over 60 per cent. of their cases.

However, the completion of cases, as measured in the table, is not the end of the process. With many firms close to their targets, it is now time for them to turn their attention from review to redress. The Government want to see the redress agreed between firms and customers delivered as a matter of priority.

The PIA is monitoring firms' follow up action to deliver redress, and will take action against laggards where this is warranted.

The time limit, set by the Personal Investment Authority (PIA), has expired for a further seven firms: Albany Life, Allied Dunbar, Canada Life, Gan, National Westminster, Royal London and Wesleyan. Consistent with the treatment of the twelve firms already removed from the Treasury's monthly list, the PIA will make its assessment of whether they have in fact met their targets. If they have, they will be removed from the list next month. They must continue to update the Treasury on their progress.

Petrol and Diesel Fuel Imports

Mr. Thompson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures are being taken to combat the illegal importation of petrol and diesel fuel from the Republic of Ireland. [55659]

Ms Hewitt: The Government recognise that the illegal importation of petrol and diesel across the border into Northern Ireland for resale is a serious problem which disadvantages legitimate traders. HM Customs are taking the lead, acting in conjunction with other authorities, including the Royal Ulster Constabulary, in deploying resources and actively mounting investigations against those involved to counter the threat posed to the revenue and to the Northern Ireland business community. Wherever possible, cases are progressed with a view to criminal prosecution of the individual concerned.

HEALTH

Commission for Health Improvement

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if NHS trusts and primary care trusts will be able to purchase the services of the Commission for Health Improvement on a consultancy basis. [55244]

Mr. Milburn: Initially, we do not see the Commission charging individual National Health Service organisations directly for work undertaken with them. However, we believe that in the longer term, as the Commission's role develops more fully, there is merit in a move to a system where more of its work is funded locally, as this would encourage greater local involvement in the Commission's work and greater ownership of the results.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health over what timescale the Commission for Health Improvement plans to visit each NHS trust and primary care trust. [55248]

Mr. Milburn: It is proposed that the Commission for Health Improvement conduct a rolling programme of visits, over a period of about 3 to 4 years, to every National Health Service trust and primary care trust.

Departmental Vehicles

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list for (a) his Department and (b) bodies listed in the National Asset Register, how many vehicles are currently (i) owned and (ii) leased; if he will indicate their (A) fuel types and (B) engine cubic capacities; and how many vehicles are expected to fall due for replacement in each of the years (1) 1998–99, (2) 1999–2000 and (3) 2000–01. [49227]

Ms Jowell [holding answer 6 July 1998]: The Department owns 129 vehicles and leases 244 of which 162 are diesel and 211 petrol. The engine cubic capacities are:

900 c.c: 1
1.2: 3
1.4: 9
1.5: 5
1.6: 33
1.7: 51
1.8: 76
1.9: 70
2.0: 88
2.1: 22
2.3: 3
2.5: 11
2.9: 1.

The vehicles are expected to fall due for replacement in each of the years as follows:

1998–99: 167
1999–2000: 87
2000–01: 102.

To provide this information in relation to those bodies other than the Department included in the National Asset Register would involve disproportionate cost.

SCOTLAND

Lockerbie

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if the Lord Advocate will make a statement on his contracts (a) directly and (b) through the UN with (i) the Libyan authorities and (ii) the lawyers representing the Libyans accused of the Lockerbie bombing. [55454]

Mr. McLeish: My noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate and my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary set out the Government's position on 24 August when they announced the initiative for a Scottish trial in the Netherlands. The Libyan authorities were invited to seek any clarification of the terms of the initiative through the Secretary General of the United Nations. One such set of questions has been addressed through the Legal Counsel to the Secretary General and a comprehensive response has been given.

Temazepam

Mrs. Irene Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many amputations in Strathclyde resulted from the misuse of the injected drug Temazepam in each year between 1990 and 1998. [55158]

Mr. Galbraith: The information is not available centrally.

Cervical Smear Tests

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland for each health authority in Scotland, what is the average time taken for a patient to receive the results of their cervical smear test; and what percentage take longer than the recommended four weeks. [55211]

Mr. Galbraith: The average reporting time for the results of cervical smear tests for each Health Board laboratory for the year ending 31 March 1998 was:

	Number of days
Argyll and Clyde	9
Ayrshire and Arran	17
Dumfries and Galloway	9
Fife	11
Forth Valley	26
Grampian	21
Greater Glasgow	13
Highland	13
Lanarkshire	11
Lothian	32
Tayside	14

For the year ended 31 March 1998 the average reporting time for the results of the cervical smear tests in Scotland was 17 days. The laboratory that serves Lothian and Borders Health Boards experienced major staffing problems during 1997 but the Health Boards have now taken action to address this problem.

The figure for Lothian includes Borders cases, Grampian includes Orkney and Shetland cases and Highland includes Western Isles cases. Figures are collected only for the time from the date a smear test is received by the laboratory to the date the report is issued by the laboratory and do not therefore include the time it takes GPs, family planning clinics, etc. to issue the results to patients once they receive them from the laboratory. For this reason, no information is available on the percentage of patients who take longer than 4 weeks to receive their result.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Civil Justice

Ms Beverley Hughes: To ask the Minister of State, Lord Chancellor's Department if a date has been set for the introduction of the first phase of the civil justice reforms. [55732]

Mr. Hoon: The first phase of the Civil Justice Reforms will be introduced on Monday, 26 April 1999, when the new Civil Procedure Rules and supporting materials will come into effect.

WALES

New Deal

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the progress of the New Deal for the young unemployed in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [55156]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: The New Deal for 18–24s is making excellent progress in Wales. By the end of July, more than 1,600 jobless young people had secured employment and, at the latest count, over 2,000 employers had committed more than 3,800 job opportunities.

A further 600 young people have either entered full-time education and training or are developing skills that will enable them to secure employment through work that benefits their community or their environment.

This is a tremendous achievement in just a few months and is a great credit to the Employment Service, its many partner organisations and the employers of Wales. However, we must not be complacent. Further hard work lies ahead to ensure that we continue to develop the high quality opportunities that our young unemployed people deserve.

A449

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales for how long there have been roadworks on the A449 between Monmouth and Newport; when they are planning to be completed; at what total cost; and for what reason information on the duration of the roadworks has not been provided. [55027]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: 1. The A449/A40 between Monmouth and Newport was completed in 1972 with a design life of 20 years. By 1984, it had carried in excess of its design traffic and a programme of repair and reconstruction commenced. The three major contracts commenced in 1994, 1995 and 1997.

2. Expenditure to date has been £9 million on interim repairs and £24 million on reconstruction, including the current works.

3. The current contract, between Coldra and Usk, is scheduled for completion in February 1999. Reconstruction of the carriageway between Raglan and Monmouth will also be required and is currently programmed, subject to available resources, to commence in 2001–02.

4. Information on the duration of the roadworks contracts has been extensively circulated by information leaflets distributed to interested parties and left at many locations in the area and also by press notices.

Motorcyclists

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales for what reasons motorcyclists are not represented on the Welsh Transport Advisory Group; and if he will make a statement. [55372]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: My right hon. Friend has received a number of requests from motorcycling organisations for representation on the Welsh Transport Advisory Group. He has told them he is satisfied that the current membership of the Group already adequately covers the interests of two wheeled transport. He has also offered them the opportunity to submit written representations to the Group. In addition, a separate advisory group is currently being established to bring together motorcycle interests and other interested parties for Great Britain as a whole.

Radioactive Materials

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what information has been provided to his Department by the Environment Agency concerning plans by Nycomed Amersham to store radioactive materials in Wales. [55423]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: The Environment Agency provided my right hon. Friend with information concerning the Company's application to transfer low and intermediate level radioactive waste for storage at their Cardiff site.

He was furnished with copies of the draft certificates of authorisation, background explanatory note, explanatory note to assist the public consultation, and information provided by the Company to support the application. Copies of all these documents have been placed on the relevant public registers.

HOME DEPARTMENT

EU Justice and Home Affairs Council

Ms Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Justice and Home Affairs Council held in Brussels on 24 September. [55923]

Mr. Straw: The Under-Secretary, my hon. Friend the Member for Vauxhall (Kate Hoey), and I represented the United Kingdom at the Council. The main matters dealt with were as follows:

The Council agreed as 'A' points, among other things, Europol's budget for 1999, the half-yearly report on the activities of the Europol Drugs Unit, decisions concerning the role of the Director of Europol after entry into force of the Europol Convention and the transfer of the strategic direction of the TECS project to Europol, and the regular Europol information system report.

The Council reached political agreement on the text of the draft Joint Action on the identification, tracing, freezing, seizing and confiscation of instrumentalities and the proceeds from crime.

The Presidency informed the Council that the explanatory report on the Convention on the fight against corruption would be adopted at a later Council meeting after passing through jurist-linguists.

A useful discussion was held on new technical developments in the interception of telecommunications and their implications for the draft Convention on Mutual Legal Assistance, agreement to which is an important priority in the fight against organised crime.

The Council noted a progress report on preparations for the entry into force of the Europol Convention and discussed the rules and procedure to be employed by Europol's Joint Supervisory Body. This matter will be discussed further at the informal meeting of Justice and Home Affairs Ministers in Vienna at the end of October.

The Presidency gave an oral progress report on negotiation of the draft Eurodac Convention, which is concerned with the fingerprinting of asylum applicants. Ministers will discuss the matter again at the Vienna informal Ministerial meeting.

The Council received from the Presidency an oral report on the implementation of the Action Plan on the influx of migrants from Iraq and on migration from Kosovo and the neighbouring region.

The Council discussed the need for urgent measures to tackle abuse of the Internet and other forms of sexual exploitation of children. The Presidency's draft Joint Action on child pornography on the Internet will be discussed at the December Justice and Home Affairs Council (JHA). The Council also discussed Europol's role in this area and the importance of early implementation of the Joint Action of February 1997 concerning action to combat trafficking in human beings and sexual exploitation of children.

In the afternoon, European Union Justice and Home Affairs Ministers held a joint meeting with their counterparts from the associated Central and Eastern European countries (CEEs) and Cyprus. The meeting began with an exchange of views on implementation of the JHA acquis in the field of immigration and asylum, with discussion introduced by Germany.

The United Kingdom introduced discussion on judicial co-operation. A number of applicant states outlined the progress they had made towards meeting the JHA acquis in this area, the importance of which, in both practical and legal terms, they fully recognised. The applicant states were encouraged to consider accession to the Lugano Convention.

On organised crime, the Commission gave an overview of recent work together with an analysis of the linkages of this work to the wider accession process. A number of CEEs and Cyprus described recent developments in their domestic legislation and policies to combat organised crime. Common themes highlighted included the development of domestic legislation; the creation of multi-disciplinary task forces to co-ordinate action; and the development of practical operational co-operation between police forces in different states.

Outside the formal Council meetings, a number of discussions were held with other Interior Ministers and officials on the need for better co-ordination and action to stem the flow of economic migrants claiming asylum.

Prisons

Mr. Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the outcome of his review of the powers of controllers at contracted out prisons which he announced on 19 June 1997. [55924]

Mr. Straw: I have carefully reviewed the existing powers of controllers at privately managed prisons and have decided that, broadly, the current arrangements should be retained. Increasing the powers of controllers would reduce the contractors' operational responsibility for managing the prisons. The essence of contracting out is that optimum risk should be transferred to the private sector; efficient contract enforcement would seem to be the best way to ensure value for money from these contracts.

Forensic Science Service

Miss Melanie Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will publish the results of his consultation exercise about the Government's proposal to establish the Forensic Science Service as a trading fund; and what conclusions he has come to about the future financial regime for the operations of the service. [55925]

Mr. Straw: I have today reported the outcome of the consultation exercise to establish the Forensic Science Service as a trading fund. Copies of my report are being placed in the Library. I have concluded, and my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary has agreed, that it would be in the interests of the improved efficiency and effectiveness of the management of the Forensic Science Service if its operations were financed by means of a trading fund. Important benefits will arise from this proposal: in particular the Forensic Science Service will be able to plan and manage its investment and business needs with a long term view. A draft Order under the Government Trading Funds Act 1973 (as amended) will shortly be brought before the House to secure approval for the establishment of the Forensic Science service Trading Fund.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Libya

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on allegations by a former employee of the security agencies that public funds were used to seek to assassinate the leader of Libya and that public funds were directed to an organisation based in London to facilitate such a project. [55311]

Mr. Robin Cook: I have nothing to add to what I have already stated publicly: there was no Government-inspired plan or proposal to assassinate Colonel Qadhaffi, or to assist others in doing so.

Indonesia

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, during recent meetings with the Indonesian President, he has been able to raise the Balibo incident of October 1975; and if he will make a statement. [55674]

Mr. Fatchett: I raised our concerns about the Balibo incident with President Habibie during a visit to Indonesia on 8 October. The President undertook to investigate the matter.

European Community Legislation

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 12 March 1998, Official Report, columns 277–78, how many Community legislative acts for 1997 (a) were and (b) were not delegated to committees of member state representatives. [55397]

Ms Quin: Most Commission legislation is made under implementing powers delegated to the Commission by the Council. The Commission is normally assisted in enacting implementing measures by committees made up of Member State and Commission representatives. The Commission Annual Report for 1997 lists the Commission as having enacted 1,430 regulations, directives and decisions over the year, the Council, either alone or acting jointly with the European Parliament, having enacted 407. However, in contrast to previous years, these figures exclude instruments not published in the Official Journal and routine management instruments valid for a limited period.

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 12 March 1998, Official Report, columns 277–78, what estimate he has made of the proportion and quantity of European Community legislation that neither passes before the Council of Ministers nor is discussed in Parliament; and if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on this procedure. [55395]

Ms Quin: The Commission makes legislation under powers which are delegated in specific cases under primary legislation approved by the Council of Ministers. Proposals for such measures may in some cases be referred to the Council of Ministers. In addition to implementing legislation, the Commission is also given specific legislative powers under Articles 48.3.d and 90.3 of the Treaty establishing the European Community.

The Commission's Annual Report gives totals of 7,068 Commission regulations, directives and decisions for 1993 and 6,732 Commission regulations, directives and decisions for 1994. The 1995 Report gives no figures. In these years, Commission legislation made up over 90% of total Community legislation.

Proposals for Commission implementing measures are not currently subject to Parliamentary scrutiny. However, the House of Commons Modernisation Committee propose changing the terms of reference of the European Legislation Committee to include such legislation. The Government support this. Because of the volume and nature of this legislation, it is proposed that the Committee scrutinise these measures 2–3 times per year for trends.

SOCIAL SECURITY

War Pensions

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many service personnel who served in the 1991 Gulf War have been awarded war pensions for illness attributed to their service in the war. [55321]

Mr. Timms: The administration of the War Pensions Agency is a matter for its Chief Executive, Mr. Gordon Hextall. I have asked him to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Gordon Hextall to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 19 October 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the number of War Pensions awarded for illness attributed to service in the Gulf Conflict.

My letter of 30 July 1998, in response to your previous Parliamentary Question (Official Report 31 July 1998 Column 760/761) is still relevant to the current question. This explained that, although our statistics record claims from service personnel whose service included the Gulf Conflict, such claims may not be confined solely to injuries/etc. sustained in the Gulf Conflict and could include any injuries etc. received in service.

I am however, able to update the figures that I gave in my earlier reply. At the end of September 1998, a total of 2,474 claims had been identified for medical conditions relating to ex-servicemen whose service included the Gulf Conflict. So far, 1,815 awards of War Pension have been made. Of the 2,474 claims, 599 have been received where a Gulf Veteran had made reference to a "Gulf War related illness". Of these so far, 345 have been awarded a pension, 46 have been rejected and 24 claims were withdrawn or lapsed.

I regret that the precise information you requested is not available but to identify claims relating only to the Gulf conflict would require a manual examination of all 2,474 case files which would incur disproportionate cost. However, if you would find it helpful, I could provide a regular update on the figures available. If you would like me to arrange this, please let me know.

Correspondence

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the hon. Member for Wakefield will receive a reply to his correspondence of 8 May, on behalf of his constituent Mr. Wright, from (a) the Disability Living Allowance Unit and (b) the Benefit Agency Medical Service. [55032]

Mr. Timms: The administration of the Disability Living Allowance Unit and the Benefits Agency Medical Services is a matter for Peter Mathison, the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. David Hinchliffe, dated 19 October 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking when you will receive a reply to your correspondence of 8 May, concerning your constituent Mr. Write, from (a) the Disability Living Allowance Unit (DLA) and (b) the Benefits Agency Medical Service (BAMS).

The Benefits Agency Customer Charter sets out targets for response to complaints. They are an acknowledgement within two working days and a full response within seven working days (twenty working days for BAMS). I am sorry, on this occasion, you have failed to receive the standard of service which you are entitled to expect.

Replies to your letter were issued from the BAMS on 7 August 1998 and from the DLA Unit on 11 August 1998.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

English Tourist Board

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make a statement on the abolition of the English Tourist Board; what body or bodies will replace the English Tourist Board; what assessment he has made of the ability of English tourism to compete against Welsh and Scottish tourism following the abolition of the English Tourist Board; and what grants will be made available for the promotion of tourism in the English regions. [55500]

Janet Anderson: On 24 July 1998, Official Report, columns 699–700, we announced our consultation into the Department's activities following the Comprehensive Spending Review. This included a review of the support we currently give to English tourism. While recognising the need for a national co-ordinating role, the consultation set out four possible options for alternative structures that might deliver a greater proportion of the available funds more directly in support of tourism in the regions.

We are currently considering the responses we have received. No decisions have yet been made on whether to abolish the English Tourist Board and, if so, which structure should replace it. We will decide in the light of the consultation which support structure for English tourism can best implement our new tourism strategy, which will be published in the next few months.

All the money that is currently provided for the support of English tourism will be ring-fenced for that purpose. It is our intention to seek to deploy those resources more effectively in order to release more money for regional support of tourism.

Royal Parks Agency

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what targets he has set for the Royal Parks Agency. [55775]

Mr. Chris Smith: The following targets have been set for the Royal Parks Agency for 1998–99:

Financial and Efficiency

To increase receipts by 16 per cent. to £3.3 million from £2.84 million in 1997–98 from permits, fees, licences, events, concessions and car parking.

Achieve a 1.5 per cent. reduction in running costs.

Reduce Royal Parks Constabulary hourly costs of a police constable on duty from £22.90 per hour in 1997–98 by 2.5 per cent. to £22.35 in 1998–99.

Visitor satisfaction

Maintain an overall quality rating of 86 per cent. from visitors to the parks.

Fabric

Review contract documents and specifications and competitively re-tender the grounds maintenance contracts for Regent's Park, St. James's Park, Kensington Gardens and Greenwich Park and award new contracts by December 1998.

Maintain an average rating from visitors of at least 85 per cent. on cleanliness in the parks, compared with a target of 82 per cent. in 1997–98.

Maintain an average score of 83 per cent. for soft landscape presentation.

PRIME MINISTER

Government Annual Report

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Prime Minister who was the freelance photographer who took the photographs and did the interviews for the Government's Annual report 1997–98. [55240]

The Prime Minister: Mr. Richard Baker.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Prime Minister for what reasons the name, age and occupation of one of the members of the public quoted in the Government's Annual report 1997–98 are given. [55241]

The Prime Minister: This information was included in error and should have been removed at the proof reading stage.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Ministerial Meetings (Transport Policy)

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which bodies or individuals outside Government his predecessor met to talk about transport policy and the Transport White Paper over the three months before publication of the White Paper; and how many of these meetings were attended by employees of professional lobby consultants. [54132]

Mr. Battle: The former President of the Board of Trade and I regularly discussed industry, transport and environmental matters and the links between them, with bodies and individuals outside Government, both formally and informally.

Nuclear Reprocessing

Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received from EU environment ministers with regard to the future of the nuclear reprocessing industry. [54334]

Mr. Battle: My right hon. Friend has received no such representations.

Export Credits Guarantee Department

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the extension of ECGD's Amber Zone Budget beyond 31 March 1999. [55992]

Mr. Mandelson: I have decided to extend the Amber Zone Budget (AZB), which controls the level of new commitments on markets where ECGD exposure is already concentrated or the risks are high, by a further two years, until 31 March 2001. In view of the ample headroom against the current AZB of £3.8 billion, the AZB for 1999–2000 and 2000–2001 will be maintained at this level, but the position will be kept under review to ensure that ECGD can continue to support worthwhile export business. In line with good practice followed by commercial banks ECGD will continue to set exposure against the AZB on a weighted basis according to its susceptibility to political risks. In the meantime, a review is being undertaken on how to improve ECGD's exposure management regime, with the objective of providing Ministers with a clearer and better framework for striking a balance between supporting worthwhile exports and the financial risks to the taxpayer.

EU Research Council

Mr. Plaskitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the outcome of the EU Research Council on 13 October. [55993]

Mr. Mandelson: Lord Sainsbury, Under-Secretary of State and Minister for Science, represented the UK at the meeting of the EU Research Council on 13 October. The Council made further useful progress in the legislative process for the Fifth Framework Programme for Research and Technological Development (FP5), maintaining momentum in the tight timetable for introducing FP5 at the beginning of 1999. Though formal agreement was not possible at this stage, informal agreement was reached on the scientific and technological content of three of the specific programmes which set out FP5's research priorities in detail. The Council also agreed Decisions on the mandate for negotiating terms of association with FP5 with the countries seeking accession to the EU, on the conclusion of an agreement for scientific and technological co-operation between the European Community and the United States, and on amendments to the statutes of the Joint European Torus Joint Undertaking (JET), through which the EU pursues nuclear fusion research.

Director General of Gas Supply

Mr. Stephen Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement about the appointment of the next Director General of Gas Supply. [55990]

Mr. Mandelson: I have appointed Callum McCarthy as Director General of Gas Supply (DGGS) from 1 November 1998, and as Director General of Electricity Supply (DGES) from 1 January 1999. Both appointments will run until 31 October 2003.

The appointment of a single individual as DGGS and DGES reflects the convergence of the gas and electricity markets, and the Government's confirmation, in July, that they proposed to amalgamate the regulatory regimes for gas and electricity. Subject to parliamentary approval of legislation to create the post, Mr. McCarthy will in due course be appointed as the first Energy Regulator for Great Britain, chairing a new full-time board that will replace the present DGGS and DGES.

I am placing in the Library of the House a copy of my Department's Press Notice of 24 September, with further details of the appointment.

The Council also discussed the issue of parallel imports and trade-mark rights, following the European Court of Justice's recent Judgment in case 355/96 (Silhouette).

The Commission made presentations of its Green Paper on patent protection within the EU; on its communication on statutory audit in the EU, addressing the supervision of auditing and auditing standards within a Single Market context; and on its progress towards development of an action plan to follow up the Report of the Business Environment Simplification Task Force (BEST).

Internal Market Council

Mr. Sawford: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what topics were discussed at the EU Ministerial Council on the Internal Market on 24 September; and what matters were voted upon. [55991]

Mr. Mandelson: My noble Friend the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe represented the UK at the Internal Market Council in Brussels on 24 September.

The Commission reported to the Council on Member States' progress towards implementation of the Single Market Action Plan, which aims to improve the operation of the Single Market. The Commission reported that the number of directives not yet implemented in all Member States had been cut from 35.5 per cent. in June 1997 to 15.4 per cent. currently. The Council adopted conclusions which re-affirmed its commitment to the implementation of the Action Plan, noted the importance of making the Single Market rules more effective and welcomed the Commission's communication "Making the Single Market rules more effective", which set out some ideas for achieving this.

The Council had an initial orientation discussion on a proposal for a directive on the protection of invention by "utility model". This is a form of intellectual property protection right, which does not currently exist in the UK, for technical innovation, which is aimed, in particular, at ephemeral products with a short shelf life, and for the use by small businesses.

Dounreay

Sir Robert Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Kirkaldy (Dr. Moonie), 5 June 1998, Official Report, column 385, if the Dounreay Nuclear Establishment will receive further shipments of unused plutonium fuel from the German Hanau nuclear facility. [48028]

Mr. Battle: UKAEA has a committed contract to deal with this material and so would expect to receive it at Dounreay in due course. However, at present UKAEA are not accepting any new nuclear material onto the Dounreay site, and they will not do so until after they have satisfied their regulators.

Electromagnetic Fields

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research he has evaluated into low energy electromagnetic fields associated with cellular telephones and telecommunication masts; and if he will make a statement. [53960]

Mrs. Roche: Advice on exposure to electromagnetic fields is given by the National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB). It evaluates published and peer reviewed sound scientific evidence on which its Guidelines for exposure are based. The exposure guidelines at mobile communications frequencies are based on well established thermal effects. Whilst it has been suggested by a small number of studies that there are potential effects associated with weak electromagnetic fields, such studies are inconsistent, and have proved difficult to replicate. They do not provide a basis for altering the advice provided. The NRPB Advisory Group on Non-ionising Radiation continues to review the published literature.

A European Expert Group under the chairmanship of the Head of Non-ionising Radiation of the NRPB has reviewed the published literature and examined research needs. The research recommendations, which could be implemented under Framework V, included areas for further work and identified key research to be replicated. We welcome research that is systematic and undertaken by laboratories with proven skills in this subject. Support for such research does not imply that the Government believe there are harmful effects or that members of the public are subject to harmful electromagnetic fields generated by mobile communications equipment.

Interest Rates

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the impact of interest rates on the competitiveness of small and medium-sized enterprises in the UK. [54856]

Mr. Mandelson: The Government have established a new framework for monetary policy, with the Bank of England setting interest rates to meet the Government's inflation target, so ensuring that decisions are taken on the basis of the long-term needs of the economy, not short-term political considerations. By delivering low and stable inflation, and avoiding a return to the damaging cycle of boom and bust, this new framework for monetary policy will produce a more stable economic environment which in turn will enhance the competitiveness of small and medium-sized enterprises.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Intervention Board

Mr. Drew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if the Intervention Board intends to publish a revised corporate plan, as set out in its Policy and Resources Framework Document. [56009]

Mr. Nick Brown: The Intervention Board published a new Corporate Plan in September 1998, to cover the years 1998–1999 to 2002–03. Copies are held in the Library of the House.

Agriculture Council

Mr. Drew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the Agriculture Council held in Brussels on 28 September. [55927]

Mr. Nick Brown: I represented the United Kingdom at a meeting of the European Union Agriculture Council in Brussels on 28 September.

The Council held a first debate on a Commission proposal to reform the EU wine regime. I welcomed many elements in the proposal, in particular measures to redirect EU production away from its traditional reliance on market intervention and towards improved quality and competitiveness. However, I questioned the need to increase the budgetary cost of the wine regime in order to achieve those ends.

The Council also debated the impact of the crisis in Russia on EU agricultural markets, and invited the Commission to keep the position under constant scrutiny in view of the importance of the Russian market for EU agricultural exports. More generally, the Commission circulated updated market forecasts for the principal EU agricultural commodities in the period up to 2005, forecasts which will form part of the Council's consideration of proposals to reform the Common Agricultural Policy within the framework of Agenda 2000.

In the context of CAP reform, I introduced in the Council a paper prepared jointly with Italian, Swedish and Danish colleagues which proposes a mechanism and a timetable for the removal of milk quotas by 2006. We collectively called for the paper to be examined in detail as part of the on-going Agenda 2000 negotiations.

Discussion of the proposal to improve the welfare of laying hens revealed continuing differences amongst member states over the desirability of the measure, and the economic effect of the proposal if implemented. In common with several other member states, I stressed the UK view that the EU should commit itself to an eventual phasing out of the battery cage system.

The Council also took stock of the difficult economic conditions prevailing on the pigmeat market and invited the Commission to keep the situation under review. There was also an exchange of views on the incidence of BSE in Portugal in which the Commission reported that its own inspection team was currently examining the measures taken by the Portuguese administration to protect human health and combat the disease in animals.

Government Purchase Card

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what use (a) his Department and (b) its agencies are currently making of the Government Purchase Card; what savings he estimates are being achieved as a result; what plans he has to expand use of the card by his Department and its agencies; and if he will make a statement. [55169]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 19 October 1998]: Of MAFF and its Agencies, only the Central Science Laboratory (CSL) and the Veterinary Laboratory Agency (VLA) are using the Government Purchase Card (GPC), introduced on 1 August 1998.

The core-Ministry and the VLA introduced their own pilot procurement card schemes in advance of the GPC. The VLA's was introduced in September 1996 and the Ministry's in August 1997. The VLA migrated to the GPC in May 1998. Details of the card numbers and usage are in the table.

	MAFF	VLA	CSL
Numbers of cards	72	130	2
Numbers of transactions	3,227	8,000	17
Value of transactions	£103,000	£600,000	£18,000
Savings	£33,580	£160,000	£340

The savings figures given above are based on an estimated average savings per transaction. The figure differs from scheme to scheme, but the administrative savings, which arise from the operational benefits procurement card provides, are estimated currently to be between £10 and £20 per transaction.The use of procurement cards for low value transactions is a primary means of reducing the costs of administrative procurement and improving response times for obtaining goods and services.

Having successfully completed a year's trial the core-Ministry now plans a phased roll out of its own card subject to the completion of a full economic appraisal. The other Agencies and one or two of the Non-Departmental Public Bodies (NDPBs) were awaiting the results of the pilot schemes before deciding whether to take up the use of procurement cards. The Centre for Environment, Fisheries and Aquacultural Sciences (CEFAS) is now planning to introduce a card at the end of this financial year. On the basis of the success so far, I expect the other Agencies and the NDPBs who have approached us to be among the first new users set up as part of the phased roll out.

Civil Servants

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has made on the representation of British nationals in senior Civil Service grades in Directorate General XIV (fisheries); and if he will make a statement. [55318]

Mr. Morley: None.

Public Bodies (Reports)

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the bodies within the responsibility of his Department currently required by legislation to lay a report before Parliament. [33555]

Mr. Morley [pursuant to his reply, 12 March 1998, c. 299]: The following bodies, for which my right hon. Friend has responsibility, are currently required by legislation to lay a report before Parliament:

Department and Executive Agency

Intervention Board

Executive Agencies

Central Science Laboratory

Centre for Environment, Fisheries and Aquaculture Science

Farming and Rural Conservation Agency

Meat Hygiene Service

Pesticides Safety Directorate

Veterinary Laboratory Agency

Veterinary Medicines Directorate

Executive Non-Departmental Public Bodies

Agricultural Wages Board

Agricultural Wages Committees

Apple and Pear Research Council

Food from Britain

Home-Grown Cereals Authority

Horticultural Development Council

Meat and Livestock Commission

Milk Development Council

Potato Industry Development Council

Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew

Sea Fish Industry Authority

Public Corporation

Covent Garden Market Authority.

Previously, the Department has advised that the Veterinary Products Committee had a statutory requirement to publish an annual report and to lay the report before Parliament. It has now been established that this is not the case.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Remploy

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on Remploy's achievements against the targets set in their 1997–98 Annual Performance Agreement. [55737]

Ms Hodge: Now that Remploy has published its Report and Accounts for 1998 and audited figures are available, I am delighted to confirm that Remploy has exceeded its 1997–98 APA targets. The targets and achievements were:

	Target	Achievement
The average number of disabled people employed by Remploy	at least 9,800	10,021
Average number of disabled people employed under the Interwork Scheme	at least 3,000	3,123
The number of disabled employees to move from Remploy factories to Interwork having been employed there for at least 1 year, or from Interwork or factories to open employment	200	225
Remploy will keep within a unit cost target (operating deficit per disabled worker) of:	£10,000	£9,726
The unit cost of Interwork to be no more than:	£4,400	£4,226
Remploy to keep within an operating deficit (including reorganisation costs) of:	£99m	£99m

Copies of Remploy's 1998 Annual Report and Accounts have been placed in the Library.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Fishermen (Occupational Safety)

7. Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Transport and the Regions when he last met his colleagues from other member states of the European Union, to discuss matters relating to the occupational safety of fishermen. [54331]

Ms Glenda Jackson: There has been no recent discussion with EU colleagues on the occupational safety of fishermen. A number of regulations which implement EC health and safety directives, including the Merchant and Fishing Vessel; (Health and Safety at Work) Regulations 1997, are already in force. Further regulations will be introduced later this year.

Area Cost Adjustment

12. Mr. David Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to reform the area cost adjustment. [54337]

Ms Armstrong: We are considering a range of options for changing the area cost adjustment. We expect to announce our conclusion at the usual time around the beginning of December.

Non-departmental Public Bodies

13. Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to give local authorities the power and responsibility to scrutinise non-departmental public bodies. [54338]

Mr. Raynsford: On 30 July, my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister published a White Paper "Modern Local Government: In Touch with the People" which welcomed the steps taken by some councils to convene public forums to enable issues of particular local concern or interest to be aired and considered. We are keen to encourage all councils to take on this local scrutiny role but do not wish to be prescriptive about the way in which they go about doing so.

Social Housing (Tenure)

14. Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to increase flexibility of tenure in the housing association and council housing sectors. [54339]

Ms Armstrong: On 30 July 1998, Official Report, columns 417–18, I announced plans to encourage more Registered Social Landlords to develop "flexible tenure" schemes which will help shared owners facing mortgage difficulties and repossession because of a change in their financial circumstances.

My Department is considering the discussion paper recently published by the Chartered Institute of Housing on a single form of tenancy for social housing.

We are also planning to simplify schemes by which tenants of local authorities and RSLs are helped into home ownership.

Estates Renewal Challenge Fund

15. Maria Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to replace the estates renewal challenge fund with funding mechanisms which will facilitate the transfer of housing from local authority control. [54340]

Mr. Raynsford: My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister announced in his statement on 22 July that there would be no further rounds of the Estates Renewal Challenge Fund. Allocations already approved will, however, remain in place to enable all planned transfers to be completed.

We want authorities to take a more strategic look at how to meet the investment needs of all their housing. Where stock has a negative value and transfer is the best option, I would expect authorities to use their capital resources under the Housing Investment Programme to pay for it. Some negative value transfers may also form part of packages under the New Deal for Communities.

Sustainable Development

16. Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received from representatives of the business community over his Department's plans to encourage sustainable development; and if he will make a statement. [54341]

Mr. Meale: As part of the Government's "Opportunities for Change" consultation on sustainable development, my Department has also consulted separately with the business community about "Sustainable Business". We have received a great many responses from individual businesses offering constructive reactions about the many ways in which business can be encouraged to improve its performance. These have come from the different business sectors and included representations from Trade Associations who also expressed interest in collective action to improve sectoral performance and sustainability.

Rural Buffer Zones

17. Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Transport and the Regions what is his policy on the future of rural buffer zones. [54342]

Mr. Raynsford: Planning Policy Guidance note 7—"The Countryside", advises (para 4.16) that local countryside designations such as rural buffer zones should be maintained or extended only where there is good reason to believe that normal planning policies cannot provide the necessary protection. Such local designations carry less weight than national designations and development plan policies and development control policies should reflect this.

Second Homes

18. Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received about the appropriate level of council tax for second homes. [54343]

Mr. Raynsford: In response to the consultation paper on local government finance, we received 40 representations on second homes. Since the election, we have also received an additional 112 representations on second homes. Of the representations received, 113 were in favour of abolition of the 50 per cent. discount and 39 were against abolition of the discount.

Buenos Aires Conference

19. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on his preparations for the Buenos Aires conference on climate change. [54344]

Mr. Meacher: The Protocol we agreed in Kyoto last December was an historic turning point with developed countries taking on legally binding greenhouse gas emission reduction targets. But many issues, for example rules for the operation of flexibility mechanisms such as emissions trading, remain to be resolved. We must maintain the momentum of Kyoto in Buenos Aires by: making progress on as many issues as possible; avoiding sterile confrontation on issues not ripe for resolution; putting in place a work-plan to resolve these issues; and by involving all stakeholders—including business and non-governmental organisations—in delivering implementation of the Protocol.

Rent Levels

20. Ms Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Transport and the Regions what measures he intends to take to equalise rent levels between housing association and local authority housing. [54346]

Mr. Raynsford: In his statement on Housing and Regeneration Policy on 22 July, my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister said that "no decision has yet been reached on rent policy in the longer term".

That remains the position.

Energy Efficiency

21. Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Transport and the Regions what measures he plans to encourage energy efficiency in Government Departments. [54347]

Mr. Meale: The Government are committed to an improvement in the energy efficiency of departments of 20 per cent. over 1990–91 levels by 2000, and progress will be reviewed regularly by Green Ministers under the chairmanship of my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment. New benchmark indicators for different building types, based on good practice in other sectors of the economy, are being developed as a further tool to help departments assess the energy efficiency of different parts of their estates and concentrate efforts where there is most scope for improvement. My Department will continue to ensure that relevant written and practical guidance is available to energy managers in the Government estate.

Local Government Finance

22. Mr. Rammell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on discussions he has had with the Local Government Association about local government finance. [54348]

Ms Armstrong: We are maintaining a close and effective working relationship with the Local Government Association. The Deputy Prime Minister and I, along with other Cabinet colleagues, last met them to discuss local government finance at the Central Local Partnership meeting on 21 September. I also met groupings of authorities suggested by the Association to discuss the report by the SSA sub-group on possible changes in Standard Spending Assessments. A wide range of differing interests were covered and in the light of all the evidence we will decide the way forward. We will announce our proposals, as usual, later this year.

Best-value Regimes

23. Mr. McNulty: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects a best-value regime to be implemented by local authorities. [54349]

Ms Armstrong: Primary legislation will be required to introduce the best value regime and abolish CCT for all local authorities. We have set up pilot projects to take forward best value principles prior to legislation and we have relaxed existing CCT regulations to encourage all authorities to adopt best value practices. I cannot comment on the contents of the Queen's Speech; however, the Government remain committed to introducing best value in local authorities.

"Access to the Open Countryside"

24. Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to respond to the consultation exercise on his document "Access to the Open Countryside". [54350]

Mr. Meacher: The Government are considering carefully responses to the consultation paper, "Access to the Open Countryside in England and Wales". We shall announce our conclusions as soon as possible.

Local Government White Paper

25. Mr. Hope: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Transport and the Regions how many responses he has received to the local government White Paper; and if he will make a statement. [54351]

Ms Armstrong: The White Paper 'Modern Local Government: In Touch with the People' was born out of a wide-ranging consultation exercise—centred on 6 papers, which prompted some 2,500 responses. As a statement of our firm plans, the White Paper does not invite specific responses but has been widely welcomed, by the Local Government Association amongst others, as an agenda for radical reform bringing councils closer to the people.

Wind Turbines

26. Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received on the siting of wind turbines in the countryside. [54352]

Mr. Raynsford: The Department receives a small number of letters each month about the planning policy guidance on wind turbines contained in Planning Policy Guidance note 22, "Renewable Energy". Any representations on specific projects would be referred to the appropriate Government Office for the Region and the information is not held centrally.

East-west Rail Link

32. Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what discussion his Department has had with the local consortium promoting an east-west rail link. [54362]

Mr. Prescott: The Government welcome any proposals that might contribute towards a better, more integrated transport system. Our policy of encouraging use of rail is already bearing fruit in terms of a 7 per cent. increase in passenger rail travel and a 5 per cent. increase in freight tonne kilometres last financial year. But it is important that a large, expensive proposal such as this is supported by a clear business case. My hon. Friend the Minister for Transport in London met representatives of the East-West Rail Consortium and Railtrack in February, to be briefed on their proposals. Since then, officials from my Department and OPRAF, have had several meetings with representatives of the Consortium, and discussions on the detailed business case for the project are continuing.

Cycling

33. Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what financial help his Department makes available to local authorities to encourage the use of cycles. [54363]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My Department works closely with local authorities in this field. In addition to co-operating with them on the development of new approaches to providing for cycling, we allocate substantial funding for cycling infrastructure improvements. £85 million were allocated to transport packages in 1998–99. Authorities are free to use on cycling as much of their package allocation as they choose. Next year we hope to be able to increase support for packages and to restore funding for minor works outside the areas covered by transport packages, thereby making available additional resources for cycling.

National Air Traffic Services

34. Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the future of the NATS pension scheme. [54364]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The detailed arrangements for future NATS pension arrangements are being considered urgently, as they form an important part of the development of a Public Private Partnership for the business. The Secretary of State hopes to make a statement in due course.

Ms Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to announce his proposals for a public/private partnership for National Air Traffic Services Ltd; and if he will make a statement. [55988]

Dr. Reid: I have today published a consultation paper on the Government's preferred option for a public/private partnership (PPP) for National Air Traffic Services Ltd.

The safe and efficient provision of air traffic control services is rightly a matter of great public interest and, since the PPP was announced, a debate has begun on key issues such as safety, the national interest and public accountability. The Government now want to launch a structured, full and open consultation on these issues. The consultation document which I am publishing today therefore sets out a wide range of matters on which we are looking for views. Safety remains our top priority and we believe that the proposed PPP offers the opportunity to establish a structure which will strengthen safety, satisfy the public interest and the needs of aviation users while providing for the sound future of National Air Traffic Services Ltd and its employees.

I hope that all those with an interest in this subject, whatever their views on the Government's preferred option, will take the opportunity to respond to the consultation document.

Birmingham Northern Relief Road

35. Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on progress on the Birmingham Northern Relief Road. [54365]

Dr. Reid: I am very pleased with today's High Court judgment which clears the way for implementation of the Orders for construction that were made in February. It vindicates the Government's position, showing that they acted with probity and integrity.

This new road is vital as a much needed alternative to the very heavily congested M6 and as a strategic national route.

The process of getting this road authorised under the statutory provisions has taken over 5 years. The inquiry itself took over 15 months. It is time for us to get on with the job and start construction of this much needed scheme.

Railfreight

36. Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many miles of railway track are presently in use for freight purposes only. [54366]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I am advised by Railtrack that there are currently 1,632 kilometres of freight-only track in use.

Rainworth Bypass

37. Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects construction of the Rainworth bypass, Nottinghamshire, to commence. [54367]

Dr. Reid: The Orders for the proposed bypass have yet to complete their statutory procedures. Should they be confirmed, the start of works date will be a matter for Nottinghamshire County Council.

A31

38. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what factors led his Department to detrunk the A31-A35 trunk road in Dorset. [54368]

Dr. Reid: Factors considered in defining the core trunk road network were set out in the White Paper A New Deal for Transport: Better for Everyone. The proposed detrunking of non-core routes is subject to consultation with local highway authorities.

Kingskerswell Bypass

39. Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement about the funding of the Kingskerswell bypass. [54369]

Dr. Reid: Devon County Council and Torbay Borough Council are considering the feasibility of taking forward the Kingskerswell Bypass as a local road scheme with private finance.

If a PFI proposal comes forward seeking financial support, my Department will assess the project under established arrangements for considering such proposals from local authorities.

Road Pricing

40. Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on his plans for road pricing. [54370]

Dr. Reid: The Transport White Paper stated the Government's intention to introduce legislation to enable local authorities to introduce road user charges in their area to help meet their transport and other objectives. We will consult on the details shortly.

45. Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how he proposes to implement his proposals on road user pricing schemes. [54375]

Dr. Reid: We shall issue a consultation paper shortly to invite views on the detail of how schemes will be implemented and operated. Thereafter, we will work with interested local authorities to introduce pilot schemes, once the necessary enabling legislation is in place.

Transport White Paper

41. Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he last met representatives from motoring organisations to discuss the integrated transport White Paper. [54371]

Ms Glenda Jackson: DETR Ministers have had frequent contact with representatives from AA and RAC during the integrated transport consultation exercise and in the lead up to the publication of the Transport White Paper. The Deputy Prime Minister last met John Dawson, the Group Public Affairs Director of the Automobile Association, on 12 May 1998.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions which organisations and individuals outside Government he met to talk about transport policy and the Transport White Paper during the three months before publication of the White Paper; and how many of these meetings were attended by employees of professional lobby consultants. [54131]

Mr. Prescott: In the three months prior to the publication of the Transport White Paper, I met with representatives of the Passenger Transport Executives, rail, bus, road and shipping interests as well as users and Non-Governmental Organisations. In addition, I had several meetings with the specially constituted White Paper Advisory Panel which I had set up to assist with the fundamental review of transport policy. The discussions and the written representations we received played an important role in informing the development of our integrated transport policy.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

42. Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is his estimate of the cost per projected passenger journey of the channel tunnel rail link. [54372]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My Department has estimated that, in overall terms, taking account of travel and regeneration benefits, the new Channel Tunnel Rail Link deal provides good value for the taxpayer.

School Transport

43. Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what progress is being made in encouraging children to walk to school. [54373]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Guidance for schools and local authorities on greener travel to school, including walking, is in preparation and we expect that the forthcoming national strategy on walking will promote walking to school. We will shortly establish the School Travel Advisory Group to oversee further work.

46. Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what recent representations he has received on the provisions in the White Paper on Integrated Transport relating to school transport. [54376]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has received over 100 letters from members of the public on the White Paper provisions for school transport. We fully understand people's concerns. Our aim is to encourage realistic alternatives to the car for the journey to school while improving the safety and quality of life for children and for everyone.

Stations (Disabled Access)

47. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will estimate the percentage of railway stations which have adequate disabled access. [54377]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Railtrack are currently conducting a survey of all stations which will include a review of access arrangements.

Access requirements cover many different facilities including toilets, visual and audible information and the use of colour contrast and tactile platform edging. There are no comprehensive statistics available currently covering all these features but Railtrack estimate that some 40 per cent. of stations can currently be classified as having unassisted wheelchair access.

Railtrack will be identifying the priorities and timescales for providing adequate access at all stations. Access to stations will also be covered by Part III of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 the provisions of which will start to come into force in October next year.

Kyoto Targets

48. Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to ensure that the transport sector contributes to achieving the Kyoto targets. [54378]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We are shortly to produce a consultation paper, seeking views on policy options to meet our climate change commitments. Our aim is to develop a climate change programme where all sectors, including transport, play a balanced part.

Moreover, we are already committed to a number of measures that should reduce greenhouse gas emissions from the transport sector. These include the Chancellor's announcement that fuel duty will rise by 6 per cent. a year in real terms, a new graduated system of vehicle excise duty to encourage more fuel efficient cars, setting up the Cleaner Vehicles Task Force, and supporting the European Commission's strategy for reducing CO_2 emissions from new cars. The measures contained in the Transport White Paper will also play an important role by delivering a properly integrated transport system for the UK and reducing dependence on the car.

Public Transport

49. Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what specific measures he intends to introduce to encourage people to travel by public transport. [54379]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Our recently published White Paper on the future of transport sets a framework for truly integrated public transport systems. Our programme of carefully targeted, proper funding, better interchange facilities, reliable services, simplified fares and increased access for all, aims to win more passengers onto public transport.

Methyl Bromide

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his letter of 4 September to the hon. Member for Linlithgow (EE/PSO/14592/98), what consultation he has had on the effects of methyl bromide on the ozone layer, with whom, and with what results. [55540]

Mr. Meale: On 8 September 1998 we began a consultation on the European Commission's proposed new Regulation on ozone depleting substances, which includes a proposal to phase out the use of methyl bromide by 2001. The consultation ended on 1 October 1998. In total, 307 parties were consulted, including the National Farmers Union, the British Pest Control Association, flour millers and importers of commodities, all of whom expressed a particular interest in the methyl bromide proposals. To date, sixty-five responses have been received, and these are currently being analysed. Some concern has been expressed about the implications of the proposed phase out of methyl bromide and these will be taken into account as we formulate the UK's negotiating position on the new Regulation.

Traffic Growth

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to the recent White Paper on integrated transport and roads, if it is the policy of the Government to (a) reduce road congestion and (b) to curb traffic growth; and if he will revise his Department's traffic growth forecasts. [55287]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 19 October 1998]: As we made clear in the White Paper, in order to tackle the congestion and pollution that are caused by road traffic we need to reduce the rate of road traffic growth. We also want to see an absolute reduction in traffic in those places and streets where the greatest environmental damage is done. The New Deal for Transport: Better for Everyone sets out how we plan to achieve these objectives through integrated transport policies acting at the national, regional and local level.

The White Paper explains that, with assistance from the Commission for Integrated Transport, we will be revising the 1997 National Road Traffic forecasts to reflect the new direction for transport provided by the New Deal.

Roads (Wiltshire)

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the authors of representations he has received since his announcement in July concerning his plans for (a) the A303(T) and (b) the A36(T) in Wiltshire, indicating whether the representations are for or against his proposals. [54914]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 19 October 1998]: Since July, we have received two representations in support of the A303 Chicklade Bottom to Mere scheme and five representations against the A303 Stonehenge cut-and-cover tunnel scheme; one other asked for technical details about the proposed tunnel construction alongside Stonehenge. There have been no representations about the A36(T). It would not be appropriate to publish the names of the authors of these representations as they have not given their permission for that.

A14

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what are his latest estimates of the degree of over-capacity usage of the A14 between Huntingdon and Cambridge. [55429]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 19 October 1998]: A number of factors govern the absolute capacity of a road, including the spread of peak hour usage throughout the day and the proportion of the traffic flow that is composed of heavy commercial vehicles. A measure of capacity has been produced which is called the congestion reference flow (CRF). The CRF of a section of road is estimated of the 24 hour Annual Average Daily Traffic flow (AADT = total annual traffic divided by 365) at which the carriageway is likely to be "congested" in the peak periods of the average day. The CRF for the dual-two lane section of the A14 between Huntingdon and Cambridge has been calculated as 78,371 vehicles per day (vpd). Current average traffic flows on this section of road are up to 68,000 vpd (87% of the CRF). Traffic flows on this section of A14 are high, therefore, but not beyond its capacity in terms of the road's calculated CRF.

Catalytic Converters

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what studies his Department has initiated into the consequences of catalytic converters operating at below optimal temperatures; and if he will make a statement. [55571]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Department's research programme has produced Transport Research Laboratory Report 270 "Environment Traffic Management: A Review of factors affecting cold start emissions". The objectives of the review were to investigate the factors affecting the definition and measurement of cold start emissions and to suggest how emissions models might better account for them. With a view to helping local authorities develop plans for local Air Quality Management Areas, where these are required under the Environment Act 1995, the Department also plans to let a two year research contract, starting early next year, aimed at assessing the effects of cold starts on parking control strategies.

Road Congestion

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to reduce road congestion; and if he will make a statement. [54355]

Mr. Prescott: The policies I announced in my recent Integrated Transport White Paper will play a major part in reducing congestion. They will encourage the transfer of freight from road to rail, reduce the need for people to travel, offer them better transport choices and encourage more people to undertake short journeys by cycle or on foot.

Basel Convention

Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the application of the amendment to the Basel Convention as laid down in Decision IV/9 of the Parties to the Convention. [55733]

Mr. Meale: Command Paper 4061 which sets out details of the Decision IV/9 amendment has been laid before the House.

This amendment helps to clarify which wastes will be subject to the ban on the exports of hazardous wastes to developing countries. Rules to implement the amendment within the EC have been agreed by Member States.

The amendment will enter into force for all Parties to the Basel Convention on 6 November 1998, except for those who notify the Depositary, in writing by 6 November 1998, that they are unable to accept it.

The Basel amendment represents yet another milestone in securing an environmentally sound regime for the movement of hazardous wastes. I am pleased to announce therefore that the Decision IV/9 Basel Amendment will enter into force for the UK on 6 November 1998.

Flooding (Midlands)

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will provide financial assistance to Warwickshire County Council, Stratford on Avon District Council, Worcester City Council and Northampton Borough Council under the Bellwin scheme for costs incurred following the severe flooding on the weekend of 9 to 12 April. [55736]

Ms Armstrong: Warwickshire, Worcester, Northampton and Stratford upon Avon councils are all to be given cash under the Bellwin scheme after successful applications to my Department.

I am satisfied financial assistance under the Bellwin scheme is justified in these cases given the exceptional nature of the floods and the damage they caused. Schemes will, therefore, be established under section 155 of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989. Grant will be paid to each authority to cover 85 per cent. of eligible costs above a threshold which have been incurred by the authority in dealing with the flooding.

Director of Transport Security

Mr. Pond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he plans to publish the 1997–98 Annual Report of the Director of Transport Security. [55738]

Mr. Prescott: Copies of the report have been placed in the Library of the House.

Town and City Policies

Shona McIsaac: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how the Government intend to take forward their policies for towns and cities. [55739]

Mr. Prescott: The Environment Transport and Regional Affairs Select Committee Report on Housing (Tenth Report Session 1997–98) recommended that there should be an Urban White Paper.

I announced today that I intend to produce a White Paper on Urban Policy next year, which will be the first such paper in 20 years. This will describe the Government's policies to improve the quality of life in our towns and cities. We will look at the combined effect of a wide range of issues, with the aim of enabling communities in our towns and cities to prosper, and to tackle problems such as social exclusion. We will consider policies on, for example, housing, competitiveness, delivery of public services, regional development, planning, transport, community involvement and sustainable development. We will also link in with work being taken forward by other Departments on issues such as education, training and crime reduction—all of which are essential to enabling communities to achieve their full potential.

The Government's proposals to reform local government and to establish Regional Development Agencies will create the framework to implement our policies and achieve prosperity for our communities.

The Urban Task Force, led by Lord Rodgers, and the work undertaken by the Coalfields task force has already started the debate on urban issues. I now intend to broaden it further and engage more groups and organisations.

Of course, vibrant and attractive towns and cities complement thriving rural areas. We will separately be paying special attention to the specific issues affecting rural areas and will be making an announcement on this shortly.

Heavy Goods Vehicles

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the outcome of the recent consultation on a scheme for the impounding of illegally operated heavy goods vehicles. [55774]

Dr. Reid: The consultation period ended on 29 May. There were 36 responses. These showed overwhelming support for our proposals. We are now working up a comprehensive detention scheme with the aim of bringing it into effect at the earliest available opportunity. This will require primary legislation.

Transport Council

Mr. Alan Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Transport Council held in Luxembourg on 1 October. [55926]

Dr. Reid: The Transport Council met in Luxembourg on 1 October. I represented the United Kingdom.

The Council agreed common positions on two legislative proposals, and held useful discussions on some other important areas of transport policy.

In land transport, the Council reached a common position on a directive which will facilitate the free movement of transportable pressure equipment within the Community. The text which was agreed met a UK concern that the industry itself should be able to continue to carry out inspections of this type of equipment, under the necessary supervision.

The Commission reported on the recent Swiss referendum on lorry charges. The referendum approved a law allowing the Swiss Government to impose Alpine transit charges, which would be higher than those foreseen by the draft EC/Switzerland transport agreement. The Commission now hoped that agreement could be reached on the EC/Switzerland agreement at the next Transport Council.

There was also discussion of the directive on charging of heavy goods vehicles for the use of certain infrastructures (the Eurovignette).

The Council debated the directive amending Community rules on the promotion of combined transport. This would require reduced taxes for lorries engaged in combined transport and would permit lorries above current Community weight limits to carry out such operations. There was discussion of the need for careful definition of combined transport, if the proposal were to lead to a real incentive to reduce road mileage. The proposal will continue to be examined with a view to reaching agreement at the next Transport Council.

The Commission reported that, following the break-down of negotiations between employers and employees on working time in road transport, it would propose the extension of the working time Directive to non-mobile workers. The latter would cover own-account operators and self-employed drivers.

The Commission presented its new proposals on rail access and charging rules. Member States generally welcomed the proposals, which aim to contribute to the revitalisation of the Community's railways by clarifying the regulatory framework for the provision of rail services. The Presidency concluded that the Council would look again at these proposals at its next meeting.

In air transport, the Council reached a common position on a regulation to restrict the use of older aircraft which have been modified ("hush-kitted") to meet the latest noise regulations, but which produce more noise than newer aircraft. The United Kingdom expressed its disappointment at the suspension of Gibraltar from the scope of this regulation, especially as Gibraltar is covered by existing EU legislation on aircraft noise. The UK reluctantly agreed to suspension on this occasion, to allow progress on this measure, which is important to all Member States.

The Council noted progress on a Commission proposal to amend the rules on compensation for passengers denied boarding on overbooked flights. The UK made it clear that it supports this proposal and that it would oppose the inclusion of clauses suspending application to Gibraltar. The Presidency said that it would attempt to secure agreement on the regulation at the next Transport Council and urged rapid progress.

Following further discussion of civil aviation relations between the EC and the US, the Presidency said that the proposal to give the Commission a mandate to negotiate market access would continue to be examined, in the hope of reaching a conclusion at the next Council.

The Italian Minister requested a discussion of the Commission's Decision that the decree requiring movement of airlines' operations to the new Milan Malpensa airport was discriminatory and illegal. Minister agreed that the matter should be resolved bilaterally between the Commission and Italy.

Road Traffic Reduction Act 1997

Mrs. Gilroy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to implement the Road Traffic Reduction Act 1997; and if he will make a statement. [55928]

Dr. Reid: It is clear that the setting of road traffic reduction targets will be an integral part of the process of drawing up local transport strategies. Local transport plans are a centrepiece of the Government's transport proposals and it is vital that we get implementation right. We have listened to the Local Government Association and local authority concerns about the difficulty of producing robust local transport plans by July 1999. We will therefore invite local highway authorities to produce 'provisional' 5-year plans by July 1999, covering the period 2000/01–2004/05. These would be the basis for allocating resources for 2000/01 only. Authorities would then roll their plans on by one year and submit 'full' plans for 2001/02–2005/06 in July 2000, when resources would be allocated across the plan period.

Statutory reports produced under the provisions of the Road Traffic Reduction Act 1997 will therefore be submitted in July 2000, as part of the first round of full local transport plans. We will expect authorities to submit non-statutory 'interim' road traffic reduction reports in July 1999, as part of the provisional plans.

The London Boroughs are not covered by the White Paper requirement to produce local transport plans, but will be separately required to produce local implementation plans which are in keeping with the Mayor's integrated transport strategy for London. We are taking this forward separately.

The Road Traffic Reduction (National Targets) Act 1998 requires the Government to consider the setting of national targets. We will therefore require a greater degree of standardisation from local authorities in the measurement of existing traffic levels and forecasts—in order that we can assess the national implications. We believe this can be done by building on the data already collected for national surveys. It will take some time to get an assessment framework in place. This is something we would like to take forward jointly with local authorities under the auspices of the Transport Statistics Liaison Group. The existing draft guidance on the Road Traffic Reduction Act 1997 will be revised in the light of this work. The Government have also undertaken that they will produce a first report to Parliament on the issue of national traffic targets by the end of 1999 (which will also need to reflect the views of the Commission for Integrated Transport, when appointed). To achieve this, they will need to draw on existing sources of information together with any useful inputs from local authorities from their 1999 plans, accepting that at this stage the material will not be in a standardised format.

National Air Quality Strategy

Mr. Leslie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when the current review of the National Air Quality Strategy will be completed. [56010]

Mr. Meacher: My hon. Friend the then Under-Secretary of State announced on 23 June 1998, Official Report, columns 431–32, that the review of the National Air Quality Strategy, originally planned for 1999, would now be completed by the end of this year, to look at the prospects of delivering cleaner air more quickly. I can confirm that we are on course to meet this and we aim to publish our proposals to amend the Strategy for consultation in the New Year.

Environment Council

Mr. Singh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Environment Council on 6 October. [56011]

Mr. Meacher: I represented the United Kingdom at the Environment Council which took place in Luxembourg on 6 October.

The Council agreed Conclusions which prepare the Community's negotiating position for the Fourth Conference of the Parties to the UN Framework on Convention on Climate Change taking place in Buenos Aires on 2–13 November. Through Conclusions, the Council also endorsed the commitment by the European Car Makers Association (ACEA) to reduce carbon dioxide emissions from new cars. This agreement between the Commission and ACEA will cut carbon dioxide emissions from new cars by 25 per cent. by 2008 and play a considerable role in reducing greenhouse gas emission in the European Union. Ministers also discussed for the first time two proposals which complement that agreement. These will require the monitoring of carbon dioxide emissions from new cars and similarly provide a scheme for labelling the fuel economy performance.

First ministerial discussions were held on a number of other important dossiers. I gave general support to the directive concerning end of life vehicles whilst stressing that Member States should be given reasonable flexibility in implementation. A brief initial discussion was also held on the Commission proposal for a new Regulation introducing stricter controls on substances that deplete the ozone layer, which the UK supports in broad terms. The Council also reached agreement on a Resolution on Environment and Employment.

The Council noted the progress of discussions in a working group on directive proposals to reduce emissions from heavy goods vehicles and to revise the proposal controlling the deliberate release of genetically modified organisms. These will return to the Council in December. Informal discussions were held over lunch on the environmental implications of Community enlargement and on the integration of environmental objectives into other policy areas.

East Midlands National Forest

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will report on the National Forest Company's progress in creating the National Forest in the East Midlands. [55734]

Mr. Meale: I have arranged for copies of the National Forest Company's Annual Report and Accounts for 1997–98 to be placed in the House Libraries.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Equal Rights

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if equality is one of the rights issues which will be subject to continuing consultations between the Irish Government and Her Majesty's Government under the proposed British Irish Governmental Council; [55524]

(2) if the proposed Northern Ireland Assembly and the United Kingdom Parliament will have concurrent responsibility for legislating on equality issues following the enactment of the Northern Ireland Bill; [55526]

(3) if equality is (a) transferred, (b) reserved or (c) excepted matter under the proposals contained in the Northern Ireland Bill; [55523]

(4) in what areas concerning equality the proposed Northern Ireland Assembly will be able to legislate. [55525]

Mr. McFall [holding answer 19 October 1998]: Current legislation on fair employment, sex discrimination, race relations and disability discrimination in Northern Ireland is a transferred matter within the responsibility of Northern Ireland Departments and will remain so in accordance with paragraph 3 of the Strand One section of the Good Friday Agreement. The Government intend that the provisions in the Northern Ireland Bill establishing a unified Quality Commission and a statutory obligation to have due regard to the promotion of equality of opportunity will be reserved matters on which the Assembly will be able to legislate only with the consent of the Secretary of State, and subject to Parliamentary control. The Government propose to bring forward amendments in the course of the Parliamentary passage of the Bill to this effect. Equality issues may be discussed in the British Irish Intergovernmental Conference insofar as they remain within the responsibility of Her Majesty's Government, but it is preferable that developments in policy on equality should arise from agreement between elected representatives in Northern Ireland to the extent that this can be achieved.

Anti-terrorist Legislation

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what consultations she has held with (a) the RUC, (b) the police in Great Britain, (c) civil liberties organisations, (d) the Irish Government, (e) members of the Northern Ireland Affairs Committee, (f) other hon. Members and (g) the United States Government, concerning the new anti-terrorist legislation. [55350]

Mr. Ingram: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to him on 19 October 1998, Official Report, column 934, by my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary.

School Applications

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many new applications there were for places at (a) Comber High School, (b) Movilla High School, (c) Regent House Grammar School and (d) Saintfield High School in the academic year beginning September 1998; and how many were unsuccessful. [55355]

Mr. McFall: The information requested is set out in the table:

1998–99 school year

	Number of applications received	Number of applications refused
Comber High School	76	—
Movilla High School	193	13
Regent House School	293	67
Saintfield High School	121	56

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Detrunking Roads

44. Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received in response to his proposals for detrunking trunk roads. [54374]

Dr. Reid: We have received representations seeking clarification of the detrunking proposals, in particular resource transfers and timing. Concern has been expressed about detrunking certain routes, but we have also had some informal indications from local highway authorities of a willingness to take over routes proposed for detrunking. Officials have recently held constructive discussions with the Local Government Association about the proposals and there will be further consultations with the Association and individual local highway authorities.

Communication Masts

Jane Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to ensure that planning permission is required from a local authority to erect (a) a radio and (b) a mobile phone mast under 15 metres high. [55657]

Mr. Raynsford: The Town and Country Planning (General Permitted Development) Order 1995 grants a general planning permission for certain telecommunications masts providing that

- the mast is erected by a telecommunications code system operator licensed by the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry under the Telecommunications Act 1984;
- the mast does not exceed 15m in height;
- the mast is not erected in a National Park, Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty, conservation area, or the Broads; and
- the mast is not refused prior approval by the local planning authority within the period allowed under the Order. The authority must be given the opportunity to say whether they wish to approve, within 28 days, details of the mast's siting and appearance. The authority may refuse approval if they consider there to be a serious threat to amenity.

A full application for planning permission is normally required for any mast which does not meet these criteria. We have recently consulted on a proposal to make masts erected within a site of special scientific interest subject to a full planning application and are currently considering the responses received. Apart from this proposal, we have no plans to extend the current requirements for full applications for planning permission for telecommunications masts.

Country Landowners Association

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will request the Countryside Commission to make it a condition of future grant aid to the CLA in respect of access to the countryside that the new access land is posted on the CLA's website. [55412]

Mr. Meacher: Publicity for new access opportunities is an essential element in opening up the countryside for public enjoyment. The Countryside Commission recognises the importance of publicity—through a range of media—and I am asking them to take this into account when setting grant conditions. Access land identified through the Country Landowners Association (CLA) Access 2000 scheme is already being posted on to the CLA's website.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he has taken to verify independently the nature and extent of the new public access to the countryside offered by the CLA under its Access 2000 scheme. [55417]

Mr. Meacher: None. The register on the CLA's website contains many details of the access involved and the CLA is responsible for the accuracy. We would expect it to verify information before it is made public on a website.

House Repossessions

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions in how many cases where income support was paid on interest payments on mortgages houses were repossessed by the mortgage lender in the last year for which figures are available. [55662]

Mr. Raynsford: This information is not available.

Rail Freight

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals he has to promote piggy-back rail freight services in the West Midlands; and if he will make a statement. [55600]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Railtrack has for some time been considering an upgrade of the west coast main line to accommodate "piggyback" rail freight. The project would be likely to require substantial Government grant. Railtrack has not yet made an application.

Greater London Authority

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he has decided which of the seven locations currently being considered will provide accommodation for the Greater London Authority; and if he will make a statement. [56048]

Mr. Raynsford: Following a detailed assessment of the initial proposals for our seven short-listed buildings and sites we have selected two first-class options to study further. These are:

- London Bridge City, SE1—a new building to be constructed on the site between Tower Bridge and London Bridge on the South Bank of the River Thames; and
- Victoria House in Bloomsbury Square, WC1—a major refurbishment of an existing building first constructed in the 1920s.

There was keen competition among all the short-listed teams to produce high quality ideas for housing the Mayor and Assembly in London. The architects associated with the two chosen projects—Will Alsop of Alsop and Stormer for Victoria House and Sir Norman Foster of Foster Associates for London Bridge City—are leading British architects with international reputations for innovation and excellence. I am confident that, with the teams associated with these two options, we will be able to ensure that the proposed new Greater London Authority is housed in a landmark building worthy of its status and one of which Londoners can be proud.

I would like to thank all those Londoners who took the time to visit the exhibition at Oxo Tower Wharf where the ideas for the seven short-listed locations were on display. Nearly 1,000 people called in and the views expressed were carefully considered before coming to a decision. In fact, the two options I have chosen to take forward were the people's choice as well. Other factors such as finance, design, location and technical feasibility were also taken into account.

The next step will be to work with the teams from the two selected options and with our expert advisers to explore the ideas in greater detail and see how well they will meet the needs of the new Greater London Authority. We also want these buildings to contribute to their local area and intend to work closely with the local authorities to ensure that this happens. I expect to announce a final decision in the new year.

WALES

Drug and Alcohol Rehabilitation

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the drug and alcohol rehabilitation services in Gwynedd which are funded in (a) part and (b) whole by his Department. [55597]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: In the current financial year the Department is providing funding, under the Department's grant scheme for residential services providing care for drug and alcohol misusers, to Cyngor Alcohol Information Services (CAIS) towards the core costs of the Ty'n Rodyn residential unit at Lower Penrallt, Glanrafon Hill, Bangor, Gwynedd.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps his Department is taking to improve drug and alcohol rehabilitation services in Wales. [55599]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: One of the aims of the Welsh drug and alcohol strategy "Forward Together" is to improve the effectiveness of treatment and rehabilitation services for those who misuse. The Welsh Drug and Alcohol Unit (WDAU), which works to and is funded by the Department, provides technical advice and support to those in the field including drug and alcohol rehabilitation services in Wales.

As part of their contract the WDAU has produced a Directory of Service Providers in Wales to ensure that commissioners are aware of the range of services available within localities. Guidance has also been produced for health and social service commissioners on the purchasing of drug and alcohol treatment services. The Directory and the Guidance have been given a wide distribution in Wales.

Earlier this year the Department commissioned a review of the purchasing requirements for, and the provision of, residential and community services in Wales for people with drug and alcohol problems. The final report has recently been produced and the Department is considering how its grant scheme for residential services providing care for drug and alcohol misusers can best be utilised to support residential treatment and rehabilitation units.

Waiting Lists

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people in Wales had been on hospital waiting lists for over one year at the latest available date. [55619]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: At 31 August 1998, some 9,573 residents in Wales had been on hospital waiting lists for over 1 year for treatment as an in-patient or daycase.

Hill Farming

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent assessment he has made of the effect of current hill farming incomes on the rural Welsh economy. [55595]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: Welsh Office officials are currently preparing income forecasts for hill farming as part of the annual review of economic conditions in the hills and uplands. This is an exercise to which we attach great importance. An assessment of the impact of recent trends in farm income on rural employment will also be made.

Agriculture is estimated to contribute directly about 8 per cent. to total employment in the Less Favoured Areas (LFA). Agriculture also indirectly supports jobs in other industries; and published studies suggest that in the LFA every 10 full-time jobs in agriculture support approximately a further four jobs in related industries.

Homelessness

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps the Welsh Office has undertaken in the past year to reduce homelessness in Wales. [55594]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: We have made regulations giving local authorities powers to allocate permanent accommodation to homeless people; we have assisted various voluntary bodies concerned with preventing and alleviating homelessness and rough sleeping; we have seconded an officer from the voluntary sector to advise local authorities on measures to deal with rough sleeping.

Our other housing programmes are designed to increase the supply and quality of accommodation which will help reduce homelessness pressure.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Refreshment Prices

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Chairman of the Catering Committee by what formula, and to what extent, the notional costs of (a) services, (b) rents and (c) rates are reflected in the prices of restaurants, cafés, bars and banqueting suites in the House of Commons. [55613]

Mr. Dennis Turner [holding answer 19 October 1998]: The House of Commons votes do not presently allocate costs to individual Departments of the House, although the introduction of Resource Accounting and Budgeting in 1999 will lead to a greater degree of transparency of such costs in the future. Under the present arrangements, the Refreshment Department has a target to achieve an overall operating surplus of 5 per cent. on its trading account, but there is no direct linkage between the prices charged to customers using the Department's facilities and the costs (notional or actual) of common services, rents or rates.

I shall ensure that a copy of the published Refreshment Department Trading Account for 1997–98 is sent to my hon. Friend. He will wish to note that the Department made an operating surplus of £445,476 (10.6 per cent. of turnover). Consequently, a sum of £462.429 will be transferred from the Refreshment Department trading account to the House of Commons Administration Vote in the present financial year for ultimate return to HM Treasury.

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Millennium Compliance

Maria Eagle: To ask the President of the Council what progress has been made in ensuring millennium compliance in central Government's systems and equipment and in its suppliers. [54713]

Mrs. Beckett: The results of the last quarterly review, which I announced on 9 September 1998, showed that good progress is being made by Departments and agencies in tackling the year 2000 problem. Work on correcting priority, business-critical, systems is particularly well advanced. Over half of the returns reported that 50 per cent. or more of the correction work has been completed and in a fifth of cases this figure was as high as 90 per cent. Departments and agencies are also seeking assurances from suppliers that they will be able to continue to provide key products and services into the next century.

The individual returns from the last quarterly review are available in the Library of the House together with my statement, a copy of which I sent to all hon. Members on 9 September.

DEFENCE

Trainer Aircraft

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 3 July 1998, Official Report, column 310, what options his Department has to extend the contract for the Grob 115D aircraft at the end of the contract period. [50432]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Negotiations continue with the preferred bidder for the Royal Air Forces Light Aircraft Flying Task. The intention is to recompete the requirement at the end of the ten-year contract and there are consequently no plans to include options for extending the contract.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 3 July 1998, Official Report, column 310, what assessment he has made of the effective working life of the Grob 115D aircraft. [50433]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The Grob 115D is certified for 15,000 flying hours for the type of flying operations the RAF plans to undertake, subject to normal maintenance inspections. Based on these criteria, and assuming a constant usage rate, the RAF assesses the working life of the aircraft to be around 30 years.

Commercial Exploitation Levies

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 31 July 1998, Official Report, column 720, to the hon. Member for Cynon Valley (Ann Clwyd), for what products his Department received commercial exploitation levies in each of the last three years; and what were the values of the levies. [55643]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 19 October 1998]: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Chlorine

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what research has been carried out by the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment (Porton Down) to investigate whether short-term exposure to chlorine can cause long-term illnesses; when this research was carried out; and what were the results. [55331]

Mr. Doug Henderson: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 21 October 1998:

I have been asked to reply to your question about research into possible long term health effects from short term exposure to chlorine.

I informed you in my letter of 21 July, printed in the Official Report Col 469 dated 21 July, that DERA's Chemical and Biological Defence sector (CBD) had not carried out any research into possible long term effects of chlorine. This is still the case.

My earlier letter also explained that CBD is aware of the general toxicology and health effects of chlorine gas, as reported in the open literature, particularly in relation to exposure occurring through industrial accidents.

I hope this is helpful.

CBDE Technical Papers

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many series of technical papers have been produced by the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment (Porton Down) since 1990; and what are the titles of each series. [55319]

Mr. Spellar: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Mr. John Chisholm to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 21 October 1998:

I have been asked to reply to your question about the number and titles of series of technical papers produced by DERA's Chemical and Biological Defence sector (CBD) since 1990.

Since 1990 CBD has produced 8 series of internal reports, the titles of which are as follows:

Field Trial Reports
Field Trial Programmes
Operational Granby Reports
CBD Reports
Technical Papers
Technical Notes
Technical Memoranda
DERA Reports

I hope this is helpful.

Royal Tournament

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what compensation payments have been made as a result of injuries incurred by military personnel participating in the Royal Tournament in each of the last five years. [55695]

Mr. George Robertson: Only one compensation payment has been made by my Department to military personnel as a result of injuries sustained while participating in the Royal Tournament in the last five years.

TREASURY

Monetary Union

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which current powers of the Bank of England to make regulations, inspect or supervise, control credit limits and permit companies to operate as banks in the United Kingdom would, in the event of full adherence to monetary union, be within the authority of or subject to limits set by the European Central Bank. [55691]

Ms Hewitt: The responsibilities of central banks in Stage Three of economic and monetary union are described in Articles 107 and 108 of the Treaty and in the ESCB Statute (Protocol No. 3 to the Treaty). If the UK joined EMU, national legislation, including the statutes of the Bank of England, would have to be made compatible with the Treaty and the Statute.

In the UK, responsibility for the authorisation and supervision of banks was transferred from the Bank of England to the Financial Services Authority by the Bank of England Act 1998. The Treaty does not assign to the ECB a direct role in the prudential supervision of credit institutions which remains primarily the responsibility of individual Member States. Any extension of the ECB's role in this area would require the unanimous approval of all Member States under Article 105(6) of the Treaty.

Were the UK to join the single currency, UK banks' holdings of minimum reserves with the Bank of England would need to be compatible with the requirements imposed by the ECB under Article 19 of the ESCB Statute at that time.

European Community Budgets

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in respect of the Transfer of Appropriations No. 16/98 Non Compulsory Expenditure (SEC 1998) 1062 final concerning Section III (Commission Parts A and B), agreed by the Council of Finance Ministers, what are the sums transferred in sterling, the former purpose of those sums and the purposes to which those sums will now be devoted; at which meeting of the ECOFIN Council such transfers were agreed, and which Treasury Minister was present; and if the Government will request the President of the Council when conveying such approval in future to include the original purpose and new purpose to which sums are being devoted in all public documents related thereto. [55694]

Ms Hewitt: This transfers concerns 450,000 ecus (£300,040 at the rate of £1 = 1.4998 ecu which is set for UK VAT and Fourth Resource contributions to the 1998 European Community Budget). This sum is to be transferred from the reserve budget to the Translation Centre for the Bodies of the European Union. Further details will be found in an explanatory memorandum which is being submitted by HM Treasury to the Select Committee on European Legislation. As a rule, the Council adopts its position on transfer proposals at the first convenient Council meeting following consideration in the Council's Committee of Permanent Representatives. This may not necessarily be a meeting of ECOFIN. Generally speaking, the President of the Council, in conveying approval to a transfer, refers to the original and new purpose to which sums are being devoted.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer by what means transfers of appropriation from one purpose to another within the budget of the European Community are authorised and published; where the public may obtain information concerning such changes and the amounts involved; and if he will list those approved so far in the current financial year, together with details for each. [55692]

Ms Hewitt: The European Commission may make proposals to the budgetary authority (the Council of Ministers and the European Parliament) for the transfer of appropriations between chapters of each EC budget section. In the case of transfers relating to expenditure resulting from Treaties (compulsory expenditure), it is the Council, after consulting the European Parliament, which decides whether or not to approve the Commission's proposal. In the case of transfers relating to other expenditure (non-compulsory expenditure) the roles of the Council and the European Parliament are reversed. The full procedure is set out in Article 26 of the EC's Financial Regulation of 21 December 1977, a copy of which will be placed in the Commons Library. The following list details of transfers that have been proposed so far this year. All transfer proposals are subject to Parliamentary scrutiny, however, and further details may be found in the relevant explanatory memorandum or FCO cover note submitted on each transfer proposal to the Select Committee on European Legislation by the Treasury.

Members of the public may obtain information on transfers from the published reports of the Select Committee on the European Legislation or directly from the offices of the European Commission.

Euro

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if euro notes and coinage, irrespective of the issuing national central bank, will be legal tender in all member states of the European Union. [55680]

Ms Hewitt: In EMU, all euro bank notes issued by the European Central Bank (ECB) and the national central banks of participating member states will be legal tender in all member states which participate in EMU. Similarly, all euro coins issued by participating member states and complying with the denominations and technical specifications adopted by the Council in accordance with Article 105a(2) of the Treaty, will be legal tender in the participating member states.

Registration Records

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what steps he plans to take to improve access to registration records; [55666]

(2) what plans he has to reform the system of access to civil registration records; and if he will make a statement. [55667]

Ms Hewitt: The Registration Acts are quite specific as to the means of access to all the records of births, deaths and marriages. The Acts allow members of the public to search the indexes in order to identify the entries they are looking for and to obtain certified copies (certificates) on payment of the appropriate statutory fees. The Registrar General has no powers to make available or disclose registration information in any other way,

It is widely acknowledged that the present arrangements, whereby there is no right to browse through individual records and extract information, are unnecessarily restrictive. The Registrar General is reconsidering the proposals in the 1990 White Paper "Registration: proposals for change" (Cm 939) about access to registration records. He is preparing an options paper for the Government to consider. This should be ready by the end of the year.

Pre-Budget Report

Mr. Caplin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he proposes to publish the pre-Budget report. [56231]

Mr. Gordon Brown: On 3 November.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Coal

Mr. Brake: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the extent of blending of deep-mined and open-cast coal at power stations. [49261]

Mr. Battle: The mix of deep-mined and open-cast used in power stations is a commercial matter for each private sector generator.

The open-cast mining of coal itself is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions.

Oil and Gas Industry

Mr. Dafis: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will place in the Library copies of correspondence her Department has received in the last six months from the European Commission concerning the implementation of the Environmental Impact Assessment Directive as it affects the offshore oil and gas industry. [50633]

Mr. Battle: The correspondence referred to is regarded as confidential by both the Commission and the Department. It forms part of a negotiation over complex issues, and it may harm the chances of reaching a satisfactory outcome to the negotiations if the position of either party is made public.

Inward Investment

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list inward investments in the UK manufacturing sector over £1 million in each of the last three years, indicating the nation from which the investment came, the area of the United Kingdom in which it was made, and the grants made by the Government in respect of each investment; and if he will list those investments which have fallen short of the amount indicated to the Government by 30 September or as much of such information as is readily available to him. [55497]

Mrs. Roche: Comprehensive information on all the financial packages available to inward investors is not held centrally and to provide a detailed list would involve disproportionate costs. However, a list of internationally mobile inward investors in the manufacturing sector whose investment was greater than £1 million and who were offered regional selective assistance, or in Northern Ireland selective financial assistance, and where some payment of grant has been made, is as follows. There will, of course, have been many other inward investment projects in the manufacturing sector which did not receive regional selective assistance.

Projects may be revised for a variety of reasons and the amount of grant, which is paid in stages against progress on capital investment and jobs, may be varied accordingly. The majority of projects receiving offers over the last three years are still in progress. Details of any changes are commercially confidential unless they involve public announcements of complete closure.

Euro

Mr. Paul Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action the Government are taking to help companies to redenominate share capital to prepare for the euro. [55989]

Mr. Mandelson: I am very keen to play a full part in helping UK business prepare for the euro. The DTI's consultation "The Euro: Redenomination of Share Capital" showed that companies are starting to consider whether to redenominate their share capital as the euro becomes widely-used in Europe. Existing Companies Act 1985 procedures for the reorganisation of share capital are not specifically designed for redenomination of shares, and can place an unnecessary burden on companies in terms of cost, and the requirement for formal court approval to any reduction in share capital.

I propose to seek amendments to the Companies Act 1985 to provide a specific mechanism for companies to use in redenominating their share capital. The new mechanism would permit companies to resolve that references in any document to share capital denominated in one currency would be to the equivalent amount in euro (or another currency). A resolution of each class of shareholders would be required (although a resolution of the board would suffice where the company was redenominating into euro during any transitional period to membership of the single currency).

The new mechanism would also permit companies to adjust the resulting nominal or par values of the shares to a more convenient figure in euro (or other currency), subject to shareholder approval and without the need for court approval. There would be no requirement for companies to issue new share certificates following redenomination.

The second part of my proposal relates to the requirement in section 118 of the Companies Act 1985 that public companies should have a minimum amount of authorised and issued share capital of £50,000. Currently the Act requires this amount to be denominated in sterling, although companies can and do issue share capital in other currencies, over and above the minimum amount. Companies have told this Department that they favour having the flexibility to denominate the whole of their share capital—including the minimum amount—in a foreign currency; and I propose to seek an amendment to the Companies Act 1985 to allow them to do so.

In preparing the new legislation the DTI will issue a further consultation document in the new year with the detailed proposals for change.

Angela Eagle: Following advice from the Meteorological Office, the annual review of the Cold Weather Payments scheme has now been completed. Amending regulations were laid on 9 October 1998 and will come into force in time for the beginning of the winter period.

Two of the weather stations used in the scheme last winter have been replaced. The weather station located at Gatwick Airport has now closed and will be replaced by a new one located at Redhill. Waterstein Head, which was introduced into the scheme last winter to represent most of the postcodes on the Isle of Skye, will be replaced by a newly available station located at Lusa which is considered to be more representative. In addition, a number of minor changes have been made to the scheme as a result of postcode changes made by Royal Mail.

Cold Weather Payments are separate from, and paid in addition to, Winter Fuel Payments which are only paid to pensioners.

I have written to each of the hon. Members whose constituencies are affected by the changes.

Prior Options Study

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the outcome of the prior options study on the superannuating functions in Northern Ireland departments. [56147]

Mr. Paul Murphy: After consideration of the options for the future delivery of the superannuation functions of Departments of Finance and Personnel, Health and Social Services and Education, I have concluded that, in this case, the Government's aim to achieve best value in public services would be achieved most cost effectively by the application of the management disciplines associated with agencies to the current arrangements, allied to adherence to rigorous targets and benchmarking against best practice in other public and private sector organisations. This solution will contribute to any additional arrangements which the New Northern Ireland Assembly might wish to introduce.

Government Purchasing Agency

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what performance targets were set for the Government Purchasing Agency in 1997–98; what further plans have been prepared by the Agency; and what arrangements have been made for publication for this year's plans. [56148]

Mr. Paul Murphy: As an Executive Agency within the Department of Finance and Personnel, the Government Purchasing Agency provides a professional procurement service to all six Northern Ireland Departments, the Northern Ireland Office and an increasing number of other public sector bodies.

The following key performance targets were set for the Agency in 1997–98:

To break even in the 1998–99 financial year by balancing Agency income and operating costs.

To achieve a 6% rate of return on capital employed.

To increase the number of Agency customers by 10%.

To increase the volume of customer business by 10%.

To achieve a 70% level of satisfaction in the 1997–98 Agency survey of customer organisations.

To achieve a 70% level of satisfaction in the 1997–98 Agency survey of suppliers.

To increase the ratio of outputs to inputs by 3% from the 1996–97 outturn.

The agency has published its Corporate Plan 1997–2000 and Annual Report and Accounts for 1997–98, copies of which have been placed in the Library of the House.

Presidential Visit

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list the sums expended by Her Majesty's Government in respect of (a) the RUC, (b) the Army, (c) the RAF and (d) the other public bodies in respect of the recent visit by President Clinton. [55496]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The sums expended in relation to the visit of President Clinton were (a) RUC £1,300,000, (b) Army and RAF approximately £78,000 and (c) approximately £195,000 by other public bodies.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Independent Schools (Nurseries)

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proportion of the independent schools registered with his Department which admit children of three years old and under have been visited by local social services departments following the invitation of the Registrar of Independent Schools in the last 12 months. [55627]

Ms Estelle Morris: One independent school admitting children of three years old and under has been visited by a local Social Services Department following the invitation of the Registrar of Independent Schools in the last 12 months.

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment which local social services departments have recommended action to the Registrar of Independent Schools in respect of nurseries attached to independent schools in their area. [55626]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Department does not maintain statistics in the form requested. All information received from Social Services Departments about nursery provision at independent schools is passed to Ofsted's HMI who inspect such schools. Where weaknesses are found in that nursery provision, the Department takes action with the school to ensure that they are remedied.

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many independent schools registered with his Department admit children younger than (a) three and (b) two years old. [55628]

Ms Estelle Morris: There are currently 2,261 independent schools registered in England. 921 admit children under three years old and 161 admit children under two years old.

Grammar School Ballots

Dr. George Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations his Department has received about the draft Education (Grammar School Ballots) Regulations; and when he will lay revised regulations before the House. [56031]

Ms Estelle Morris: A total of 322 responses were received in the Department about the draft regulations which were sent out for consultation on 3 June 1998. Copies of these have been placed in the Library. We have today laid revised draft regulations before the House.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Cyprus

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what consultations he has held with EU foreign Ministers over the ban imposed by the leader of the Turkish Cypriot community on meetings between members of both Cypriot communities on the island; [52383]

(2) what steps he is taking to encourage the leader of the Turkish Cypriot community to remove his ban on meetings between members of both Cypriot communities on the island; [52388]

(3) what consultations he has held with Turkey and Greece, as co-guarantor powers, over the ban imposed by the leader of the Turkish Cypriot community on meetings between members of both Cypriot communities on the island. [52389]

Ms Quin [pursuant to the reply, 27 July 1998, c. 45]: Due to an administrative error only the first paragraph of the answer was published. The full answer is as follows.

We have made clear to Mr. Denktash on numerous occasions that we greatly regret the current suspension on Turkish Cypriot participation in bicommunal activities on Cyprus, and have urged him to lift the current suspension. Bicommunal activities make a valuable contribution to building a foundation of understanding between the two Cypriot communities, which will be essential for the success of a political settlement on the island.

To encourage this process, the UK was involved in securing the inclusion of UN Security Council Resolution 1178 (1998) of 29 June of an expression of regret for the suspension of bicommunal activities by the Turkish Cypriot leadership and a call to both sides, in particular the Turkish Cypriot side, to facilitate arrangements within which bicommunal contacts can take place uninterrupted and without formalities.

Our interest in the promotion of bicommunal contacts includes those held outside Cyprus. Sir David Hannay met Greek Cypriot and Turkish Cypriot businessmen of the Brussels Group during his recent visit to Cyprus (20–22 July). He expressed our appreciation and encouragement of the Group's continuing activity.

My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary is in regular contact with his EU partners on all aspects of the EU's relation with Cyprus. 5 mecu of EU funds is available to Cyprus for bicommunal projects. A further 12 mecu is available for projects which would support progress towards a political settlement.

We use every suitable opportunity to impress upon Greece and Turkey the importance of encouraging Greek Cypriots and Turkish Cypriots to work towards a lasting political settlement through the good offices of the United Nations Secretary-General.

Defence Exports

Mr. Alan Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Government's policy on licensing arms exports to Slovenia. [56146]

Ms Quin: We, along with EU partners, have decided, taking into account the well-entrenched democracy in Slovenia and her stable political and economic structures, to remove Slovenia from the EU Common Position on arms exports to the former Yugoslavia. Applications for licenses to export military equipment will be considered on a case-by-case basis in accordance with the criteria announced by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary on 28 July 1997, Official Report, columns 26–29, and the EU Code of Conduct on Arms Exports.

Mr. Alan Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 28 July 1997, Official Report, columns 26–29, how the criteria for defence exports are used to assess applications for licence to export arms or goods subject to control for strategic reasons, for the purpose of demonstration, trial, testing or evaluation. [56232]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Licence applications to export goods and technology controlled under Part III of Schedule 1 to the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994 (the 'Military List'), or dual use goods when there are grounds for believing that the end-user of such goods will be the armed forces or internal security forces of the recipient country, are examined on a case-by-case basis against the published defence exports criteria and the EU Code of Conduct.

When the application is for demonstration, trial, testing or evaluation purposes, attention is paid to the level of control exercised by the exporter and whether the export will be temporary in arriving at a judgment as to whether the equipment might be used for internal repression, international aggression, diverted to an undesirable end-user or otherwise contravene the criteria.

If a decision is taken to issue such a licence, this in no way fetters our discretion in considering future applications for the export of equipment of the type demonstrated or evaluated. Such applications will be treated on their merits against the prevailing circumstances at that time.

In some cases, licensees will be informed that, on the information available at that time, a licence would not normally be granted for the permanent export of the same or a greater quantity of the goods concerned to the same end-user, irrespective of the purpose of the intended export.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Alcopops

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the new code of practice on the sale of alcopops; and what measures are in place to continue to monitor the industry's marketing of alcopops. [55184]

Mr. George Howarth: We are currently considering the progress made and expect to announce our conclusions in November.

Freedom of Information

Mr. Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress he has made with the proposed freedom of information legislation. [54734]

Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his plans for freedom of information legislation. [54719]

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress with the freedom of information legislation. [54714]

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to promote open Government. [54738]

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the Government's plans to introduce legislation on freedom of information. [54721]

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress he has made with his Department's open Government initiatives. [54739]

Mr. John Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he plans to bring forward legislation for a Freedom of Information Act. [54724]

Dr. George Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his Department's current timetable for implementation of freedom of information legislation. [54717]

Mr. Straw: The Government are committed to the introduction of a Freedom of Information Act as part of their programme for constitutional reform, which aims to modernise British politics and bring Government closer to the people.

We published our proposals for a Freedom of Information Act in a White Paper "Your Right to Know" in December 1997. We made a commitment in that White Paper to publish a draft Bill for consultation. Work is well in hand on this and it will be published early in the new year.

Following consultation on the draft Bill and pre-legislative scrutiny by the Select Committee on Public Administration, I intend to introduce the Bill to Parliament as soon as the legislative programme allows.

Mr. Healey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent representations he has received on plans to introduce a Bill to establish freedom of information. [54736]

Mr. Straw: In the period 1 August-9 October, I received 281 representations about the Government's plans for a Freedom of Information Bill. These were generally supportive of our plans, but the majority sought further information about the timetable for the Bill. I have also met my hon. Friend the Member for Cardiff, West (Mr. Morgan) to discuss our plans and intend to discuss them further with other interested parties and individuals over the coming weeks.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on how the proposed freedom of information legislation will apply to the Scottish Parliament. [54727]

Mr. Straw: It will be for the Scottish Parliament to determine the approach of the Scottish Executive and other public bodies to openness and freedom of information within areas of devolved competence. Reserved matters would be subject to the proposed United Kingdom Freedom of Information Act.

Policy Co-ordination

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to make the procedures relating to inter-departmental communication on policy development more transparent. [54726]

Mr. Straw: I intend to introduce a Freedom of Information Act which will apply to information held by public authorities. Information on the policy development process will be covered by the Act but, as the White Paper "Your Right to Know" made clear, this information could be withheld if disclosure would cause harm to the decision-making and policy advice processes. The Act will also exclude certain information.

CABINET OFFICE

Information Technology

13. Mr. Todd: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what progress has been made in achieving the strategic direction of information technology in the Government's service. [54733]

Mr. Kilfoyle: Our developing Information Technology strategy is an important enabler for our Better Government programme.

The Government Secure Intranet (GSI) launched earlier in the year, is growing rapidly and enabling Government Departments to communicate electronically with each other.

Currently 12 Departments are connected and we intend that all major departments will be connected over the next year.

Ministerial Correspondence

14. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if he will take steps to ensure that all Ministers reply to letters from hon. Members within a specific time scale. [54735]

Mr. Kilfoyle: The Government attach the greatest importance to the effective handling of correspondence. Challenging targets are set for replying to letters from hon. Members and performance against target is continuously monitored. Departments have recently been reminded of the importance of replying promptly to letters from hon. Members and the Cabinet Office will issue guidance later this month reminding Departments of the correct procedures to be followed when handling ministerial correspondence.

Better Regulation Initiative

15. Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what proposals he has to extend the better regulation initiative. [54737]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: As part of the Better Regulation Initiative I am determined to extend good practice at all stages of regulatory work. In August we published new guidance to help Departments to apply the Better Regulation Task Force's principles of good regulation.

This means that no regulatory proposal which has an impact on businesses, charities and voluntary bodies should be considered by the Government without a thorough assessment of the risks, costs and benefits, a clear analysis of who will be affected and an explanation of why a non-regulatory approach would be insufficient. The Guide replaces the previous Administration's range of guidance on Deregulation, Compliance Cost Assessment and Risk Assessment with a single document.

The publication of the Guide also heralds the introduction of a more comprehensive system of regulatory reporting to meet the Government's manifesto commitment to monitor the regulatory activity. Every Department is required to publish an account (in the Departmental Report) of their regulatory activity with examples of how they have improved the quality and effectiveness of regulation through the application of the Task Force's principles.

European Directives

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what plans he has to co-ordinate Government policy relating to European directives. [54708]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: I refer the hon. Member to the oral answer I gave to the hon. Member for Mid-Worcestershire (Mr. Luff) earlier today, Official Report, column 1264.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Meat (Sulphonamides)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many slaughtered farm animals in each year since 1990 had sulphonamides present above the maximum permitted levels. [54665]

Mr. Rooker: The Veterinary Medicines Directorate is responsible for a large scale random sampling surveillance programme for residues of veterinary medicines in meat. Under the National Surveillance Scheme samples which reflect the supply profile of red meat to the consumer are taken at randomly selected slaughterhouses and on-farm.

The presence of sulphonamides in cattle, sheep and pigs is specifically monitored using a multi-residue method.

Directive 86/469/EEC, which until the end of 1997 prescribed the number of samples tested for each substance, required a greater proportion of pigs to be tested for sulphonamides because they are more often used in the treatment of pigs compared to cattle or sheep. The results are as follows:

Year	Cattle	Greater than MRL	Sheep	Greater than MRL	Pig	Greater than MRL	% pigs greater than MRL
1990	0	0	0	0	1,210	61	5.04
1991	0	0	0	0	1,207	46	3.81
1992	38	0	68	0	867	26	3.00
1993	103	0	98	0	1,193	19	1.59
1994	111	1	139	0	1,214	23	1.90
1995	109	0	126	0	1,210	16	1.32
1996	89	0	93	0	1,107	18	1.62
1997	77	1	80	0	1,135	17	1.50

In addition, the microbiological assay (FPT) which is used for the wider surveillance of antimicrobial compounds will identify the presence of sulphonamides in cattle, sheep and pigs where concentrations are well in excess of the permitted levels. The results from this survey are:

BSE

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are his projections for BSE cases in (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Scotland and (d) Northern Ireland for (i) 1998, (ii) 1999, (iii) 2000, (iv) 2001, (v) 2002 and (vi) 2003. [55494]

Mr. Rooker: Predictions of the number of BSE cases in Great Britain and Northern Ireland for 1998, 1999 and 2000 are set out. They are derived from the Veterinary Laboratories Agency's computer model of the epidemic together with additional data provided by the Department of Agriculture for Northern Ireland. The model predicts that the epidemic will continue to decline, a finding that is in agreement with published and unpublished findings of Professor Anderson's group at the Wellcome Trust Centre for the Epidemiology of Infectious Disease, University of Oxford.

Year	Great Britain	Northern Ireland
1998	2,685–2,891	20
1999	1,223–1,741	12
2000	451–784	6

Because the computer model uses data for Great Britain as a whole, it cannot provide separate predictions for England, Scotland and Wales. Supplementary estimates have therefore been made based on the proportional distribution of BSE cases in the three countries in 1997. These are less precise than the national predictions because they do not take into account movements of cattle from one part of Great Britain to another or different rates of decline in the number of BSE cases from region to region.

Year	England	Scotland	Wales
1998	2,402–2,586	84–91	199–204
1999	1,094–1,557	38–55	91–129
2000	403–701	14–25	33–58

It is not possible to provide estimates with any precision for the years 2001, 2002 and 2003 because by this time there will be random, unpredictable effects, particularly arising from cases occurring with long incubation periods.

The VLA predictions represent 95 per cent. confidence intervals around a central estimate. It is inevitable that future predictions contain elements of uncertainty particularly when historical exposure levels to the BSE agent are not known. Nevertheless, based on information currently available, it is expected that the observed number of confirmed BSE cases for 1998 will prove to be close to the upper end of the predicted range provided above.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list for (a) each EU country (b) England, (c) Wales, (d) Scotland and (e) Northern Ireland the number of BSE cases recorded in each of the last three years for which figures are readily available and the figures for this year to the latest available date, indicating for each of the United Kingdom countries the figures for each month of the current year to 30 September. [55495]

Mr. Rooker: Figures for confirmed BSE cases in other EU countries for 1995, 1996, 1997 and to the end of September 1998, supplied to us by the Commission, are given in the following table:

EU country	1995	1996	1997	[1]1998

Ms Glenda Jackson: We will shortly be consulting regional planning conferences on the timing for all the studies proposed in A New Deal for Trunk Roads in England. However, we expect to agree an early start date for this study.

The study will consider the scope for modal shift to address environmental and congestion problems on the M6. The detailed terms of reference for the study will be drawn up in consultation with local authorities and other interests.

Landfill Tax

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what exemptions of specific materials are (a) in place and (b) being considered for the landfill tax. [55665]

Mr. Meale: There are currently exemptions from Landfill Tax for: (a) material dredged from harbours and inland waterways; (b) mining and quarrying waste; (c) waste arising from the reclamation of contaminated land; and (d) for disposal of pets in pet cemeteries. As announced in the last budget, there will be an exemption for the restoration of landfill sites and the backfilling of quarries. DETR and Customs have been consulting the landfill and quarrying industries in developing this new exemption. Full details will be announced in due course.

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations his Department has received from contractors and trade associations about exemptions and rebates from landfill tax, with particular reference to top soil and inert natural materials. [55668]

Mr. Meale: DETR and Customs have been consulting the landfill and quarrying industries in developing the exemption from Landfill Tax for the restoration of landfill sites and the backfilling of quarries. In the course of that consultation there have been many representations from trade associations and individual operators in both industries. The exemption will be restricted in inert materials. Full details will be announced in due course.

Sewage Treatment

Dr. Brand: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what timetable his Department plans to set for the installation of secondary treatment works at the Southern Water sewage treatment plant at Yaverland on the Isle of Wight. [55725]

Mr. Meale: The Government announced in September that secondary sewage treatment would be required for all significant coastal outfalls in England and Wales. In cases which were formerly potential derogations to a lower level of treatment, such as Yaverland, we will encourage water and sewerage companies to make as rapid progress as possible with installation of secondary treatment. The timing of investment is being discussed between the Environment Agency and individual companies and will be agreed by Ministers early next year, as part of an approved company investment programme.

Building Regulations

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many responses his Department received to its consultation on transitional provisions to cover the period before and following the extension of Part M of the building regulations to new dwellings; and what percentage of these were from (a) disability organisations, (b) building-related bodies and (c) housing providers. [55863]

Mr. Raynsford: The Department has received 66 responses to its consultation on transitional provisions to cover the period before and following the extension of Part M of the Building Regulations to new dwellings. Of these responses: 29% were from disability organisations; 41% were from building related bodies (half of which were national or regional associations or professional bodies); and 8% were from housing providers.

A full list of those who responded has been lodged in the House Library.

House Building

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to revise his Department's estimate that 4.4 million new homes will need to be built by 2016 to satisfy demand; and if he will make a statement. [55763]

Mr. Raynsford: The next set of household projections is due to be published early in 1999.

Climate Change Consultation Paper

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he intends to publish the Government's climate change consultation paper. [56627]

Mr. Prescott: On Monday 26 October I will launch a consultation paper seeking views on policy options for meeting our climate change targets. Copies of the document will be available from the Vote Office and placed in the Libraries of the House.

National Bus Company Pensions

Ms Rosie Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions for what reasons he has now decided to seek an out of court settlement to the current legal action on National Bus Company pensions. [56628]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Litigation was set in train by the decision of the previous Government to offer the trustees funding to pursue this matter through the courts. In view of this it would not have been appropriate to begin negotiations on a settlement until the details of this complex case had been fully prepared and all the relevant facts and arguments were known to and considered by both parties. The Trustees submitted the final part of their claims in July this year. The Government received strong legal advice that they should lodge their own response with the court before opening discussions on an out of court settlement. The Secretary of State initiated settlement discussions as soon as that stage was reached.

Local Deprivation Index

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when the technical report on revising and updating the Index of Local Deprivation will be published. [56629]

Mr. Caborn: I have placed in the House Library the report describing the technical details of revising and updating the Index of Local Deprivation, the results of which were published in June of this year.

Environmental Pollution Report

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he intends to respond to the Twentieth report of the Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution. [56677]

Dr. Reid: The Government have today published their response to the Twentieth Report, on Transport and the Environment. Copies of the Response have been Laid before the House.

The Government's response to the Commission closely follows their recently published White Paper on Integrated Transport. The Government note the clear resonance between the themes emphasised in the White Paper and in this Royal Commission report and its predecessor, the Eighteenth Report. These include recognition that the consequences of future traffic growth are indeed unacceptable; the need to take action to secure more sustainable transport for the future; the need for integration, both within and between transport modes, and of transport policies with other policies; agreement that Government should aim to provide the framework for all those with an interest in transport to play their part; the potential for technology to provide solutions through innovation, amongst other things, in fuel efficiency and emissions; and the need to encourage awareness of transport issues, and to send consistent signals such that we all work to further sustainable development objectives.

The Government have warmly welcomed the Royal Commission's reports, which have been influential in shaping the new mood for change, away from policies dominated by the short-term, and towards a more sustainable approach to transport policy that tackles both congestion and pollution. The Government look forward to developing this common ground as we all work to implement the new integrated transport policy.

DEFENCE

Young Navy Personnel

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the deployment of young people under the age of 17 years in the naval service. [56418]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Following a recent review of the policy for the deployment of young people into operational service in Royal Navy vessels and Royal Marine units I have decided that, with immediate effect, Naval Service personnel will not be deployed below the age of 17. Recruitment and training at age 16 will, however, continue. This change brings the Naval Service into line with the Army and RAF, which do not deploy young people below the age of 17.

Civilian Jobs (Scotland)

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many MOD civilian jobs there are in Scotland by location. [55410]

Mr. Spellar: The Ministry does not keep central records of the number of posts. The table gives the total number of full time equivalent personnel, both permanent and casual, by the location recorded on their pay and personnel records as at 1 September 1998.

Accommodation (Scotland)

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many single accommodation places exist for each of the services in Scotland, for (a) officers and (b) other ranks, by location; and if he will estimate the total number of service personnel that could be accommodated on shore in Scotland if all the available accommodation were utilised. [55407]

Mr. Spellar: There are a total of 9,576 single accommodation places on shore in Scotland. Currently, 6,164 accommodation spaces are occupied. The breakdown by Service, location and by Officers and Other Ranks accommodation is shown on the table:

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what barrack accommodation is currently surplus to requirements in Scotland and awaiting disposal; and if he will estimate the potential single accommodation capacity of these barracks if modernised. [55409]

Mr. Spellar: The Navy and Army have no surplus single living accommodation awaiting disposal in Scotland. The RAF has 2 sites which are considered to be surplus and which are in the process of disposal, as follows:

a. RAF Edzell. RAF Edzell was passed to the Defence Estate Organisation (DEO) for disposal in September 1998. If modernised, it is assessed that there would be 300 single bed spaces.

b. RAF Stornoway. It was announced on 13 February 1998 that RAF Stornoway was to close on 31 March 1998; however further work is in hand to establish the MOD's legal position regarding Former Ownership of the land which requires resolution before proceeding with the sale. If modernised, it is assessed that there would be 15 single bed spaces.

Lucknow Company (Officer Cadets)

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many officer cadets were in the Lucknow Company at the Royal Military Academy, Sandhurst in (a) July 1996, (b) July 1997 and (c) July 1998. [55530]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The Lucknow Platoon, Royal Military Academy Sandhurst, is a holding platoon, to which officer cadets, out of training for any reason, belong, including those undergoing medical treatment, those awaiting disciplinary action, and those undertaking further education.

The strength of the Lucknow Platoon in July 1996, 1997 and 1998 was as follows:

Year	Total number of cadets
1996	Between 33 and 36
1997	Between 35 and 37
1998	Between 46 and 48

Training Camps (Scotland)

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many places (a) are currently available and (b) will be available by 2000, in training camps in Scotland, for (a) Kirkcudbright, (b) Barry Budden and (c) Cultybraggan. [55408]

Mr. Spellar: There are 500 bed spaces available at each of the training camps at Barry Budden and Cultybraggan; and no plans to alter this by the year 2000. There is no training camp accommodation at the Kirkcudbright training area, but there are plans to provide accommodation for up to 240 which may reach fruition by the year 2000.

SCOTLAND

Motorcycle Parking

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many motorcycle parking spaces exist at each office or site for which his Department is responsible; and how many are secure spaces. [55257]

Mr. Dewar: There are 25 motorcycle parking spaces associated with the main administrative office buildings of which The Scottish Office is the major occupier. Of these, 19 are secure spaces. Information about other buildings for which my Department or its agencies are responsible is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Individual Pupil Compacts

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what action his Department has taken to introduce individual pupil compacts setting out targets for pupils in Scottish schools. [55043]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 19 October 1998]: The Government in Scotland are committed to taking forward Personal Learning Plans which will bring together all the relevant information on a child's performance and enable parents, teachers and pupils to agree a programme of development which will include targets for attainment. Further guidance will be issued to education authorities in due course.

Opencast Coal

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what progress he has made on preparing revised planning policy guidance on opencast coal following last year's consultation exercise; and if he will make a statement. [56678]

Mr. Macdonald: The Government are publishing today a consultative draft of proposed new planning policy guidance on opencast coal for Scotland. The proposed revised guidance is intended to supersede the current guidance on opencast coal as set out in National Planning Policy Guideline 4: Land for Mineral Working.

The new guidance sets a more robust framework within which planning authorities must consider all proposals for opencast coal developments. The intention is to ensure that, in considering proposals, full weight is given, in particular, to the effect and potential disturbance on local communities as well as other environmental considerations including nature conservation and the impact on the landscape.

Where a proposal would cause demonstrable harm, the guidance is clear that permission should not be granted except where the benefit of the development proposal to the community clearly outweighs the potential harm.

The highest environmental standards are expected for all opencast and related mineral operations including timely and sensitive restoration and aftercare of sites. A key feature of the policy is to introduce realistic separation distances between communities and sites for opencast extraction.

To re-inforce this policy, the Secretary of State has today directed that, where planning authorities are minded to grant consent, they should notify him of proposals which fall into a number of defined circumstances. In addition, it is the Secretary of State's intention, once the policy guidance has been finalised, to issue a direction requiring those local authorities where proposals for opencast coal and related minerals occur to review their development plan policies and to report on the action taken within a set timetable.

We believe that the proposals set out in the guidance represent a significantly stronger framework which will ensure that the consideration of opencast coal proposals is consistent with the Government's pre-Election commitments. We look to planning authorities and the opencast industry to work within this new policy context in promoting and approving only environmentally acceptable sites.

A copy of the guidance is being placed in the House Library. Copies are being widely circulated to planning authorities, industry and environmental interests. The proposals are open for consultation until 11 December. We will then take steps to ensure that final guidance is in place early in the new year and well ahead of the elections for the new Scottish Parliament. In the meantime, the Secretary of State expects planning authorities to treat the draft guidance as a material consideration in their assessment of all current and future applications.

Scottish Compact

Ms Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the launch of the Scottish Compact. [56679]

Mr. Dewar: The Scottish Compact sets out the principles underpinning the relationship between Government and the voluntary sector in Scotland. Command Paper No. 4083 will be laid before the House on Friday 23 October.

The publication of the Scottish Compact (which will be complemented by sister Compacts in England, Wales and Northern Ireland) meets another of the Government's pre-election commitments. It will help cement a closer partnership between the Government and the voluntary sector in areas of common concern for the benefit of society as a whole.

Non-Domestic Rating

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will review the method used to define rural areas in the Non-Domestic Rating (Rural Areas and Rateable Value Limits) Scotland Order 1997; and if he will make a statement. [55303]

Mr. McLeish: The Village Shops Rate Relief Scheme was introduced on 1 April 1998 after extensive consultation, with the majority of consultees accepting that the General Register Office (Scotland) (GRO(S)) postcode method of urban/rural classification was the best available for the purposes of the Scheme. The GRO(S) classification method will be reviewed after the 2001 Census.

Study Support

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will report on progress in creating a national framework for study support. [55103]

Mrs. Liddell: Significant resources are being made available for study support in Scotland. In the three years from April 1999, the New Opportunities Fund will commit a total of £23 million and the Government will provide new resources of £27 million as part of the recently announced Excellence Fund to support out of school hours learning activities.

In addition, we are giving The Prince's Trust—Action grant of £40,000 this financial year. The grant will support the development of networking arrangements to share ideas and good practice on study support and the dissemination of a CD ROM. The support arrangements will include regional seminars later this year.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Mediation Services

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the amount of training in mediation services which has been offered to members of the judiciary. [54677]

Mr. Hoon: Judicial training is the responsibility of the Judicial Studies Board. As part of its programme to support the civil justice reforms, the Judicial Studies Board held a series of seminars for all full-time judges who deal with civil cases. They included presentations by three mediators and a report on the mediation pilot scheme at Central London County Court. For the second stage of training, the board is planning further seminars for all full-time civil judges to develop a common approach to the reforms. These seminars will include a presentation designed to assist judges in identifying cases suitable for mediation.

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what studies have been undertaken or evaluated by his Department in respect of the potential role which could be played by mediation in medical negligence cases; and if he will make a statement. [54674]

Mr. Hoon: In her evaluation of the Central London County Court mediation pilot scheme, Professor Genn gathered data according to case type; only one case concerning medical negligence was mediated, and it did not settle. It would be inappropriate to draw conclusions from such a small sample. I await with interest the evaluation of the NHS Executive sponsored mediation pilot project which I understand will be completed shortly.

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment his Department has made, or plans to make, of the potential implications of a compulsory mediation stage in the litigation process in terms of reducing (a) delays and (b) costs in litigation; and if he will make a statement. [54678]

Mr. Hoon: The Government are considering the role of mediation in the civil justice system in the light of Professor Genn's findings on the pilot mediation scheme at the Central London County Court.

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment his Department has made of the pilot study of mediation services undertaken at Central London County Court; and if he will make a statement. [54675]

Mr. Hoon: The Lord Chancellor's Department funded Professor Hazel Genn to evaluate the mediation pilot scheme at the Central London County Court. Her report was published in July. It shows that, whilst only a small minority of cases were mediated, of those that were, 62 per cent. reached settlement at the mediation; that mediated settlements were achieved earlier than settlements in non-mediated cases; and that the litigants involved welcomed the opportunity to state their grievance in their own words and to participate in a relatively informal process.

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what meetings have been held by his Department with providers of mediation services concerning the potential role of such services in the civil legal system. [54676]

Mr. Hoon: Officials from the Lord Chancellor's Department have met representatives of ADR Group, and of the Centre for Dispute Resolution to discuss the role of mediation in non-family civil disputes. The Department, with University College London, also organised a major symposium on mediation to which providers of such services were invited.

Persistent Inquirers

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department which of his Department's agencies have procedures to identify persistent inquirers for information. [53951]

Mr. Hoon: No specific procedures are in place to identify persistent inquirers.

Legal Aid (Telephone Inquiries)

Mr. Pond: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many members of staff on (a) a full-time and (b) a part-time basis are employed to deal with telephone inquiries to the Legal Aid Board for the South East Region. [54065]

Mr. Hoon: The South East Region Area Office has three telephone lines used for Customer Services inquiries. One for legal queries, one for means assessment queries and one for questions relating to finance. The legal line is staffed by a full time receptionist who passes calls to one of eight full time legal caseworkers to take appropriate action. The finance and means assessment lines are each staffed by one full time caseworker.

Legal Aid (Pink Floyd Concert)

Jane Griffiths: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) what is the amount awarded in legal aid, to date, to those pursuing legal action against Arena Promotional Facilities Ltd., co-organisers of the Pink Floyd concert at Earl's Court; and if he will make a statement; [54409]

(2) what is the amount awarded in legal aid, to date, to those pursuing legal action against Harvey Goldsmith Entertainments Ltd., co-organisers of the Pink Floyd concert at Earl's Court; and if he will make a statement; [54410]

(3) what is the total amount awarded in legal aid, to date, to those pursuing legal action against David McCullum Ltd., in connection with the Pink Floyd concert at Earl's Court; and if he will make a statement; [54158]

(4) what is the amount awarded in legal aid, to date, to those pursuing legal action against Earl's Court Ltd., co-organisers of the Pink Floyd concert at Earl's Court, and if he will make a statement. [54411]

Mr. Hoon: The information is not readily available, as the Legal Aid Board's database records the name only of the applicant for legal aid. However, so far as the Legal Aid Board is able to determine, twelve certificates have been identified which relate to claims being made against a combination of one or more of the four defendants.

Of the twelve certificates, one applicant has been successful in recovering damages and costs from the defendants and therefore no cost claim has been made on the Legal Aid Fund. One other applicant withdrew from the action and the certificate was subsequently discharged resulting in a cost to the fund of £150. The remaining ten certificates are currently in force with claims ongoing but no final bills have yet been submitted.

PRIME MINISTER

Currency Flows

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his statement of 30 September on the policy of Her Majesty's Government concerning world monetary stability, what plans he has to seek agreement between major trading nations to co-ordinate limited regulation of currency flows related to loans and investments of speculative character. [55683]

The Prime Minister: I have no plans to seek to restrict currency flows in the global economy which I believe would damage prospects for stability and growth. Our priority is, instead, to create a more open, transparent and robust financial system, with better information and subject to better and more co-ordinated oversight by national regulators and international financial institutions.

Libya

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his letter of 23 June, if he will discuss with President Clinton and M. Jacques Santer the sanctions imposed on Libya under UN Security Council resolutions. [54965]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 21 October 1998]: UN Security Council Resolution 1192 states that the UN sanctions imposed on Libya will be suspended once the two Lockerbie accused are delivered to the Netherlands for trial before a Scottish court, and provided the French Government declare themselves satisfied with Libyan co-operation concerning the UTA bombing. I regularly discuss the need for Libyan compliance with UN Security Council resolutions in my bilateral contacts.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 27 April 1998, Official Report, column 17, what report he has received from Scotland Yard about the case of the murder of WPC Fletcher; and what is his current assessment of the case as a major obstacle to the United Kingdom's bilateral relations with Libya. [54966]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 21 October 1998]: The murder of WPC Fletcher remains a major obstacle to the normalisation of our bilateral relations with Libya. I understand from the Home Office that the Metropolitan Police inquiries are nearing completion.

Transport White Paper

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Prime Minister what meetings he had with non-governmental bodies about transport policy and the Transport White Paper in the three months before the publication of the White Paper; and which of these meetings were attended by employees of professional lobby consultants. [55268]

The Prime Minister: We carried out an extensive consultation as part of the fundamental review of transport policy. Prior to publication of the Transport White Paper my Ministers and I met a large number of individuals and organisations to discuss a wide range of transport issues. The discussions and the written representations we received played an important role in informing the development of our integrated transport policy.

China

Mr. Howard: To ask the Prime Minister what representations he made about human rights during his recent visit to China. [55952]

The Prime Minister: In my meetings with President Jiang Zemin and Premier Zhu Rongji, I welcomed China's signature of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and urged China to commence a dialogue with the Dalai Lama on Tibet. I raised the cases of individuals, including Xu Wenli, who was detained on 7 October and then released. In my speech on 7 October I emphasised the need to address human rights through continued dialogue and encouraged China to take further positive steps.

Committee on Standards in Public Life

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Prime Minister if it is the Government's policy to accept the latest recommendations of the Committee on Standards in Public Life; and if he will make a statement. [55758]

The Prime Minister: The Government strongly welcome the Committee's report on the funding of political parties in the United Kingdom which was published on 13 October. We intend to legislate on the main findings of the report so that robust and rigorous rules governing the funding of political parties can be in place before the next general election. To that end, my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary will publish a draft Bill before next year's summer recess.

WALES

New Deal

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on progress with the New Deal in Wales. [55593]

Mr. Hain: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Montgomeryshire (Mr. Öpik) on 20 October 1998, Official Report, column 1073.

Education Funding

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are the current levels of funding per pupil for education in each Welsh local education authority. [55598]

Mr. Hain: The latest available information for local education authorities is the budgeted gross revenue expenditure per pupil in 1997–98. This is shown in the table.

Job Creation

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many jobs, in each Welsh county, have been (a) created and (b) sustained, by (i) inward investment from abroad and (ii) investment from indigenous firms, in each year since 1993. [55591]

Mr. Hain: The information is not available in the form requested. Reliable information is available only in respect of offers of Regional Selective Assistance. Forecasts of employment from offers accepted by companies since April 1993 are set out in the table. For the purposes of historical comparison the table gives information on the basis of the old counties.

EU Structural Funds

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the negotiations regarding securing Objective one status for western Wales and the valleys. [55596]

Mr. Hain: Today the Office for National Statistics announced GDP figures for all NUTS 2 regions of the United Kingdom. The figures for the West Wales and the Valleys NUTS 2 region make it very likely that it will qualify for Objective 1 status under the new EC regulations governing the Structural funds for 2000–06, assuming that the criterion for Objective 1 remains that an area should have GDP levels below 75 per cent. of the European Union average. The draft regulations are currently being considered by Member States. Negotiations are unlikely to be completed before the end of March next year.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Wave Energy

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans his Department has to announce investment in wave energy. [55677]

Mr. Battle: The Government propose to undertake a new and strong drive to develop renewable energy sources in line with their manifesto commitment. To this end, I have commissioned a review of policy towards new and renewable energy, including consideration of what would be necessary and practicable to achieve 10 per cent. of UK electricity needs from renewables by the year 2010, and how renewables can make an effective contribution to meeting requirements for future greenhouse gas reduction commitments. The prospects for wave energy technology will be considered in that review, the outcome of which I hope to be able to announce later this year.

In the meantime, Scottish Office Ministers have launched the third competition under the Scottish Renewables Obligation (SRO-3) and are minded that the SRO-3 Order should make limited capacity available to wave power projects, among others.

Start-up Grant

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the Government's policy on repayment of start-up grant when companies close within five years of opening. [55962]

Mr. Mandelson: All offers of Regional Selective Assistance grant require the beneficiaries to accept terms and conditions under which we may vary, withhold or seek repayment of grant in circumstances where the project under-achieves. Normal policy is to clawback or withhold on a pro-rate basis to the progress achieved.

Siemens (North-east Plant)

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much start-up grant Siemens received for their plant in the North East. [55961]

Mr. Mandelson: The company has received £18 million Regional Selective Assistance from the offer of £30 million made in December 1995.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will seek repayment of start-up grant from Siemens following the planned closure of their plant in the North East. [55964]

Mr. Mandelson: A decision was made not to clawback the Regional Selective Assistance grant immediately while officials worked with the company to find a buyer. If, however, we are unsuccessful in this, recovery of grant will be considered in the normal way.

Post Office

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what are the planned levels of annual borrowing and returned cash available to the Post Office for re-investment. [55954]

Mr. Mandelson: The Post Office has no annual borrowing planned and expects to spend some £500 million on capital investment in the current financial year.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) when he plans to introduce measures allowing greater commercial freedom to the Post Office; [55953]

(2) when he plans to announce the conclusions of his review of the Post Office. [55955]

Mr. Mandelson: Work on the Government's review aimed at allowing the Post Office greater commercial freedom is proceeding apace. I will present our proposals as soon as I am ready to do so.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry by how much the Post Office has proposed to reduce its negative EFL in 1999. [55965]

Mr. Mandelson: The Post Office has made clear its wish to have an EFL set at a commercial dividend level.

Fairness at Work White Paper

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received on the Fairness at Work White Paper. [55115]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Department has received 474 responses, reflecting a wide range of views, to the White Paper on Fairness at Work, published on 21 May. I am placing a list of respondents in the Library of the House.

Manufacturing Employment

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the prospects for employment in manufacturing industry over the next 24 months. [55125]

Mr. Battle: The Government appreciate that the level of sterling and, more recently, the impact of financial problems in Asia have been causing difficulties for some manufacturers. We are ensuring that the necessary conditions are in place for a high and sustainable level of manufacturing employment over the long term: low inflation and sound public finances.

As well as setting in place the framework for securing economic stability, the Government are committed to helping the manufacturing sector, and each worker within it, to become more productive. We encourage individuals to gain knowledge and skills to enhance their employability. Measures such as the University for Industry will assist in this and will help boost the productivity and competitiveness of business through a new approach to learning. The Government are intent on providing the best environment for research and development, to help ensure dynamic and innovative businesses are continually developing new products and services. The new University Challenge fund will provide £50 million in venture capital to help university scientists commercially exploit their research.

Special Advisers

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many special advisers and their staff are employed in his Department. [54467]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 31 July 1998]: There are two special advisers employed by my Department. They are given the usual level of administrative support by the Department.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Overseas Visits (Advisers)

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the overseas visits between 1 July and 19 October on which Ministers have been accompanied by special advisers and, for each trip, (a) the name of the adviser, (b) the class and cost of travel booked for the adviser, (c) the class of travel actually used by the adviser and (d) the accommodation and ancillary costs for the adviser. [55996]

Clare Short: The Ministerial Code requires Ministers always to make efficient and cost effective travel arrangements. In line with the practice of successive Administrations, civil servants (including Special Advisers) accompanying Ministers on overseas visits are entitled to use the same class of travel as the Minister they are accompanying to facilitate briefings and discussions. Ministers in this Department were accompanied by two civil servants and a Special Adviser on an overseas visit to Tanzania and Kenya at a cost of £14,054.30. This is the total cost, including hotels, for all members of the delegation.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Departmental Vehicles

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much his Department expects to spend in each year from 1998–99 to 2000–01 on vehicle replacements. [54983]

Mr. Fatchett: We plan to spend £4,384,833 on vehicle replacements in 1998–99. We are still formulating our spending plans for 1999–2000 to 2000–01 in light of the budgetary outcome of the Comprehensive Spending Review.

EC Referendums

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his Department's policy on the basis of the distribution of European Community funds between opposing sides on referendums on EC issues. [55378]

Ms Quin: We have not taken any decision about policy on funding in any future referendums on EC issues. We are giving careful consideration to the Neill Committee's recommendations on the conduct of referendums generally.

Cyprus

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions his Department has had with President Clerides on the subject of a demilitarisation of the Island of Cyprus; and if he will make a statement. [55616]

Ms Quin: We are in regular contact with President Clerides on all aspects of the situation in Cyprus, including the question of demilitarisation.

We believe that the key to assuring the security of all Cypriots is not by increases in military forces and armaments, but through a comprehensive political settlement. We recognise eventual demilitarisation as an important objective in this context.

We therefore warmly welcome the UN Secretary-General's recent announcement of a UN process for contact between the parties aimed at reducing tensions and promoting progress towards a political settlement. We strongly support this process and urge the parties to co-operated with it in a constructive and flexible manner.

Lebanon

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which Minister from his Department has visited the Lebanon since 1 May 1997. [55932]

Mr. Fatchett: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary visited the Republic of Lebanon on 18 March 1998. I visited Lebanon on 29–30 May 1997.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which Lebanese Government Ministers have visited the United Kingdom since 1 May 1997. [55931]

Mr. Fatchett: The Lebanese Prime Minister visited the United Kingdom on 17–18 July 1997.

General Pinochet

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations (a) he and (b) other Foreign Office Ministers have made in relation to the arrest and possible extradition of General Pinochet. [55950]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: None. The arrest and possible extradition of Senator Pinochet are a judicial not a political matter. There is no reason for my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary to intervene.

Mr. Anwar Ibrahim

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Malaysia about the case of Mr. Anwar Ibrahim. [55951]

Mr. Fatchett: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer I gave on 19 October 1998, Official Report, columns 993–94, to my hon. Friend the Member for Islington, North (Mr. Corbyn).

CABINET OFFICE

[56001]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: No special advisers accompanied me, or my predecessor, on overseas visits between 1 July and 19 October.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if he will list the non-departmental public bodies which have been (a) established and (b) abolished since 2 May 1997. [55730]

Mr. Kilfoyle: Since 2 May 1997, the Government have established 29 new non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs) and abolished 44. These are listed. Mr. Kilfoyle: The Commissioner for Public Appointments collects statistics on appointments to non-departmental public bodies within his remit on an annual basis, including the declared political activity of successful candidates. His last annual report (placed in the Library of the House) contains such information on appointments made during the year ending 31 March 1998. The Commissioner requires that all appointments should be for a fixed term. Information on any appointments which are terminated early is not collected centrally.

Marsham Street Buildings

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if he will make a statement about the future of the former Department of the Environment and Transport buildings on Marsham Street. [55717]

Mr. Kilfoyle: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated under the terms of the Framework Document to the Property Advisers to the Civil Estate. I have asked its Chief Executive, Mr. John Locke, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John C. Locke to Sir Michael Spicer, dated 22 October 1998:

The Parliamentary Secretary for the Cabinet Office, Peter Kilfoyle, has asked me as Chief Executive of PACE with management responsibilities for the former Department of the Environment and Transport (DETR) building on Marsham Street, to respond to your Parliamentary Question about the future of this building.

The building at 2 Marsham Street is a Government freehold property which until April this year was occupied by staff of the DETR. While it remains vacant, this Agency is responsible for its general upkeep to ensure it remains wind and watertight and is not subjected to vandalism of any kind.

There is a possibility that Marsham Street will be used as temporary decant accommodation for another Government Department while its premises are refurbished. A decision on this is expected early in the New Year. If reuse of the building cannot be justified in Exchequer terms, the building will be demolished. This is expected to take some eighteen months following the letting of a contract.

Mr. Milburn: Health authorities are responsible for investigating cases of fraud by practitioners. They may refer such cases to the relevant regulatory or professional body. Where criminal prosecution is being considered, the case will normally be referred for investigation by the police before being referred to a professional body.

The Prescription Pricing Authority Fraud Investigation Unit provides expert advice and an investigative service to health authorities in England for prescription fraud.

A director of counter fraud services within the National Health Service Executive was appointed on 1 September. A document outlining a comprehensive strategy for ensuring that the NHS in England has the professional resources it needs to prevent, deter and investigate all types of fraud will be published later this year.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in England had been on hospital waiting lists for over one year at the latest available date. [55618]

Mr. Milburn: Information on the number of patients waiting over 12 months for a first out-patient appointment following a general practitioner written referral is not collected centrally.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Housing Benefit Fraud

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what factors underlay her decision to withdraw the offer of extra subsidy to local authorities to detect housing benefit fraud; [53277]

(2) if she will require retrospective introduction of weekly benefit savings for the 1997–98 financial year; [53274]

(3) for what reasons subsidy to local authorities will be lost if housing benefit (a) ceases and (b) is reduced before a designated fraud officer becomes involved; [53272]

(4) what incentive she will provide for local authorities to detect housing benefit fraud; [53273]

(5) when she will reply to the Local Government Association representations on the Draft Weekly Benefit Savings Subsidy Guide. [53267]

Mr. Denham [pursuant to his reply, 30 July 1998, c. 474–75]: This Government are committed to taking tough action against all benefit fraud including Housing Benefit. Significant incentives for local authorities to detect Housing Benefit fraud are already in place. A financial incentive scheme has been in operation since 1993 which rewards local authorities for good performance in detecting benefit fraud. Payments of additional subsidy to local authorities to reward them for their anti-fraud work has risen year on year (£5.9 million in 1993/94 to £65.6 million in 1997/98).

Recent National Audit Office and Audit Commission reports questioned the interpretation of the Subsidy Order by some local authorities when claiming additional subsidy for anti-fraud work. We have therefore made the criteria explicit in the Subsidy Order 1998. To qualify for this additional subsidy authorities must show that benefit was reduced or stopped following investigation by a designated fraud officer. In each case they must show that benefit has been overpaid as a result of fraud or, in a case where benefit has not been put into payment, an attempt was made to claim fraudulently and this was prevented by their action.

The Department is still awaiting comments from the Local Government Association on the draft instructions on claiming weekly benefit savings. When received they will be considered and a reply issued as soon as possible. We have, however, already had the opportunity to consider some of the initial comments made to me by the Local Government Association and, as a result of this, the strengthened criteria for claiming fraud weekly benefit savings will not now be introduced for the 1997/98 financial year but will commence from 1 April 1998.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his Department's forecast for spending on jobseekers allowance in (a) 1999–2000, (b) 2000–01 and (c) 2001–02 on the basis of (i) the growth forecasts in the EFSR published in July and (ii) his revised growth forecasts. [55839]

Angela Eagle: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the table.

2. There has been no revision to Social Security expenditure plans since the CSR.

Vaccine Damage

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects to make a statement in respect of payment to vaccine-damaged children who are now adults other than those affected by payments in 1979. [55669]

Mr. Timms: Consideration is still being given to this complex and sensitive issue and an announcement will be made in due course.

Pensions Review

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will place in the Library a copy of the letter to which the hon. Member for Northavon (Mr. Webb) made reference in his Oral Question on 19 October 1998, Official Report, column 948. [56347]

Mr. Denham: Yes.

National Insurance

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the reduction in national insurance contributions resulting from the raising of the starting point for employees' contributions in April 1999; how much of this sum will accrue to the benefit of employees with earnings above the upper earnings limit; and what increase in the upper earnings limit would be required to neutralise the effect on the income of the National Insurance Fund. [55681]

Mr. Timms: In his Budget statement on 17 March 1998, Official Report, columns 1097–112, my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer, announced the most radical changes to National Insurance contributions in over 20 years. He made it clear that some of these changes will be introduced from April 1999, but that raising the starting point for employees' contributions to the level of the single person's tax allowance would take place at a later date.

Overseas Visits (Advisers)

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the overseas visits between 1 July and 19 October on which Ministers have been accompanied by special advisers and, for each trip, (a) the name of the adviser, (b) the class and cost of travel booked for the adviser, (c) the class of travel actually used by the adviser and (d) the accommodation and ancillary costs for the adviser. [56002]

Mr. Denham: No such visits have been made.

Agencies

Mr. Geraint Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the involvement of the private sector in providing office support services for the Benefits Agency and Child Support Agency. [56407]

Angela Eagle: My right hon. Friend the previous Secretary of State announced in July 1997 that we would proceed with PRIME (Private Sector Resource Initiative for Management of the Estate) and that we would explore whether further private sector involvement could improve the delivery of associated office support services, mainly in the Benefits Agency but also within the Child Support Agency.

We said that in proceeding with this project we expected to see an improved quality of services. We therefore asked officials to proceed with the tender but also to invite prices from in-house teams.

We want to ensure that the public gets the best services at the best price.

In the case of Accommodation and Office Services (AOS) we have looked at what both the private sector and in-house teams can offer and treated each case on its merits. During the process we have emphasised our concern for the treatment of any staff who transfer and stressed our commitment to the ongoing monitoring of suppliers in this respect.

Today's announcement demonstrates these policies. The services to Scotland, Fylde and Wales will be retained in-house and provided by BA staff under formal service level agreements (SLAs). In these areas in-house staff have demonstrated their ability to provide the best value for money.

For the other services, contracts have been awarded to:

Trillium for office services to:

Yorkshire and Tyne Tees

North West Coast and Greater Manchester

West Midlands and Mercia

Haden Facilities Management for office services to:

The South East, London and East Anglia

The West Country and Chilterns.

In these cases staff from this Department and from other suppliers will transfer to the new suppliers with their terms and conditions protected by TUPE and with monitoring arrangements in place to ensure that staff are fairly treated.

These arrangements will provide the flexible, quality office services needed to support our modernisation of Social Security and our programme of welfare reform. One of the benefits of this approach is the rationalisation of the 48 contracts we inherited into a more flexible and efficient contracts regime to meet the changing business needs of the Benefits Agency and the Department.

The total cost of these contracts is £161 million over a three year period.

NIRS II Computer

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what level of compensation, and to which pension companies, has been offered by his Department as a result of late payments and national insurance contributions due to the difficulties with the introduction of the NIRS II system. [55847]

Mr. Timms: Pension companies will start to receive compensation payments for the delay to age-related rebates from 1 November 1998. The payment calculation is based on the assumption that payments should have been made, on average, by October following the end of the tax year to which the rebate relates.

Payments made at the beginning of November will be increased by 0.5 per cent. Payments will be increased by a further 0.5 per cent. for each subsequent month until the expected level of payment is reached.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects the NIRS II computer system to be fully operational; and if he will make a statement. [55852]

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects the NIRS II system to be handling the number of cases which it was originally planned to handle. [55849]

Mr. Timms: The NIRS2 computer system is being introduced using a phased release strategy. The final phase, combining Release 2 and Release 3, is planned for April 1999.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Temporary Office Accommodation

Mr. Trend: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee what was the nature of the work carried out on the Lower Ground Floor Secretaries' Room which necessitated the removal of personnel and equipment to temporary accommodation from 4 August to 1 September; on what date the work commenced; and for how many days the room was required to be unoccupied. [55391]

Sir Sydney Chapman: An Automatic Fire Detection system was installed in the Lower Ground Floor Secretaries' area. The decanting process commenced on the 4 August with re-occupation on 1 September. The conditions of the contract give the contractor possession of the site from 4 August for 27 days and work started on 8 August.

State Opening

Mr. Bayley: To ask the President of the Council if she will announce the date of the State Opening of Parliament. [56672]

Mrs. Beckett: As I announced in my Business Statement today, the new session of Parliament will be opened on 24 November 1998. I anticipate the House will be Prorogued late in the week preceding that.

Recall Costs

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the President of the Council what was the direct cost of recalling the House for the sittings on 2 and 3 September, separately identifying (a) staff and (b) works costs. [55356]

Mr. William Ross: To ask the President of the Council if she will estimate the cost to public funds of the recall of Parliament for 2 and 3 September. [55493]

Mr. Baker: To ask the President of the Council what is the estimated total cost to public funds of the current recall of Parliament. [55465]

Mrs. Beckett: The estimated total cost, excluding works projects, is £33,200. The works costs cannot be known with certainty until contractors' claims for prolongation and disruption have all been received and verified. However, the total works cost may be of the order of £375,000.

Mr. Baker: To ask the President of the Council how many parliamentary staff, including security staff, were required to be present as a result of the recall of Parliament; and how many of these were paid (a) no extra, (b) standard hourly rates, (c) overtime rates and (d) expenses; and if she will make a statement. [55466]

Mr. Kirkwood: I have been asked to reply on behalf of the President of the Council.

Approximately 230 staff, excluding security staff, were present as a result of the recall of Parliament. Additional security costs amounted to £23,700. The only pay costs incurred for staff of the House were for night fees/allowances totalling £3,000 and overtime payments for Refreshment Department staff totalling £4,000.

Expenses totalling £2,500 were incurred for overnight accommodation and late night transport etc. although further claims may still be submitted.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Further Education Funding Council

13. Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to make the Further Education Funding Council more accountable to the regions. [55106]

Mr. Mudie: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has recently appointed a number of additional representatives from the local authority sector to the FEFC's regional committees. In the future, FEFC regional committees will be working closely with the Regional Development Agencies.

National Literacy Strategy

14. Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on progress achieved on the Government's National Literacy Strategy. [55107]

Ms Estelle Morris: The daily Literacy Hour began in primary schools this September. To support schools, we have provided training for every primary teacher, distributed over 300,000 copies of the literacy Framework for Teaching and allocated almost £60 million of funding, including support for over 200 local literacy consultants.

New Deal (West Midlands)

15. Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the progress of the new deal in the west midlands. [55108]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The New Deal for 18 to 24 year olds has made a promising start throughout the country and in the West Midlands over 14,000 young people have started on the path to employment.

Lifelong Learning

16. Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will take steps to ensure that technologies used in (a) the lifelong learning initiatives, (b) the university for industry and (c) the national grid for learning are inter-operable; and if he will make a statement. [55109]

Mr. Mudie: The National Grid for Learning, the University for Industry and lifelong learning initiatives will be accessible via a range of technologies including the Internet, which offers an interoperable standard accessible to all users.

Education Welfare Officers

17. Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to improve the training of education welfare officers. [55110]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Local Education Authorities, as the employers, are responsible for making arrangements for the training and professional development of education welfare officers. The Department is providing support for EWO training through the recently announced "School Inclusion: Pupil Support" grant programme. We also actively support the work of the Training Advisory Group for the Education Welfare Service.

Rural Schools

18. Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to preserve the ability of parents in rural areas to select schools of their choice. [55111]

Mr. Charles Clarke: We have made it clear that our presumption is against the closure of rural schools. We have recently published interim guidance on school admissions which aims to maximise parental preference in all areas of the country.

Child Care

19. Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many new child care places will be created in 1997–98. [55112]

Ms Hodge: In 1997–98, 7,455 places were created through the Out of School Childcare Initiative in England, exceeding our target. This year, to support our National Childcare Strategy, we will create at least 40,000 new places through the Initiative and a further 20,000 places through other schemes.

24. Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the number of new child care places to be created this year. [55119]

Ms Hodge: In this financial year up to 2 August 1998, 4,270 new childcare places have been created through the Out of School Childcare Initiative (England). We have not yet received data from all the TECs for the summer holidays when many new schemes started, but we are confident that we are on course to meet the end of year target of 40,000 places.

In addition, 10,000 new places will be created for pre-school children aged 0–3 and 4 year olds in full-time education through the £6 million in childcare grants allocated to local education authorities and Early Years Development Partnerships.

A further 10,000 out of school childcare places will be created in further education colleges and other institutions in 1998 through a £5 million grant administered by the Further Education Funding Council.

We will be making available £44 million to support Early Years Development and Childcare Partnerships from next year. This money will help Partnerships to increase the number of childcare places beyond the 60,000 to be set up this year.

Chief Inspector of Schools

20. Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment in which years since his appointment Her Majesty's chief inspector of schools has been awarded a bonus; and what was the value of each such bonus (a) in cash terms and (b) as a percentage of his salary. [55113]

Ms Estelle Morris: The following bonuses have been paid to Chris Woodhead, Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools in England: in 1996, in respect of the period 1 September 1994 to 31 March 1996, 7 per cent. of salary (£5,697); in 1997, in respect of the year ended 31 March 1997, 10 per cent. of salary (£8,550); and in 1998, in respect of the year ended 31 March 1998, 10 per cent. of salary (£8,621).

Learning Age

21. Shona McIsaac: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the responses he has received from the consultation on the learning age. [55114]

Mr. Mudie: We have had nearly 3,000 responses to the Learning Age Green Paper—from members of the public, employers, education and training organisations and others. Our proposals have been widely welcomed. We are analysing and considering carefully all the detailed comments made and we will publish a summary of the responses in due course.

School Meals

22. Charlotte Atkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what progress is being made with bringing in nutritional standards for school meals. [55116]

Mr. Charles Clarke: We published "Ingredients for Success", our consultation paper on nutritional standards for school lunches, on 15 October.

Education Action Zones

23. Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the timetable and target numbers for additional schools to become part of education action zones. [55117]

Ms Estelle Morris: I expect to invite applications for more zones in the New Year.

Unemployment

25. Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the current level of unemployment. [55120]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The internationally comparable Labour Force Survey measure showed 1.82 million people as ILO unemployed in June to August 1998 (a rate of 6.3 per cent.).

The more recent claimant unemployment figure, for September 1998, was 1.3 million (a rate of 4.6 per cent.).

28. Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations his Department has received on the percentage change in national unemployment during the last month. [55123]

Mr. Andrew Smith: I have received no such representations in the last month.

Employment Creation Measures

26. Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the impact of his Department's employment creation measures. [55121]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The latest figures from the New Deal for Young Unemployed People show that over half of those leaving the Gateway did so to start work and most of those went into unsubsidised jobs.

It is important, however, to consider the net overall effect of the New Deal and we have therefore put in place an extensive and comprehensive monitoring and evaluation strategy to realise this.

Higher Education (Cornwall)

27. Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations he has received on the future of higher education in Cornwall. [55122]

Mr. Mudie: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has received a number of representations about the future of higher education in Cornwall. I welcome the initiative taken by the three higher education institutions in Cornwall to form a new partnership to develop plans for improving the quality and range of higher education opportunities in Cornwall.

Grammar Schools

29. Mr. Syms: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations he has received from grammar school heads about his policies towards grammar schools. [55124]

Ms Estelle Morris: 100 responses have been received from grammar school headteachers and governing bodies about the draft Education (Grammar School Ballots) Regulations which were sent out for consultation on 3 June. Revised regulations will be debated in the normal way.

University for Industry

30. Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to expand the university for industry pilots. [55126]

Mr. Mudie: Following the European Social Fund ADAPT Third Call for Applications earlier this year, over 100 projects are being established to contribute towards the University for Industry's development. We expect further relevant projects to be funded through the ESF Objective 4 programme.

Welfare to Work

32. Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the impact of the Welfare to Work programme in helping unemployed people over the age of 25 years off benefit and back into work. [55128]

Ms Hodge: It is too early to make an assessment of New Deal for people aged 25 or more. It only started in June of this year. I expect to make a statement in November.

Ministerial Visits

33. Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will visit the Farnham and Godalming sixth-form colleges to discuss the allocation of funds for 16 to 18-year-olds. [55129]

Mr. Mudie: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has no current plans to do so.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to the oral statement by the Chancellor of the Exchequer of 17 March 1998, Official Report, column 1097, if he will make a statement on the training of 20,000 bug busters. [55948]

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people have to date (a) applied to become millennium bugbusters and (b) successfully completed the training. [55867]

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many bugbusters have been trained to date; [55966]

(2) how much money his Department has spent to date on grants to SMEs, under the bugbusters programme; [55967]

(3) how much money his Department has spent to date on advertising and marketing its bugbusters programme; and how much it intends to spend in the rest of 1998–99; [55968]

(4) how many SMEs have so far received grants under his Department's bugbusters training programme; [55969]

(5) how many training organisations have become accredited providers under the bugbusters training programme to date. [55970]

Mr. Mudie: The infrastructure for the Bug Buster programme is now in place. 160 training providers throughout the country have been accredited by the IT National Training Organisation to offer courses. At 16 October, 284 people had started the training: 194 of them had completed courses. A further 620 were booked to go on courses. There is a short time lag between individuals completing courses and payments being made to training providers. As a result only a small number of grants have so far been paid out to small and medium sized enterprises.

Our key objective has been to put in place a high quality programme in which employers would have confidence. It has inevitably taken time to design courses, to accredit training providers and for Training and Enterprise Councils to plan local provision and arrange contracts. However, take up by employers in the early stages of the full operation of the programme has been slower than expected. Some smaller employers still do not appreciate fully the threat posed by the year 2000 problem. Others are concerned about the costs of training.

Action is being taken to address both of these issues. A major marketing and publicity campaign, is being launched at the end of this month. This is in addition to the local marketing carried out by TECs. Courses will now be offered free to employers. This change has been made possible by lower than expected fees being charged by training providers. In addition, IT consultancy firms will now be eligible to claim grant for trainees they take on to work with employers.

The progress of the programme is being kept under constant review. Take up of places under the programme depends on employers' willingness to take this opportunity offered to provide their staff with the skills necessary to deal with an important business problem.

Overseas Visits (Advisers)

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the overseas visits between 1 July and 19 October on which Ministers have been accompanied by special advisers and, for each trip, (a) the name of the adviser, (b) the class and cost of travel booked for the adviser, (c) the class of travel actually used by the adviser and (d) the accommodation and ancillary costs for the adviser. [56004]

Mr. Mudie: No overseas visits were undertaken between 1 July and 19 October on which Ministers were accompanied by Special Advisers.

Teachers (Fixed-term Contracts)

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of teaching staff in (a) local authority schools and (b) grant maintained schools are currently on fixed-term contracts, broken down by local education authority. [55831]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The percentage of full and part-time fixed term contracts (of one month or over) for teaching staff in local authority maintained nursery, primary and secondary schools in England at January 1998 are given in the table. Teachers with more than one contract have had all contracts included in the calculation. Similar information for grant maintained schools is not held by the Department.

School Reserve Accounts

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what estimates he has made of the amount of money currently held in reserve accounts by schools in (a) England and Wales, (b) Cheshire and (c) Warrington; [55833]

(2) what estimate he has made of the amount of money from delegated budgets underspent by schools in (a) England and Wales and (b) Cheshire in each of the past five years. [55834]

Ms Estelle Morris: The table shows the amount held as balances by LEA schools in (a) England and (b) Cheshire for each of the financial years 1992–93, 1993–94, 1994–95, 1995–96 and 1996–97. Responsibility for schools in Wales rests with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales. Information on the position at the end of the financial year 1997–98 will not be available centrally until local education authorities publish their outturn statements later in the Autumn. I will write to my hon. Friend when those figures are available, and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library.

Balances held by LEA schools

£000

Financial years	(a) England	(b) Cheshire
1992–93	605,304	16,677
1993–94	646,810	16,196
1994–95	649,949	15,314
1995–96	581,456	14,410
1996–97	523,679	13,375

School Finances (Auditing)

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to introduce sample auditing of school finances; and if he will make a statement. [55832]

Ms Estelle Morris: Under the Fair Funding arrangements to be introduced from 1999, local education authorities will be responsible for determining their own audit arrangements for school expenditure, and these arrangements (which normally include a cycle of school-based audits) will be authorised by schemes made under section 48 of the School Standards and Framework Act 1998. Individual schools may also be audited as part of the external audit regime for LEAs, which is determined by the Audit Commission.

Headteachers (Salary Increases)

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what was the average percentage salary increase received by (a) primary school headteachers and (b) secondary school headteachers for each of the past five years; [55836]

(2) what was the average percentage salary increase received by (a) primary school deputy headteachers and (b) secondary school deputy headteachers in each of the past five years. [55835]

Ms Estelle Morris: The average percentage salary increase from 31 March each year to 31 March the following year, for full-time headteachers and deputy headteachers in England and Wales, is as follows:

	Maintained nursery/primary	Maintained secondary
Headteachers
1992 to 1993	9.2	9.6
1993 to 1994	4.3	5.2
1994 to 1995	4.2	4.6
1995 to 1996	3.7	4.1
1996 to 1997	4.8	5.4
Deputy headteachers
1992 to 1993	9.8	9.7
1993 to 1994	6.2	5.1
1994 to 1995	3.9	4.6
1995 to 1996	3.5	3.6
1996 to 1997	4.5	4.7

The percentage increases include the effects both of the annual teachers' pay award and the effects of individual postholders' movement up the pay spine.

New Deal (Young People)

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the number of people under the New Deal in (a) England and (b) Wales who have entered full-time employment. [55105]

Ms Hodge: In England 18,500 young people under the 18–24 New Deal have entered employment. In Wales the figure is 2,000. This is a promising start.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of New Deal trainees were placed in subsidised employment at the latest available date. [55118]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Of those young people taking part in New Deal options 44 per cent. have entered subsidised jobs.

LEA Schools (Managerial Responsibilities)

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what measures he plans to help LEA schools take on the managerial responsibilities required under the School Standards and Framework Act 1998. [55147]

Ms Estelle Morris: LEA schools already have much experience in managing delegated budgets, and in exercising the staffing powers associated with financial delegation. They are therefore well-placed to take on the responsibilities resulting from the decisions on further delegation recently announced by the Government in the light of responses to the consultation paper "Fair Funding". A number of elements in the Standards Fund programmes for 1998–99 and 1999–2000 are designed to support training for heads and governors relating to the Government's key priorities.

New Deal (Widows)

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if widows are eligible for the same benefits, incentives and advice as other lone parents under the New Deal; and if he will make a statement. [55155]

Ms Hodge: The term "lone parents" covers all those who are bringing up their child or children on their own, and this includes widows and widowers. All lone parents with dependent children who are on Income Support can join the New Deal for Lone Parents. Since April, the New Deal for Lone Parents has been available across the country to lone parents who make a new claim for Income Support. From 26 October, it will be extended to include those with existing claims for Income Support. Those lone parents whose youngest child is aged over five will be sent a letter inviting them to a meeting with a Personal Adviser. The service is also available to lone parents with children under five who wish to participate.

Careers Services

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his answer of 28 July 1998, Official Report, column 137, if he will make a statement on the activities of commercial companies providing careers information which have been able to generate a surplus through the efficient delivery of their contracts, legitimate dividends to shareholders or cash transfers to a parent company, indicating the amount attributed to shareholders retained as company profits and the amount of cash transfers to parent companies in the last period for which figures are available. [55458]

Mr. Mudie: Twenty seven of the sixty six Careers Services operating under contract with the Department are run by companies limited by share with the power to distribute profits to the shareholders. The majority of these organisations have retained within the company any profits arising from efficient delivery of the Careers Service. The value of the contracts with the 66 Careers Services was just over £220 million in 1996–97. According to the latest information available, which is taken from the statutory accounts for the financial year ended 31 March 1997, dividends amounting to some £359,300 were paid in respect of contracts held by Lifetime Careers, Guidance Enterprises Ltd, Careers

Management Ltd and Northumberland Guidance Company. West London Careers Service Ltd and CfBT Thames Careers Guidance Ltd made a transfer of £820,000 to their parent company CfBT which is an educational trust which includes within its objects the provision of careers information, guidance and advice.

Middle and First Schools

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on his policy on middle and first schools. [55099]

Mr. Charles Clarke: We have no policies which relate solely to middle and first schools. Schools should be organised to deliver the highest possible standards of education and to reflect parental preference. Local Education Authorities and School Governing Bodies are best placed to decide on the most effective pattern of provision within their areas, taking account of local circumstances.

Undergraduate Degree Students (Costs)

Mr. Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the average annual cost of a full-time undergraduate degree student at (a) Oxford and Cambridge universities, (b) all United Kingdom universities and (c) previously PCFC funded institutions. [55651]

Mr. Mudie [holding answer 19 October 1998]: The average annual funding through HEFCE grant and tuition fees for teaching a full-time undergraduate degree student is around £4,000 in English universities and colleges, including previously PCFC funded institutions. The comparable figure for the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge, which attract additional funding via the college fee, is around £5,800.

Higher Education Staff

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to report to Parliament the recommendations of the Independent Review Committee on Higher Education Staff Pay and Conditions. [55762]

Mr. Mudie: The pay and conditions of staff in higher education are a matter for the employers. The Independent Review Committee was set up by the Universities and Employers Association (UCEA) to look into the framework for determining pay and conditions of service in the higher education sector. The Review Committee will report to UCEA and it will be for the employers and unions to respond to any recommendations.

School Budgets

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make changes to the area cost adjustment in time to affect the 1999–2000 schools' budgets. [55127]

Ms Estelle Morris: We will announce our decisions on the SSA formula, including the area cost adjustment, for 1999–2000 later in the autumn according to the normal timetable.

TREASURY

Retail Prices Index

Dr. Lienee Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects the research by the Office for National Statistics into bias in the Retail Prices Index to be published. [56025]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Director of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Dr. Lynne Jones, dated 22 October 1998:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary question on when the Chancellor of the Exchequer expects the research by the ONS into bias in the Retail Prices Index (RPI) to be published.

Our work programme into potential bias in the RPI is an expansive one that will look into a number of conceptual and technical issues relating to index number construction. We have identified those aspects of the current methodology which should be given the highest priority and will undertake research on these first. A description of the research programme will be published in the ONS publication Economic Trends.

I am sorry that I cannot be more specific about the time of completion of particular research projects at this stage but further consideration will be given to the precise form and timing of dissemination as the work progresses further.

As you know, our initial assessment of the potential for bias in the RPI was published in an article in the October 1997 edition of Economic Trends entitled Implications of the US Boskin report for the UK Retail Prices Index. A copy of Economic Trends is available in the House of Commons Library.

Overseas Visits (Advisers)

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the overseas visits between 1 July and 19 October on which Ministers have been accompanied by special advisers and for each trip (a) the name of the adviser, (b) the class and cost of travel booked for the adviser, (c) the class of travel actually used by the adviser and (d) the accommodation and ancillary cost for the adviser. [56007]

Mr. Gordon Brown: I refer the hon. Member to the answers I gave to the hon. Member for Bromley and Chislehurst (Mr. Forth) on 24 July 1998, Official Report, column 750, and the hon. Member for Spelthorne (Mr. Wilshire) on 31 July 1998, Official Report, columns 663–64. Special advisers, along with other departmental officials, have accompanied Ministers to meetings of European finance ministers and to international meetings including the Commonwealth Finance Ministers' Meeting and the IMF/World Bank Annual Meetings.

Correspondence

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the hon. Member for Walsall, North will receive a reply to his letter of 15 September, ref. 3/05775/1998. [55752]

Dawn Primarolo: A reply was sent to my hon. Friend on 20 October.

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the hon. Member for Walsall, North will receive a substantive reply to his letter of 1 July, ref. 3/05072/1998. [55753]

Dawn Primarolo: My hon. Friend the Member for Walsall, North (Mr. Winnick) received an interim reply to his letter of 1 July on 14 July. A full reply will be sent when an announcement is made about the outcome of the Government's review of the withdrawal of payable tax credits from individuals after 5 April 1999.

Transport White Paper

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what meetings he held with non-Governmental bodies about transport policy and the Transport White Paper in the three months before the publication of the White Paper; and which of these meetings were attended by employees of professional lobby consultants. [55269]

Mr. Byers: Prior to the publication of the Government's White Paper "A New Deal for Transport", the Government were keen to hear the views of all interested parties and accordingly consulted widely before any policy decisions were taken. Between 21 August and 14 November 1997, the Government carried out a major consultation exercise resulting in over 7,300 written responses and a number of consultation meetings and seminars throughout the UK. It is intended that this consultation be an ongoing process. In the three months prior to the publication of the Government's White Paper, the Chancellor did not hold any meetings with non-governmental bodies specifically in relation to transport policy.

Cross-border Smuggling

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the annual loss of UK hydrocarbon duty on (a) petrol, (b) diesel and (c) other fuels from cross-border smuggling. [55731]

Ms Hewitt: HM Customs and Excise have no estimates for the revenue lost to the Exchequer through these activities.

Euro (Conversion Costs)

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the costs of converting to the euro for (a) Government departments, (b) the financial sector and (c) the economy as a whole; and if he will make a statement. [55727]

Ms Hewitt: The cost of the changeover should the UK decide to join the euro would depend on the manner in which businesses and other organisations were to approach the changeover. The extent to which organisations have considered the euro as a factor when making investment decisions prior to joining would also be a factor.

The Government are committed to publish an Outline National Changeover Plan which will set out the steps involved should the UK join the single currency. Work on the plan is being carried out in consultation with a wide range of representative organisations. This will help the selection of changeover arrangements which would be practical and cost-effective for a wide range of businesses and other organisations.

Tax Receipts

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his Department's revised forecast for the public sector net cash requirement in (a) 1999–2000, (b) 2000–01, and (c) 2001–02 following the revisions to his growth forecast. [55838]

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what is his Department's current forecast for tax receipts in (a) 1999–2000, (b) 2000–01 and (c) 2001–02; [55722]

(2) what is his Department's current forecast for (a) corporation tax receipts and (b) VAT receipts in (i) 1999–2000, (ii) 2000–01 and (iii) 2001–02. [55724]

Ms Hewitt: A new forecast of the public finances will be published in the Pre-Budget Report on 3 November.

Minimum Wage

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effect on UK interest rates of (a) the decision to introduce a statutory minimum wage and (b) his spending plans published in July. [55837]

Ms Hewitt: Interest rate decisions are a matter for the Bank of England's Monetary Policy Committee. The MPC sets interest rates to meet the Government's inflation target, taking into account all available information. We will continue to give the MPC one hundred per cent. support in whatever difficult decisions it has to make on interest rates.

Revised Growth Forecast

Mr. Maude: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what briefing was given by his special advisers regarding the revised growth forecast. [55841]

Mr. Gordon Brown: The revised growth forecast will be published in the Pre-Budget Report on 3 November.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for what reasons his intention to publish revised growth forecasts was first announced (a) to the IMF and (b) on 6 October. [55844]

Ms Hewitt: The Annual Meetings of the IMF and World Bank always discuss the world economic situation. Previous Chancellors have used this occasion to comment on the prospects for the UK. And other Finance Ministers comment on their own economies. It would have been unusual for the Chancellor not to do so in his statement to the Annual Meeting on 6 October. And in view of the rapid deterioration in the world economic outlook since the summer, it would have been even less credible not to acknowledge that the Government's next published forecast would include a downward revision to growth in 1999.

Bank of England

Mr. Maude: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact on the market's perception of the independence of the Bank of England as regards UK interest rates of his statements on the level of UK interest rates. [55842]

Ms Hewitt: The Chancellor does not comment on the month to month decisions of the Bank of England's Monetary Policy Committee. Market expectations of inflation remain close to the inflation target and long-term interest rates are at the lowest levels in 35 years.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he had with the Governor of the Bank of England in the month prior to 8 October. [55840]

Ms Hewitt: The Chancellor has regular discussions with the Governor every month.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent discussions have taken place between the Treasury and the Bank of England on the circumstances in which action would be taken under section 19 of the Bank of England Act 1998 relating to emergency powers. [56349]

Ms Hewitt: The Chancellor has no plans to use the emergency powers under section 19 of the Bank of England Act 1998.

Pre-Budget Report

Mr. Maude: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will publish his pre-Budget report. [55845]

Mr. Gordon Brown: I refer the right hon. Member to the reply I gave on 21 October 1998, Official Report, column 111, to my hon. Friend the Member for Hove (Mr. Caplin).

Savings Ratio

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his assessment of the impact on the savings ratio arising from (a) the abolition of repayment dividend tax credits and (b) the abolition of TESSAs and PEPs. [55723]

Ms Hewitt: Changing the tax treatment will encourage savings on a sustainable basis in the long term, promoting economic prosperity and rebalancing tax relief towards those who need it.

European Single Currency

Mr. Gill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer at what rate of exchange each of the 11 countries will join the European single currency on 1 January 1999. [55943]

Ms Hewitt: The bilateral conversion rates between currencies joining in the first wave were pre-announced in a declaration by the Finance Ministers and central bank governors of participating member states on 2 May 1998. Copies of the declaration have been placed in the Library of the House of Commons. Details of the rates are also available on the Treasury's Internet Web-site. These bilateral rates will be used to determine conversion rates against the euro on 31 December 1998.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what criteria will be used to establish the rate of exchange at which the UK could join the single European currency. [55946]

Ms Hewitt: If and when the UK joined the single currency, the rate at which Sterling would join would be decided then, in conjunction with our European partners. The rate would need to be compatible with economic fundamentals in the UK and with sustainable convergence between the UK and other euro-area economies.

Monetary Policy Committee

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will review the membership of the Monetary Policy Committee. [55792]

Ms Hewitt: The members of the Monetary Policy Committee have fixed terms of office which have been publicly announced. The Chancellor has no intention of changing these. Two members' terms are due for renewal in June 1999.

Population Censuses

Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list those 1901–1991 decennial population censuses (a) for which the then Registrar General did not promise informants that the householders' forms would be treated as confidential for 100 years and (b) for which the Lord Chancellor has not granted, and is not intending to grant, the Registrar General statutory permission for an extended 100-year retention of the census forms. [55824]

Ms Hewitt: In the period 1901–1991, only the 1981 and 1991 Census forms have contained specific assurances from the Registrar General for England and Wales with regard to the 100 year closure period, as specified under the terms of the Lord Chancellor's Instrument 12 of the Public Records Act 1958.

Access to the census returns prior to 1920 is governed by the Public Records Act 1958, section 5(1). They are closed to public inspection for 100 years by virtue of Lord Chancellor's Instrument No 12 of June 1966. The returns for 1901 and 1911 are in the custody of the Public Record Office.

Access to the census returns of 1921, 1951 and 1961 is covered by the Census Act 1920, as amended by the Census (Confidentiality) Act 1991. The Public Records Act 1958 section 3(4) permits those public records selected for permanent preservation to be retained for more than 30 years by the person responsible for them, with the Lord Chancellor's approval. In the case of census returns that person is the Registrar General, and permission is sought from the Lord Chancellor for the retention of census records every 10 years. The Lord Chancellor has granted permission for the census records for 1921, 1951 and 1961 to be retained by the Registrar General. The census returns for 1931 were destroyed by fire, and no census was taken in 1941.

The census returns for 1971, 1981 and 1991 are similarly covered by the Census Act 1920, and the Census (Confidentiality) Act 1991. No retention instrument is yet necessary for the returns for 1971, 1981 and 1991 since the records are less than 30 years old.

HOME DEPARTMENT

General Pinochet

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the application for the extradition of General Pinochet from the United Kingdom. [55754]

Mr. Straw: Senator Pinochet was arrested on 16 October 1998 on the basis of a provisional warrant issued under section 8 of the Extradition Act 1989 by the Bow Street Magistrate, in response to a request transmitted to the United Kingdom police via Interpol, from the Spanish authorities. Under the European Convention on Extradition, the Spanish authorities have 40 days—until 25 November in this case—to submit a formal extradition request. If the deadline is not met, Senator Pinochet will be discharged.

I will consider the formal extradition request against the requirements of the Extradition Act 1989. I must decide whether to issue an Authority to Proceed, exercising my discretion under the Act. I will consider, among a range of issues, whether the offences are extradition crimes; whether the request is properly authenticated; whether the offences are of a political character; and any compassionate circumstances. This will not be a political decision; I am exercising my statutory responsibilities.

If I decide to issue an Authority to Proceed, the Spanish request will pass to the United Kingdom courts, where it will be considered, in the first instance, at Bow Street Magistrates' Court in a committal hearing, with routes of appeal to the Divisional Court and the House of Lords. If the request passes through the court stages, it reverts to me to take a final decision on surrender, again governed by the Extradition Act 1989. If I decide not to issue an Authority to Proceed, Senator Pinochet will be discharged.

Senator Pinochet's legal representatives have now lodged a writ of habeas corpus against his detention. The hearing has been adjourned until Monday 26 October.

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the charges against General Pinochet contained in the extradition application by the Spanish judicial authorities. [55757]

Mr. Straw: The formal extradition request for Senator Pinochet, which must be submitted by the Spanish authorities within 40 days of his arrest, will contain particulars of the offences of which he is accused under Spanish law. These will be converted into equivalent charges under English law when the formal request is considered. The provisional warrant issued by the Bow Street Magistrate on 16 October for Senator Pinochet's arrest cites the offence of murder; I will re-examine this in the light of the formal extradition request.

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what date General Pinochet last arrived in the United Kingdom. [55755]

Mr. Straw: Senator Pinochet last arrived in the United Kingdom on 22 September 1998.

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on (a) how many occasions and (b) what dates General Pinochet has visited the United Kingdom in the last five years. [55756]

Mr. Straw: I understand that Senator Pinochet has visited the United Kingdom five times in the last five years. In addition to his current visit, I understand that he visited in February and June 1994, October 1995 and October 1996.

Overseas Visits (Advisers)

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the overseas visits between 1 July and 19 October on which Ministers have been accompanied by special advisers and, for each trip, (a) the name of the adviser, (b) the class and cost of travel booked for the adviser, (c) the class of travel actually used by the adviser and (d) the accommodation and ancillary costs for the adviser. [55997]

Mr. Straw: Neither my Ministers nor I have been accompanied overseas by Special Advisers between 1 July and 19 October 1998.

Prisoners (Health Care)

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to publish the report of the Joint Prison Service/Department of Health Working Group on the future organisation of prisoners' health care. [55830]

Mr. George Howarth: Ministers have been working closely with the Prison Service on these issues. I expect to receive the report of the Joint Prison Service/Department of Health Working Group on the future organisation of prisoners' health care very shortly. The Government will consider the group's findings and recommendations and make an announcement in due course.

Temazepam

Mrs. Irene Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many export licences were issued, and for what quantity, of Temazepam (a) capsules and (b) tablets in each year between 1990 and 1998; [55183]

(2) how many Temazepam (a) tablets and (b) capsules were manufactured in the United Kingdom in each year since 1992. [55163]

Mr. George Howarth: Records for production of Temazepam, a drug contained in Schedule 3 of the Misuse of Drugs Regulations 1985, are required to be kept for a period of two years only. Export licence numbers are not routinely recorded as most consignments are covered by blanket export licences.

The following information is available from existing records:

	1996	1997
Export
Tablets	47,150	43,192

Young Offenders (Drugs)

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what changes his Department has made to the requirement for young offenders to be tested for drugs; and what plans he has to require young offenders taking drugs to undertake treatment programmes. [55139]

Mr. George Howarth: The Crime and Disorder Act 1998 introduced a new community sentence aimed at drug misusing offenders who commit offences to fund their drugs habit: the drug treatment and testing order. It is available to the courts in respect of offenders aged 16 or over and is currently being piloted under the management of the probation service in Liverpool, Croydon and Gloucestershire. Offenders who are considered to be susceptible to treatment and who express willingness to do so, will have to undergo treatment for their drug misuse, monitored by random and compulsory testing. Plans are also in hand to pilot the new order in Scotland.

The Act also introduces the action plan order for 10 to 17 year-olds, which is a new community sentence aimed at addressing young offenders' offending behaviour. An action plan order will be tailored for the individual young offender and may include elements such as, for example, drug treatment programmes.

In 1995, the Prison Service introduced a programme of mandatory drug testing. In this scheme all offenders, including young offenders, may be tested for drug misuse. The Prison Service is currently addressing access to, as well as availability and quality of, treatment programmes for young offenders held in Prison Service establishments. This is a key element of the Prison Service's Drug Strategy launched in May this year.

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) which (i) communities and (ii) organisations in (a) Scotland, (b) Cornwall, (c) Wales, (d) Northern Ireland, (e) elsewhere in the United Kingdom, (f) Isle of Man and (g) the Channel Islands, have been invited to submit evidence to the Government in preparation for its report to the Council of Europe on progress made by the United Kingdom under the Framework Convention for the Protection of National Minorities; [55447]

(2) what measures he has taken to ensure that national minorities are able to submit comments on the Government's report to the Council of Europe on progress made by the United Kingdom since ratifying the Framework Convention for the Protection of National Minorities. [55448]

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what definitions are used of (a) culture, (b) ethnic and (c) ethnicity in his Department's work to support its ratification of the Council of Europe Framework Convention for the Protection of National Minorities; [55446]

(2) which groups are currently under consideration for acceptance by his Department as a National Minority in addition to those national minorities already recognised by his Department as existing within the United Kingdom under the Framework Convention for the Protection of National Minorities; [55449]

(3) which national minorities his Department has identified within the United Kingdom for the purposes of its ratification of the Framework Convention for the Protection of National Minorities. [55450]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: "National Minority" is not a legally defined term within the United Kingdom. For the purposes of the Convention, our report will be based on the definition of racial group as set out in the Race Relations Act 1976. This defines a racial group as "a group of persons defined by colour, race, nationality (including citizenship) or ethnic or national origins".

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what timetable he has set for the consultation and report on progress made by the United Kingdom since the ratification of the Council of Europe Framework Convention for the Protection of National Minorities. [55445]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: We are due to report on progress under the Convention by May 1999. To meet this deadline, we have invited interested parties to suggest issues which might be included in our report and will consult them early next year on a draft.

Criminal Injuries Compensation Board

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what steps he is taking to encourage speedier responses to claims by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board; [55150]

(2) what is the current average time that the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board takes to deal with a claim. [55149]

Mr. Michael: There are no meaningful average waiting times applicable to criminal injuries compensation claims. Applications range from the very straightforward ones, in which a decision may be issued within weeks, through to exceptionally complex cases where it may take a number of years for the injury to be fairly assessed. It is sometimes impossible to assess fully the level of permanent injury for some considerable time, and this can contribute to delay. Interim payments are usually made in such cases to assist the victim return in the shorter term.

The work of the board is confined to the clearance of cases outstanding under the 1990 common law damages scheme at 31 March 1996. There were then some 110,000 such cases. By 30 September 1998 the board had reduced this figure to 17,500, most awaiting an appeal or other hearing. The aim is to clear these cases by 31 March 2000.

The tariff-based scheme, effective for all claims received on or after 1 April 1996, is operated by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority (CICA), with appeals being dealt with by the independent Criminal Injuries Compensation Appeals Panel (CICAP). The new scheme was designed to be simpler and faster. CICA's target is to issue a first decision in 90 per cent. of claims within 12 months of receipt. In 1997–98, achievement was 86 per cent. CICAP's target is to resolve appeals in 80 per cent. of cases within six months. In 1997–98, achievement was 82 per cent.

Immigration Service

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what change there was in the number of front-line immigration officers between January 1988 and January 1998. [55654]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: On 1 January 1988, the Immigration Service employed a total of 1,350 permanent immigration officers for its combined on-entry and enforcement operations. On 1 January 1998, the total figure was 1,976, of which 1,764 were in the Immigration Service Ports Directorate and 212 were in the Immigration Service Enforcement Directorate. In addition, the Assistant Immigration Officer grade was introduced in 1991. On 1 January 1998, there were 154 Assistant Immigration Officers, of whom 129 were in the Immigration Service Ports Directorate and 25 were in the Immigration Service Enforcement Directorate.

Drug Smuggling

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the (a) direct and (b) indirect cost of illegal drug smuggling to the United Kingdom in the last year for which figures are available. [55655]

Mr. George Howarth: Estimates of the costs of problematic drug misuse were produced by Professor Michael Hough of South Bank University and included in the Home Office Drug Prevention Initiative report "Arrest Referral: Emerging Lessons from Research", published in April 1998.

The total annual cost was put at between £3.2 billion and £3.7 billion, made up of £100 million health costs, £600 million unemployment and sickness benefit payments, £500 million criminal justice system costs and costs of between £2 billion—£2.5 billion to victims of drug-related crime.

These estimates do not distinguish between costs arising from drugs smuggled illegally and drugs produced in this country, although other studies suggest that the overwhelming majority of the drug misused in this country are produced overseas.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Growth Promoters

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many infringements of the regulations concerning the growth promoter Olaquindox have been recorded in each year since 1987. [54663]

Mr. Rooker: Olaquindox is a growth promoter permitted for use in feed for piglets up to 4 months of age under the requirements of Council Directive 70/524/EEC as amended. The Royal Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain enforces the relevant provisions of the Directive in Great Britain and routinely monitors the use of zootechnical additives in feedingstuffs. There are no records of infringements specific to the use of Olaquindox.

Persistent Inquirers

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which of his Department's agencies have procedures to identify persistent inquirers for information. [53949]

Mr. Morley: The Department's Executive Agencies are the responsibility of their Chief Executives. I have asked them to reply to the hon. Member direct.

Letter from G. K. Bruce to Mr. Adrian Sanders, dated 22 October 1998:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply to your question about procedures to identify persistent enquirers for information.

The Pesticides Safety Directorate aims to respond helpfully to all enquirers for information and has no procedures in place to identify persistent enquirers.

Letter from P. I. Stanley to Mr. Adrian Sanders, dated 22 October 1998:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply, in respect of the Central Science Laboratory (CSL), to your question concerning procedures to identify persistent enquiries for information.

Requests for information under the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information are routinely monitored, but it has not been found necessary to introduce specific procedures to identify persistent enquiries.

Letter from Dr. J. M. Rutter to Mr. Adrian Sanders, dated 8 October 1998:

The Minister has asked me to reply to your question about which of his Department's agencies have procedures to identify persistent enquirers for information.

Although the Veterinary Medicines Directorate (VMD) monitors all requests for information under the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information, it has not been found necessary to introduce specific procedures for persistent inquirers. The VMD follows the guidance on interpretation of the Code issued by the Office of Public Service.

Letter from Johnston McNeill to Mr. Adrian Sanders, dated 22 October 1998:

As Chief Executive of the Meat Hygiene Service (MHS), your question to the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food enquiring whether agencies have procedures to identify persistent enquirers for information has been passed to me to respond on behalf of this Executive Agency.

The MHS receives many requests for information from various sources and aims to respond helpfully to all such requests. The Agency does not have any formal procedures to identify persistent enquirers.

Letter from T. W. A. Little to Mr. Adrian Sanders, dated 22 October 1998:

The Minister has asked me to reply to your question on the procedures in place at the Veterinary Laboratories Agency (VLA) to identify persistent enquirers for information.

I can confirm that the VLA has a process in place for tracking all enquiries addressed to the Agency.

Letter from Sarah Nason to Mr. Adrian Sanders, dated 22 October 1998:

Mr. Nick Brown has asked me to reply, in respect of the Farming and Rural Conservation Agency (FRCA), to your question about which of his Department's agencies have procedures to identify persistent enquirers for information.

In accordance with FRCA's Charter and Statement of Service Standards correspondence is recorded and monitored locally. FRCA Directors report on a quarterly basis to the Agency's Management Board so that service improvements and opportunities for efficiencies can be identified. This process should ensure the identification of persistent enquirers.

Letter from P. W. Greig-Smith to Mr. Adrian Sanders, dated 22 October 1998:

As Agency Chief Executive, I am responding to your question to the Minister of Agriculture in relation to the Centre for Environment, Fisheries & Aquaculture Science (CEFAS).

With regard to the operation of monitoring of persistent inquirers for information, CEFAS receives many requests from individuals and organisations seeking information. These are monitored as required by the Agency's obligations under the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information, and the Environmental Information Regulations 1992.

There are no specific procedures by which people who make frequent requests are identified, but any such cases would be evident from inspection of the records when annual summaries are prepared.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 317

SESSION 1997–98

27th July—22nd October 1998

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instruments etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker's rulings and statements'.

Other contributions by Speaker and deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates and Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates, etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Comm = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
